Commission to fight OMA charge

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix County Commission is going to fight any state charges that its Personnel Committee violated the Michigan Open Meetings Act.

Commission Chair Phil Johnson said since Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur reported that the committee possibly violated the act to the state Attorney General's office, the county commission has retained attorney Pete Patterson, of Grand Rapids.

"This can be a criminal matter. That is the problem," Johnson said of the county's rational in fighting allegations of an Open Meeting Act Violation. A violation of the Open Meeting's Act can result in a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000.

At issue is a late February meeting the three member Personnel Committee had with former Charlevoix Chief Assistant Prosecutor John Jarema. The committee — composed of county commission members Carl Price, James Behling and Don Smith — met with Jarema the day before its regularly scheduled meeting in the Charlevoix County Building to discuss why he was fired by Kur.

The committee did not announce the meeting within the required 18 hours as stated in the Open Meeting Act and asked a representative of the Charlevoix County Clerk's office to leave the meeting.

Kur discovered the meeting was taking place only after she happened upon it while walking down the hall in the county building. She blasted those involved in this meeting at the Charlevoix County Commission's March 13 meeting, calling it a "back-handed secret approach to government."

Kur also reported the possible violation of the act to the Michigan Attorney General's Office. A representative of the Attorney General said the report is still being reviewed.

Johnson said he believes the county committee did not violate the law because it only makes recommendations to the commission.

However, the Open Meeting's Act defines a public body as "any state or local legislative governing body, including a board, commission, committee, subcommittee, authority or council...."

Patterson said he will be working with the Attorney General's office on this matter and will not make any comments to the press at this time.

At the County Commission's March 29 meeting, Smith addressed the allegations in a prepared statement saying, "I would like to say that in all my experiences as a county commissioner this recent fiasco is the absolute worst. The events of the March 13 meeting were uncalled for and could have been avoided with just the slightest bit of candor. After the Attorney General reviews the facts and looks at previous Attorney General opinions, I'm totally confident the matter will be dropped."

Smith further said, "I've suffered a great deal of mental anguish and my public services reputation has been tarnished. One newspaper wants me prosecuted so that I will become an example to other potential lawbreakers. Another paper says that I should be ashamed of myself because I violated the public trust. The media questions my ability to make decisions on public issues because a friend of mine is the father-in-law of a terminated county employee. I'm singled out as the only member of the personnel committee to have my former career some way connected to this allegation.

"Mr. Chairman, you deserve better. The board deserves better and more important the public deserves better. I trust that you will lead the board though this morass with the help of our legal counsel, Peter Patterson, and that we will get to the bottom of this obfuscation. I hope that when all is said and done, there will be a way to repair the damage."

In response to this, Kur said what we have is "a commissioner who is unhappy about being called on the carpet by the newspaper for his actions."

She further said it is unthinkable that no one on the commission is going to admit that they made a mistake.

"If they didn't do anything wrong, would this mean they would do this again?" she questioned.

Kur added she would be as vigilant as she is now with this matter if she discovered any public body in Charlevoix County violated the Open Meetings Act.

"The public needs to stand up and say what they think about this behavior and the use of their money," she said. "I hope, as a result of this, that all public bodies in Charlevoix County know they can't operate this way as long as I am prosecutor."

Kur added she would be happy to answer any questions about the Open Meeting Act members of the public or public officials may have.

NMH provides information on sleeping

SLEEP

when he/she should be fully alert and awake. The condition, which can occur even after getting enough nighttime sleep, can be a sign of an underlying medical condition or sleep disorder such as narcolepsy or sleep apnea. These problems can often be treated and symptoms should be discussed with a physician. Daytime sleepiness can be dangerous and puts a person at risk for drowsy driving, injury and illness and can impair mental abilities, emotions and performance.

Myth: Health problems such as obesity, diabetes, hypertension and depression are unrelated to the amount and quality of a person's sleep.

Fact: Studies have found a relationship between the quantity and quality of one's sleep and many health problems. For example, insufficient sleep affects growth hormone secretion that is linked to obesity, as the amount of hormone secretion decreases, the chance for weight gain increases. Blood pressure usually falls during the sleep cycle, however, interrupted sleep can adversely affect this normal decline, leading to hypertension and cardiovascular problems. Research has also shown that insufficient sleep impairs the body's ability to use insulin which can lead to the onset of diabetes. More and more scientific studies are showing correlation's between poor and insufficient sleep and disease.

Myth: The older you get, the fewer hours of sleep you need.

Fact: Sleep experts recommend a range of seven to nine hours of sleep for the average adult. While sleep patterns change as we age, the amount of sleep we need generally does not. Older people may wake more frequently through the night and may actually get less nighttime sleep, but their sleep need is no less than younger adults. Because they may sleep less during the night, older people tend to sleep more during the day. Naps planned as part of a regular daily routine can be useful in promoting wakefulness after the person awakens.

Myth: During sleep your brain rests.

Fact: The body rests, however, the brain remains active, gets "recharged" and still controls many body functions including breathing. When we sleep, we typically drift between two states, rapid eye movement (REM) and non-REM, in 90 minute cycles. Non-REM sleep has four stages with distinct features, ranging from stage one drowsiness, when one can be easily awakened, to "deep sleep" stages three and four, when awakenings are more difficult and where the most positive and restorative effects of sleep occur. However, even in the deepest non-REM sleep, our minds can still process information. REM sleep is an active sleep where dreams occur, breathing and heart rate increase and become irregular, muscles relax and eyes move back and forth under the eyelids.

Myth: If you wake up in the middle of the night, it is best to lie in bed, count sheep or toss and turn until you eventually fall back asleep.

Fact: Waking up in the middle of the night and not being able to go back to sleep is a symptom of insomnia. Relaxing imagery or thoughts may help to induce sleep more than counting sheep, which some researchers suggest may be more distracting than relaxing. Whichever technique is used, go to another room and engage in a relaxing activity such as listening to music or reading. Return to bed when you feel sleepy. Avoid watching the clock.

Recycling program to expand due to millage

Editor's note: This is a third in a series of stories on millages in Charlevoix County.

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix County's recycling millage money will soon be used to further expand the range of recycling services available to county users.

In 2001, the millage raised $175,014 to fund recycling programs county-wide. These include recycling stations on Beaver Island, in Boyne City, East Jordan, the city of Charlevoix, Boyne Falls and Walloon Lake.

The millage levies .15 mill a year for four years. For a homeowner whose taxable property value is $100,000, the program costs $19.95 a year.

Shirley Roloff, a member of the recycling committee and a Charlevoix County Commissioner, said in 2001 the recycling program cost $90,000 leaving a surplus of $68,159.

She said when the millage was passed, the committee was estimating its costs of operation to be on the high side and can now add more programs to its recycling effort.

Larry Levengood, a member of the Charlevoix County Recycling Committee, said the majority of the committee's funds have been used to pay Waste Management, their hauling contractor, and the Emmet County Transfer Station where the recyclable materials are handled.

Costs associated with the transfer station may increase as its source of cheap labor, the Pellston correctional facility, is no longer operating.

At the Charlevoix recycling site, located at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, Waste Management makes a cardboard pick up two times a week.

The committee attributes the frequency of cardboard pick ups, as compared to the once a week pick up of glass, tin and newspaper, to businesses using the facility.

Because of this, a cardboard compactor will be added at the East Jordan site to accommodate county businesses.

Another new program county recyclers can look forward to is a household hazardous waste collection day. Roloff said this will likely take place in the fall of 2002.

The committee also hopes to add office paper to the list of commodities it accepts at the Charlevoix location.

Other costs the recycling budget incurred in 2001 were capital expenses including the concrete slab at the Charlevoix recycling site and the fencing that surrounds it.

Levengood highlighted the one place the committee doesn't spend a lot of money — labor. The Charlevoix station is not staffed and he said most of the work at the recycling stations is done by volunteers.

However, by not having an attendant, unbroken down boxes have gotten through as has colored glass, which the Charlevoix site doesn't accept.

So, both Roloff and Levengood asked on behalf of the recycling committee that recycling station users pay special attention to deposit items into the appropriate bins and break down boxes so the program can continue to run smoothly.

Barcenas pleads involuntary manslaughter

DEATH

good reason. There were a lot of evidentiary issues in the case. I don't think we had any strong evidence that he woke up that morning and intended to kill that baby, which is needed for first degree murder," Kur explained.

Barcenas was initially charged with first degree felony murder in Kuzmik's death. But Kur said that in order to convict Barcenas of that charge she would have to prove that he did, beyond a reasonable doubt, intend to kill Kuzmik.

"I weighed his version of how her death happened, how I would counter that and if it would meet the burden of proof, beyond a reasonable doubt. And my opinion is no," she said.

Kur highlighted three evidentiary issues that made a first degree murder conviction unlikely.

One of the issues is a language barrier; Barcenas' native tongue is Spanish and his English speaking skills are limited. She said this could call into question statements he initially made that supported a first degree murder charge.

"The language issue could create a reasonable doubt in a trial and I didn't want to come out of it with nothing," she said.

Second, Kur said there were no eyewitnesses at the scene. Renee, the child's mother, was not home at the time the incident occurred.

And lastly, there were uncooperative key witnesses in the case, including the child's mother, who Kur said, "clammed up."

At the March 29 plea hearing, Barcenas told Judge Richard Pajtas, Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court Judge, the nature of the events leading up to his guilty plea.

"In the morning after I got up from bed, I fell down the stairs with the girl. She was on the floor and I picked her up and tried to help her; she was not breathing right, I think. I struck her in the stomach; I was not feeling right, what I wanted to tell her was to breathe," Barcenas said through Ruth Gilbert, his court appointed interpreter.

Pajtas then asked whether Barcenas used excessive force when he struck the child in the stomach. Barcenas responded that he had.

An autopsy was performed at Blodgett Hospital in Grand Rapids on Nov. 13, 2001. The autopsy showed the cause of the child's death to be blunt force trauma to her mid-section.

The incident occurred at the Kuzmik family residence, apartment 704 of the Pine Cove Apartments at 1001 May Street in the city of Charlevoix. Barcenas was the live-in boyfriend of Kuzmik's mother.

There were three children living in apartment 704. In a previous interview, Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson said the other two children are between the ages of 5 and 10.

Barcenas' prior record shows he was charged for driving under the influence of alcohol. Halverson said before Nov. 12 the city police department had never been called to the apartment.

On Nov. 15 Barcenas was arraigned on the first degree murder charge. At the arraignment Kur said there is a likelihood he is a Mexican national in the United States illegally and that when he first arrived in the United States he went to Florida where he spent four to five years. Barcenas then traveled to Michigan and has been here approximately one year.

Barcenas is being held in Charlevoix County Jail pending sentencing. The guilty plea has been sent to the probation department for pre-sentencing investigation and report.

Sentencing is scheduled to take place at 9 a.m. April 19 in 33rd Circuit Court at the Charlevoix County Building located in the city of Charlevoix.

Involuntary manslaughter is punishable in Michigan by a maximum of 15 years in prison and/or a sizable fine.

Pajtas explained to Barcenas that in entering a guilty plea he waives his right to a trial before the court or before a jury and any appeal would be by application for leave, not by right. Pajtas explained he would have to get permission to appeal.

Charlevoix's great Inn Hotel, 1898-1941

By DAVID L. MILES
Charlevoix Historical Society

In 1892, the year the first train chugged into a new Charlevoix depot, the Chicago and West Michigan line that owned the railway announced plans for a great hotel to be located on a triangular piece of farmland where Mercer Boulevard meets the Petoskey highway.

Old plat maps indicate the only piece of land fitting that description is now the seventh and ninth tees and eighth green of the municipal golf course. The hotel would have its own special station down by Lake Charlevoix.

But the next few years found the idea changed. A second station would have been superfluous. The company's hotel plans shifted south onto the 4 acre terrace behind the depot. Where exactly was it located? If one drives the stretch of East Dixon, the stop sign at Mercer indicates the spot that looked, a little to the left across the road, at the front door. The Inn took up the entire length of the block from Chicago Avenue north to Cherry/C & O Club Drive.

What went up was beyond the most vivid imagination of anyone in Charlevoix. A postcard written in 1908 stated it well: "...Stopping here a while, it is the grandest place you most ever saw." The Inn was considered to be one of the finest resort hotels in the United States, comparable to the mighty Grand on Mackinac Island.

But the initial attempt at reaching that status was catastrophic. In 1897, the company put pressure on the builders to hurry construction. To save time, the plastering of the upper floors was begun before completion of the structural work on the lower portion. Too much weight at the top can be risky. Given a few more days the building would have been sound. But on Oct. 5, Mother Nature in the form of a 60-mile-an-hour northwest wind intervened.

The buffeting of the wind caused the top-heavy north end to shudder, sway and collapse toward the center, which pulled the south end over and the whole thing folded in upon itself like a house of cards. Two men were thrown off the roof and killed instantly. A team of horses was buried by falling walls. Their driver jumped free, but couldn't save the animals. Many workmen were injured.

The debris was cleared and the project resumed at once, in time for the huge building to open for the 1898 season. It was rebuilt with lumber from the Central Lake area that cost $5 per thousand feet. Three above-street stories on the Mercer Boulevard side, four very tall stories on the Lake Charlevoix side, it rose in a grand operatic statement via a sweeping cement staircase behind the depot onto a huge terrace, centered by a stone fountain, that led to another high stairway into the hotel lobby. This entrance was unique in that a tall mirror met one on the landing with a reflection of Lake Charlevoix in it. This gave the impression one was walking both from and into an infinite vista.

The Inn had 250 rooms. It stretched to 525 feet (only 25 feet shy of the height of the Washington Monument). The lineal feet of its porches totaled a quarter of a mile. It had its own Western Union office. Nearly 120 people worked in it, 50 of them housed in their own dormitory. At one time, pioneer settler John Dixon's house to the north, currently owned by Dr. James Gels, housed many of the kitchen staff. Its initial advertising claimed it could accommodate 800, but that was scaled back to a more realistic 500 within a few years. The dining room, which occupied the entire north half of the main floor, was capable of seating 500.

This boastful advertising was not unusual in its day. A postcard with a view from the east gave the impression there were no railroad tracks or a depot below the hotel, just uninterrupted access to the lake. A brochure drawing elongated the Inn to overpower the depot, even puling the stone fountains years away from the east entry stairway to stretch the view even further. It brought Lake Charlevoix right up to lap at the railroad tracks, eliminating Depot Beach.

Resorters could disembark from the train, go up to the hotel, and never once, should they choose, see the town. Those more venturesome got on the small passenger steamer Minnie S. at a dock on Depot Beach. For a dime, they chugged around into Round Lake, along with Belvedere resort passengers picked up on the way, who paid only a nickel. The Minnie S. was captained by George Smith, grandfather of Scraphook contributor Cynthia Postmus, and it was named after her grandmother. Oftentimes he had his pet bear along for the ride and unmuzzled to boot.

The Inn also had its own large indoor heated pool, 105,000 gallons in capacity, called a bathing pavilion. It was located on the beach just a few yards south of the depot. In those early years, cold water bathing was considered to be unhealthy and the lakes were often very late warming up for comfortable swimming. The townspeople appreciated the fact the pool was open to the public for a nominal fee and could rent bathing suits and changing rooms. The Pere Marquette railroad, which had bought out the C. & W. M. line, eventually sold the pool to the Chicago Club, and it was torn down in 1926.

The Inn hosted championship tennis matches on its courts. The great Bill Tilden was said to have participated. A young Ernest Hemingway often came to Charlevoix to play tennis both at the Inn and on the Belvedere Resort courts, along with baseball out at Loeb Farms.

Forty-odd years was all the great Inn lasted. Train travel gradually gave way to the automobile, the Depression sapped the nation's energy, and the owners realized it would not be economically viable to continue. The summer-only hotel was a child of the railroad era, dependent on careless travelers who came and went along the rails. It could provide virtually no room for parking. A 50-car garage erected in 1922 to the west on Cherry Street alleviated the problem somewhat, but was hardly sufficient for a hotel that size. The eyesore rotted away for years and is now the site of townhouses.

So the wonder of the age became a victim of obsolescence and a changing world. An auction disposed of the furnishings and interior decor, and the mighty Inn fell to the wrecker's hammer in 1941.

Coast Guard says city to be without ship

SHIP

Acacia is decommissioned is to make sure they are present and on-line before the Acacia leaves Charlevoix, McCann said.

The crew of the Acacia will be transferred to other military assignments.

Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner said he has not received any official information that the city will be without a Coast Guard ship.

"We are still going to check on things," he said.

Congressman for Charlevoix Bart Stupak said he has also not been able to get any official word on this decision.

"We tried to track it down today (Monday) and have not gotten a definite answer," he said. "We can't get any higher-ups (in the Coast Guard) to say anything."

Stupak did say it looks dire for a buoy tender in Charlevoix, because the Coast Guard will be able to save the taxpayers a lot of money with only two buoy tenders on the Great Lakes instead of three.

But, he added, even the decision to decommission the Acacia can be changed by 2006.

"Have I given up all hope? No," Stupak said.

> "Have I given up all hope? No."
> Bart Stupak,
> U.S. congressman representing Charlevoix

He said while a buoy tender may not be stationed in Charlevoix, there are other Coast Guard vessels which may be a good fit for the city.

"I'm actually meeting with the Coast Guard this weekend. We will certainly do whatever we can to make sure Charlevoix is well represented in the future with any Coast Guard plans," Stupak said.

Whatever decision is made on the ship has no impact on the Charlevoix Coast Guard station.

East Park data to be presented to council

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The city of Charlevoix's plans to renovate East Park are moving forward.

The city's park planning firm, Pollack Design Associates of Ann Arbor, will soon present goals and objectives related to upcoming changes in Charlevoix's East Park to city council and to the downtown development authority.

Mike Wiesner, city manager, said the information compiled by the Pollack group will most likely come in some time this week, then the joint meeting will be scheduled. The goals and objectives are based on information gathered at the public input meeting that took place Dec. 6, 2001.

Wiesner said the development authority and council must agree with the goals and objectives before sending Pollack to the planning phase. Wiesner anticipates the planning team returning with three to four alternate designs for the park.

These alternatives will then come back to the development authority, council and the community at a public input meeting. The date of this public meeting will be scheduled after the alternatives have been drafted.

However, the public will soon see the first big change to the park — the removal of the Wharfside building.

Wiesner said the grant agreement with the Department of Natural Resources requires the building to be torn down by July 1, but the city hopes to have the demolition complete by May 27.

He added that the building, which is currently occupied by two businesses, North Seas Gallery and Kilwin's, will be vacated by May 1. The city will be advertising for demolition bids within the next week.

Wiesner said marina changes will not be decided until after the city has a clear direction of where land side renovations are headed.

Sewer project on hold

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Plans to extend the city of Charlevoix's sewer to the site of the new Charlevoix High School in Marion Township are on hold.

In a memo authored by Mike Wiesner, city manager, he informed city council the city has opted to hold all discussions with Corvette Construction, the Grawn based company contracted to extend the sewer, regarding the construction timeline.

The city will move forward once it gets the green light from the Attorney General's Office indicating the project permit issued by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) is valid.

The city expects to receive a finding from the attorney general in seven to 10 days.

The permit's validity was called into question March 27, when the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association filed a contested case with the MDEQ.

In a letter written by Karen Ferguson of Olson and Bzdok, the Traverse City law firm representing the environmental group, to Wiesner and city council, she urged the city to hold off on awarding contracts and getting to work, claiming the permit is no

Township holds off wind monitor vote...again

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A special use permit request for a wind monitoring tower proposed for Eveline Township faced another setback.

In an effort to follow proper protocol and escape litigation, last night the Eveline Township Board remanded the special use permit request made by Bay Windpower of Suttons Bay, Grand Rapids and Mackinaw City, for a wind monitoring tower, back to the township planning commission to face a second public hearing.

"The procedure followed by the planning commission did not follow legal requirements. In the fact of a known defect in procedure, my advice is that the request goes back to the planning commission, where the defect arose, and fix it," Bryan Graham, township attorney, said.

The board's decision was made after the request had been tabled at two of its previous meetings.

Graham found the error just before the meeting, April 9, when he looked over the planning commission's minutes from its Dec. 13, 2001 public hearing.

At that meeting, the planning commission voted to recommend that the township board approve Bay Windpower's special use permit request.

However, Graham said the minutes failed to outline the findings of fact the planning commission may or may not have addressed at the meeting.

The findings of fact compare the use proposed in a special use permit request to the township's zoning ordinance adopted in October of 2001.

"Then apply those findings of fact and if the proposed use meets all of those standards the special use permit must be granted," Graham explained to the board and the audience of over 40 township residents.

Man arrested for fleeing from police officer

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

A 21-year-old Charlevoix man was arrested around 11 a.m., April 4 on the 300 block of Burns Street for fleeing and eluding a police officer.

According to the report of the incident, Charlevoix Police Officer Jim Schlappi said he was traveling south on Petoskey Avenue when he observed a vehicle speeding north on Petoskey Avenue.

Schlappi turned his patrol vehicle around and activated his overhead lights as the vehicle turned left onto Lewis Street. Schlappi said, in the report, the vehicle's driver did not seem to be stopping, so the officer turned on his vehicle's siren and called in the pursuit to dispatch.

The man's vehicle continued down Lewis Street to Auld Street and turned right onto Crouter Street. Schlappi said the pursuit continued to Burns Street while the man's vehicle drove through two stop signs without stopping.

The vehicle ended up on top of a snowbank in the front yard of a residence on the 300 block of Burns Street. The officer said there were tire skid marks leading to the vehicle's final resting spot.

When Schlappi arrived, the man had not gotten out of the vehicle yet. As he exited the vehicle, the officer was waiting with his weapon drawn.

Schlappi said the man asked him, "What is going on?" The man told the officer he did not hear the police siren or see the overhead lights of the patrol car that was behind him.

However, the man was arrested. During a search of his vehicle, the officer found a "baggie" containing a residual amount of suspected marijuana.

According to Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson, there was not enough of the alleged drug to get a charge for it.

The man will be arraigned at 11 a.m., April 16 in the Charlevoix District Court.

Fleeing and eluding a police officer is a felony offense with a sentence of 5 years in jail and/or a $1,000 fine.

Charlevoix girl to represent 4-H

Lifelong Charlevoix resident Michael Sayward, 14, spent most of her spring break taking care of her rabbits, guinea pigs, goats and horses and gearing up to build a cake that, when finished, will stand over 6 feet tall.

Readers whose mouths are watering in anticipation of tasting a slice of the monster pastry will have to keep dreaming. This cake is a parade float made of a camper, wood, nails and pretty, inedible details.

The float she and other kids are working on will represent northern Michigan 4-H clubs in several festival parades this summer including: Traverse City's Cherry Festival, Charlevoix's Venetian Festival and the 4-H club's Big Birthday Bash on the campus of Michigan State University.

Sayward was chosen this fall to be the 2002 Youth Ambassador for Charlevoix County for this year's 4-H Centennial Celebration and the cake symbolizes the club's 100th birthday.

According to Sue Shenk, 4-H Youth Agent for Charlevoix County, Sayward was chosen to be county ambassador, because of her extensive involvement with the 4-H program.

Shenk's description of Sayward's mission as ambassador is "to promote the 4-H program and to celebrate the centennial."

To gear up for the celebrations Sayward attended the 4-H Peer Plus Leadership Workshop in December at the Kettunen Center in Tustin. She said she learned some public speaking skills and other ways to help promote the 4-H program.

Sayward started participating in 4-H seven years ago when she developed an interest in rabbits. Her focus has since ballooned into goats, lambs, and guinea pigs — her specialty. Sayward said the guinea pigs worst nightmare is the human cold.

She said her work with the animals has helped strengthen her character.

"It teaches you to be a better person, to be more responsible," she said.

Her experience so far follows the 4-H club's mission which was established in 1902 and has since endured. The four leafs of the 4-H clover, the club's emblem, stand for head, heart, hands and health, the four factors encouraged in educating America's youth in agricultural practices.

Sayward has shown rabbits and guinea pigs at the competitive level, won many awards and is a current member of Charlevoix Critters and Crafts. She hopes her involvement with the club will help her achieve future aspirations of becoming a marine biologist or a veterinarian.

She has already learned to identify major organs of several animal species and what illnesses they are susceptible to, which are two areas of 4-H competition.

The silver lining found in blood suckers

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

There is nothing worse than feeling like everyone is laughing at you for something stupid that you may have done or has happened to you.

But, what we do not realize is sometimes those embarrassing incidents have a way of turning around and becoming beneficial. To highlight this, I will share a tale that I kept to myself for several years.

The incident happened when I was in college during my sophomore year. Unlike many of the other students living in the dorms, I was lucky enough to have a room to myself .

Like many young men my age, my thoughts revolved around the opposite sex. There was nothing more fantastic than a beautiful woman smiling at me.

The problem was, also like most men my age, I was not good at meeting women. I read several men's magazines trying to find that perfect pickup line and spent tons of money on various colognes.

Meeting women has become quite an industry in this nation — just take a look at any men's magazine. In addition to the many articles about meeting women, many men's magazines contain advertisements for books on women, classes on becoming more charming and even special cologne containing "pheromones" that supposedly attract women.

A young man could spend thousands of dollars just trying to find that secret to meeting women.

In addition to attending college, I worked in a pet store at a local mall. My job was not very flashy; I spent most of my evenings cleaning up the kennels, making sure they were free of dog and cat pooh and pee.

I also spent time each day cleaning the animals. Whenever a new dog or cat came to the store, it was my job to give them a bath and make sure they did not have any fleas or other nasty critters on them.

Several times a week I found myself covered in urine or feces and soaked to my underwear due to washing animals and not feeling very attractive.

But, each night I would hurry home, take a shower and go out with my friends. Usually when I would arrive at my dorm room, I would throw my work clothing in a corner to deal with the next day.

I soon learned the error of not dealing with my work clothing promptly.

One night I awoke scratching furiously. My legs had little red spots on them, a sign that some little bug was feasting on me.

It seems that in the process of cleaning the animals one night, a couple of fleas hopped onto my clothing. Since I did not wash my clothing right away, my dorm room was infested with the little bloodsuckers.

I was, to say the least, very embarrassed.

How in the world would any woman want to date me, when word got out that I infested my room with fleas? I wanted to crawl in a hole and disappear.

The next day, I quietly tried to tell the hall adviser of my dilemma. After laughing at me for 15 minutes or so, she assured me she would keep it quiet and have the situation taken care of. But, it was hard to hide a man spraying flea killer in my room.

"Flea boy" was the kindest name my "friends" gave me.

From that point on, every time I arrived at my room from work, I would immediately wash my clothing and take a shower. Since I wanted to make sure none of the little critters ever got on me again, I figured the best way to do this was use dog shampoo on myself.

Sure, it was embarrassing, but no one knew I was using dog shampoo on myself and if it kept me flea free, it was worth it. The problem was, this animal shampoo had a distinct smell.

I soon learned that this was the silver lining on this cloud of embarrassment. I went out one night with some friends and all evening kept meeting attractive young women. Each one commented on my "cologne" and how much they loved it.

I did not realize what they were talking about until one lovely lass said, "Wow, you smell just like a puppy." She then began to scratch the back of my head. Soon other women she was with were saying the same thing and rubbing the back of my head like they were petting a dog.

Don't get me wrong, I did not mind this attention one bit. In fact, I think my friends were a little jealous. The pet store I worked at may have experienced a run on puppy shampoo by young men after that night.

Eventually, I grew up and discovered that the key to meeting women or anyone new is the word, "hello." This is better than any cologne, book or even dog shampoo.

But, to this day, I am reminded that not all embarrassing moments turn out bad. All it took was a couple of fleas and puppy shampoo to realize this.

By the way, guys, dog shampoo can be found at most grocery stores for only about $4. I suggest the "gentle and tearless" formula.

Science learns that plants are not so quiet after all

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

One of the minor satisfactions of being a botanist is that plant science does not often speed ahead with the velocity of other biological studies.

Genetic engineering is in the headlines each week with new potential disease cures and dramatic developments in agricultural crops. Genuinely new botanical ideas are relatively rare. During the past decade a new botanical idea has emerged that casts revealing light on the whole natural world. Plants communicate with one another and with the creatures around them in ways that have not been obvious to us.

An injured plant is capable of sending out chemical signals that cause changes in its plant and insect neighbors. Consider the possibilities.

A caterpillar begins to chew on the leaves of a plant in your yard. The saliva of the caterpillar causes the chewed plant to emit vapors that waft around your yard and let other plants know that danger is near. They gear up by producing substances that may be toxic or distasteful to the same kind of caterpillar.

Other vapors from that same chewed leaf may be signals to insect enemies of the caterpillar, who home in on the chewer and may kill or disable it.

We are not generally aware of the chemical signals that the plant send out, but they are detectable and their effects can be measured. Such plant-to-plant and plant-to-insect communication is not exceptional, but may in fact be a part of the usual activities of most plants.

We have known for a long time

What do the plants say to us?

KNUTSON

that flowers can emit signals that cause specific sorts of insects to behave in ways that benefit the plant, but knowledge of the sorts of communication described above is recent.

Botanists, of course, must now look at specific plants and attempt to determine just what sorts of chemicals are involved, how they are manufactured and how a plant receives the chemical signals from its neighbors. But enough information is already available to allow the suggestion that plant-to-plant communication may be almost universal.

The thought of all those plants out there whispering chemical messages to one another is a little awe-inspiring. It turns out that plants do have a secret life in which we are not invited. It could be the poet-stimulating smell of new-mown hay or the scent of a recently clipped lawn, has a meaning well beyond our usual understanding.

We have wounded plants who are responding with what could be interpreted as chemical cries of pain. And the lawn next door of the hayfield on the next farm is equipped to receive the messages.

Possibilities beyond awe or guilt are more important. If plants and insects can send and receive subtle chemical messages, appropriate crossing and breeding can easily enhance those messages. It is possible to imagine crops and garden vegetables that have vastly improved mechanisms for defending themselves and their plant neighbors against plant disease and insect damage.

We need to be careful, however.

Plants capable of vigorously defending themselves pose potential dangers. If picking the first crop of new peas causes the plants to begin making peas not only distasteful to insects, but to us as well, we have a problem. If pulling up the first few carrots of the garden season causes the rest of the carrots in the row to produce an abundance of bitter chemicals, we may have a problem.

Science is, as always, a two-edged sword.

Now, if we could only learn to communicate effectively and meaningfully with our fellow humans. Surely, if plants can do it without a nervous system, mouth or ears, we should be able to manage.

Letters to the editor

The benefits of wind power

Editor:

Wind energy potential for Michigan farmers is great! In recent years I have frequently visited a farm county in northwest Denmark that makes 130 percent of its annual electric consumption from wind power and the windmills are predominately owned by farmers.

Opponents to wind power, in recent letters, news articles and in meetings, claim wind power is expensive, inefficient, insignificant and that decommissioning would be a problem. These claims are simply wrong.

In February the two Mackinaw windmills averaged 164,000 kW-hrs each. An average rural home consumed 600 kW-hrs during February and paid about 8 cents per kW-hr with a bill of $50 to $60. For one Mackinaw windmill we find a monthly cost of $7,820 to cover debt and expenses. Divide this by 164,000 and we get a cost of under 5 cents per kW-hr.

Now, because the fuel is free and the debt is fixed like a mortgage for 25 years, the cost of the power is basically fixed. No other new power generation source can offer these low costs for 25 years. Discounted for the present, the cost is about 3 cents per kW-hr!

Dividing 164,000 kW-hrs per/mo by 600 kW-hrs per/mo for an average home we can see each windmill made enough power for 273 homes.

One citizen has expressed concerns about the decommissioning of windmills. The cost of removal of a wind turbine is zero. The scrap value of a commercial windmill exceeds the cost of its removal. Any scrap metal company will haul it away at no charge, recycle it into new products and then the "view shed" and valuable farmland will be the same as it was 25 to 30 years earlier. The land has thus been preserved for future generations.

Building windmills is cheaper than decommissioning nuclear power. The first five year budget for decommissioning the Big Rock Nuclear Power Plant is in excess of $300 million. Were we to spend that $300 million on windmills, we would install 300,000 kW's of peak capacity windmills (versus the 65,000 kW Big Rock). Averaging a 25 percent capacity factor, like the Mackinaw windmills, these windmills would generate on average 75,000 kWs or 10,000 more kWs than the Big Rock Nuclear Power Plant at 100 percent capacity. These windmills would make more energy than the nuclear power plant with the money from just the first five year decommissioning budget!

How do you measure the "efficiency" of a windmill? When we look at the coal fired power plants that provide most of our electricity in Michigan, we find that roughly 30 percent of the energy in the coal is converted to electricity. With modern windmills we find that they can capture roughly 30 percent of the energy in the wind. In some wind speeds the efficiency can be over 40 percent. What happens if we "waste" the wind energy that passes the windmill? Nothing.

Wind power won't solve all our energy problems, but it can make a significant difference and help us fight global warming and preserve farms in the process.

Save our liberties

Editor:

As Americans awake to the reality of being at war, we must ask what balance America should keep between liberty and security.

The words of Benjamin Franklin in 1759 are worth bearing in mind, "They that give up essential liberty to obtain a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety."

PDD 25, now HR 2655, "President Clinton gives up his duty as Commander in Chief to the U.N. Commander General to take over as Commander in Chief of our Armed Forces in case of a national emergency." Unless Congress objects, this directive becomes law.

Doesn't Section 8 of the Constitution state that Congress shall have the authority to commit U.S. forces to make rules for government and regulations for land and Naval Forces Congress is prevented from viewing classified portions of this executive order.

I have asked Stabenow and Levin about this order and so far, have not received an answer. Section 8 of the constitution states that Congress shall have the authority to make rules for government and regulations for land and Naval forces.

Citizens and especially youth of draft age should object to see the U.S. insignia on uniforms changed to U.N.

We can and must protect ourselves from terrorism but not through the loss of our constitution and not through the U.N.

Before our liberties are but cherished memories, write your congressman.

Parents honored by center

Parents honored for tackling the challenges of parenting. (Courtesy photo)

Parenting is a tough job.

It takes a village, or a neighborhood, or grandparents, or aunts and uncles, or friends or a play group — or all of them.

Recently, several area agencies honored 16 parents with parenting awards for their "efforts and willingness to gain support, resources, education and companionship .... as you pursue the rewards and challenges of parenting."

All the recipients have attended more than 50 of the play groups facilitated by the Women's Resource Center and funded by the Charlevoix-Emmet Family Independence Agency Strong Families/Safe Children and the Char-Em Intermediate School District Stepping Stones to School programs.

One parent, Alana Hayley has attended more than 225 play groups over the last five years.

Hayley and the other recipients were presented their certificates by leaders of the play groups, Mary Biagini, facilitator of the Boyne City, Alanson and Petoskey groups and Joann Townsend the leader for play groups in Ellsworth, East Jordan and two in Charlevoix.

Big Rock gives grants to several area groups

The Consumers Energy Foundation and the Big Rock Point Restoration Project have awarded $16,400 in grants to 15 area community organizations.

Char Em United Way received a corporate gift of $10,700 from the Consumers Energy Foundation in support of Big Rock Point's 2001-2002 United Way campaign. Employees contributed a total of $19,000 to the campaign.

Four organizations received grants in recognition of the volunteer efforts of two Big Rock Point employees and two utility retirees. The Volunteer Investment Program (VIP) grant recipients are:

The Consumers Energy Foundation sponsors the Volunteer Investment Program to recognize employees and retirees who donate personal time to nonprofit groups. Employees and retirees who volunteer more than 45 hours to qualifying organizations are eligible to apply for grants to benefit the group.

Local employee volunteer recognition teams review grant applications for eligibility and determine grant amounts. Grant amounts are based on the level of leadership and time commitment of the employee or retiree, the organization's response to community needs and other criteria.

Last year, the Consumers Energy Foundation awarded VIP grants totaling $323,700 to 471 organizations on behalf of 723 employees and retirees.

The Consumers Energy Foundation is the philanthropic arm of Consumers Energy. It provides funding to areas including education, the environment, Michigan growth and enhancement, culture and the arts, social services and emerging issues. The Company's 2002 charitable investments in Michigan through the Foundation, corporate funding, and its employees will be approximately $4 million.

Charlevoix dental office receives training in non-surgical treatment of gum disease

A landmark national study is now in progress across the United States treating gum disease without surgery.

A nationally recognized periodontist (gum specialist) Dr. Neil Gottehrer of Philadelphia, PA is heading up a critical study on the successful, non-surgical treatment of gum disease in which a select group of dentists were invited and received specific training, including Dr. John Merrill.

Most teeth lost are not due to cavities, but due to gum disease. Symptoms include: Red or puffy gums, bleeding with brushing, flossing, or eating of hard foods, teeth that are becoming loose, receding gums and mouth odor.

"By the time symptoms appear, there may already be bone loss and irreversible damage," says Dr. Gottehrer. "With a four-pronged approach — detection and diagnosis, in-office treatment to disinfect the diseased area, application of new pharmaceutical treatment therapies and patient home care, bacterial gum infection can now be treated and healed without surgery or tooth loss."

This landmark national study is pleased to have selected the practice of Dr. John Merrill of Charlevoix, to participate in providing the most advanced non-surgical treatment available to patients with gum disease.

Dr. Merrill's office can be reached at 231-547-9141.

This is a paid advertisement by Dr. Merrill.

What does it mean to have peace in our lives, world?

By CARA B. HOCHHALTER
Christian Ed. Director,
United Church of Christ

Beacons of Blessing

Peace and blessings. We yearn for peace. You hear the word often. "Peace be with you." "Go in Peace." Many people "pass the peace" during church services. There is "peace of mind" and even "peace-time!" Those of us who are Christians, seek to follow "the Prince of Peace." The name of religion, Islam, means peace and the word, Jerusalem, means "city of peace." Peace is, of course, what we all hope for. For all people.

What does "peace" really mean? Does it mean just an absence of war? At any time when there doesn't happen to be any conflict, is that peace? My American College Dictionary says that peace means "freedom from war or hostility." But aren't there times when there isn't any noticeable conflict, but there doesn't seem to be a sense of peace, either?

According to John in the Bible, Jesus said, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your hearts be troubled, neither let it be afraid." John 14:27.

Jesus seems to be saying that he could give peace (His peace-filled Way?, His Love?) to others. He also said this remarkable line, "not as the world giveth, give I unto you." Is He implying that the peace comes from some far off place? From God who is way out there some place, not in this world? Or is Christ saying that the peace comes from a "deeper within" kind of place that never-the-less, the world has not yet figured out how to give?

It is my feeling that when Christ spoke of peace, He was talking about a way of loving and living. A way of being connected to God (who is both within and without). Connected to all living beings in respect and harmony. This implies a way that is more than just the absence of conflict.

I asked some Sunday School children about peace this year. They were to write about "How to make peace happen in the world." Here are some of their words: "Peace is a gift. It's a piece of Love from God, Cherish it, Love it, Be it. Everyone has a piece of it!" "How to make peace happen: Give a gift." "To make peace happen everyone has to work together." "Peace: Let no one be at war. Love: Let everyone have someone to care for. Faith: Believe in God more." "Peace makes the world happy. I think God is watching me write this."

There was one little boy who said that the only way to make peace happen was to "Kill the bad guy!" I wonder where he got that idea?

Nowhere in the Bible did Jesus ever say to take up arms and kill your enemies. On the contrary, He said to "love your enemies." (Luke 6:27) The children can tell you the story of how Jesus rode into Jerusalem on a donkey instead of a big strong horse like a general, because he wanted to show a way of peace.

Jesus demonstrated this by reaching out in love and understanding to those who were considered the "bad guys" (the prostitutes, the tax collectors, and people of differing faith backgrounds.) And people who experienced his way of love were changed. They experienced his peace.

With the world in such turmoil, can we begin to create spaces for peace in each of our own lives? Through prayer and reaching out in love, can we broaden those spaces so that more and more people are included? Not to change people, but that we can see all living beings through eyes of love and understanding. I think that would make peace happen.

May God help us.

Ship may be leaving, but more men coming

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

According to the Acacia's captain, while the U.S. Coast Guard's decision to not replace the ship in 2006 may not be the best for Charlevoix, it is a wise money decision for the government.

Commander Michael Shomin

Commander Michael Shomin, captain of the Acacia, said a Coast Guard study indicates that the government needs fewer cutters on the Great Lakes. When it came time to decide where those ships will be, "Charlevoix, unfortunately, lost out."

He added, "I love Charlevoix. I want to retire here. My family loves it. The crew loves it."

However much the crew of the Acacia loves the city, that does not mean Charlevoix should have a cutter in 2006.

The Acacia is slated to be decommissioned in June 2006 according to the Coast Guard.

Shomin said this is because the ship, which was built in 1944, is so old.

"Stuff breaks down on a daily basis, purely due to age," he said.

But, Shomin said the fight to have some sort of Coast Guard ship in Charlevoix is not over for local politicians, particularly Congressman Bart Stupak, who represents Charlevoix in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Shomin said Stupak is pushing hard for Charlevoix with the Coast Guard and has already secured an extra man at the Charlevoix Coast Guard Station.

And more men may be added to the station in the future.

According to an e-mail from the Coast Guard command sent to Shomin, the guard wants to increase the small boat station crews, resulting in additional men for the Charlevoix Coast Guard Station.

Chief John E. McLean, of the Charlevoix Coast Guard Station, said he is tentatively going to get another man at the station next year and may get more in the future.

He is not sure how many more he will get in the future.

The Acacia was docked next to the Charlevoix Coast Guard Station last week loading up buoys. The ship will be leaving Charlevoix for good in the summer of 2006. It will not be replaced at this time. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

The station normally operates with 16 men. McLean said it currently has 21 men, making it easier for the men at the station in their daily activities.

Additionally, while Charlevoix is probably not going to get a cutter to replace the Acacia, as the Coast Guard currently says, Shomin said Stupak is trying to get another type of ship in the city.

Charlevoix Township has $1 million surplus

This is the fourth story in a series about the allocation of millage money collected in Charlevoix County.

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix Township Treasurer Theda Williams explained township residents are paying two mills in property taxes to the township despite its $1 million surplus in order to plan for the future.

"If we spend everything we get, people don't like that either. Saving for the future to me is a good thing. As treasurer I would rather see a surplus than a deficit. I think that shows we are doing our job," Williams said.

"When we need something we never have to borrow money; most townships are unable to do that," she added.

Williams explained the township is planning ahead for future improvements it will have to make to its water system and sewer extension projects.

"We've been told our water system is adequate for now, but with future development, we'll need more wells," she said.

Charlevoix Township plans to use some of its $1 million surplus to extend the city of Charlevoix's sewer to Pine Point.

Williams said this project is very expensive and the people who live out there can't afford to fund the extension. So the township plans to run the main lines down there in a phased approach.

The extension will start this year and Williams estimated it taking four to five years to finish.

She added there are several other areas of the township not currently serviced by the city's sewer system. The township hopes to prioritize these areas some time this year and plan where the lines will run next.

As the surplus continues to grow, the township collects two mills from its residents to fund its operational expenses. This comes at a cost of $200 for a homeowner whose taxable property value is $100,000.

In 2001, the township's operational millage brought in $239,524.91. The money is used to fund the township fire department, pay township employees and to fund grounds and road work.

"Last year we didn't do much in the way of road work or major projects. We didn't spend it (the millage money) all. For what people get in Charlevoix Township our millage is pretty low," she said.

Amenities available to township residents include recreation areas like Shanahan Field, a grounds crew of three people, a fire department, road work, city sewer access in some areas, water service and a staffed township hall with office hours.

"The majority of the people I talk to are grateful their taxes are what they are. They see clearly what their money is being spent on. We don't get too many complaints — not from anyone who is informed," Williams said.

How low can you go?

District reimbursed for attorney fees

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix School District was informed March 18 it will be reimbursed attorney fees it incurred while defending its interests in two circuit court cases brought by the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association.

SET-SEG, the district's insurance provider, has agreed to pay Charlevoix Public Schools a $120,000 settlement.

At the March 25 special school board meeting, Dr. John Sturock, Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, said the two cases cost the school district $157,000.

While this leaves the district $37,000 short of meeting its total expense for the cases, Sturock is not disappointed with the outcome.

"We were paid back a tremendous amount of money we paid out," he said.

Both cases in question were filed against the school district as a result of its project to build a new high school in Marion Township.

The first case brought against the school by the environmental group was determined to be premature and was dismissed by 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas.

The second case enjoined Marion Township and the school in its claim that the school violated the township zoning ordinance and that the project would have an adverse impact on the environment in Marion Township.

In both cases the school employed the expertise of its attorney, Gordon VanWieren of Thruun, Matsch and Norberg. But SET-SEG hired Bill Ewald of Braun, Kendrick and Finkbeiner to defend the school.

Sturock explained Ewald was assigned after VanWieren had allotted extensive time, energy and resources to the cases.

SET-SEG further questioned the experts, witnesses and services required of VanWieren. Throughout the dispute with SET-SEG, the district maintained VanWieren and the resources he required were part of the district's defense and its insurance provider ultimately agreed.

"I think this is a fair settlement and the district plans to put this piece behind us," Sturock said.

The third lawsuit currently pending in the state court of appeals which was brought against the school district by private residents of Charlevoix was litigated using SET-SEG attorneys and the school district has incurred no additional costs.

Halverson, Wieland to run again for school board seats

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Two seats will be filled in an upcoming Charlevoix School Board election.

School board members Dennis Halverson and Ardeth Wieland are the only two candidates currently registered to run in the upcoming election.

Those interested in being on the ballot to run for one of the two seats had to be registered by 4 p.m., April 8 and no one filed to run against the incumbents, Halverson and Wieland.

Others can still run as a write in, whereby voters write the name of the candidate at a designated location on the ballot. Those wishing to run as a write in must file a declaration of intent by 4 p.m. June 7 at the school superintendent's office, 208 Clinton Street in Charlevoix.

Dennis Halverson

Halverson, Charlevoix City Police Chief, has been a board member for four years and is currently one of three board trustees.

Wieland has held a seat on the board for 27 years and is currently the board vice-president.

Voters of the Charlevoix School District will head to the polls June 10. Those who wish to vote can do so at the Charlevoix Elementary School located on Division Street in Charlevoix.

Living with congestive heart failure

The diagnosis of congestive heart failure conjures up an image of complete failure of the heart to do its job, causing death.

In the United States about five million people are living with congestive heart failure, with about 750,000 new cases being diagnosed each year. Advancements in the scientific understanding of congestive heart failure mean that medical management and lifestyle changes can be combined to help many people with congestive heart failure live longer, productive lives.

People with heart failure either can't pump enough blood through the body to meet their organs' needs or they can only do so with elevated pressures within the heart. This leads to a build-up of fluids, either in the lungs or in other parts of the body.

"A variety of different diseases lead to heart failure. Some of the more common conditions include atherosclerosis or hardening of the arteries, heart attacks or high blood pressure, particularly if it's not treated over a long period of time," Keith Aaronson, M.D., assistant professor of cardiology with the University of Michigan Department of Internal Medicine, said.

Heart failure is a serious condition, but people can have a reasonable quality of life with heart failure. Aaronson said exercise is especially critical for patients with heart failure.

When patients with heart failure exercise, even if it is just taking routine walks, their quality of life is much better. There are other important tools as well.

"Here at U of M, we use a multidisciplinary approach. We work closely with our nurses — who are really case managers for these patients — as well as dietitians and exercise physiologists to tailor an individual program," Aaronson said.

Medicine is also important. Plus, Aaronson said there has been remarkable progress in the medications for heart failure over the past decade and a half.

"We've nearly tripled the survival for patients with heart failure, compared to what it was in the early 1980s, with the medications we have right now. The medications are necessary and yet they are not the entire answer. In fact, even if you take all the medications as prescribed, but you don't follow the proper diet, you will not do well with heart failure," he said.

Congestion in the lungs results in breathlessness, the main symptom of left-sided heart failure. Symptoms of right-sided heart failure include fatigue, swelling of the ankles and legs, enlargement of the liver, and indigestion.

Bob Moulton is living with congestive heart failure and has made significant changes in his lifestyle.

"I've had two bypasses and a stent put in to help keep the artery open and I have diabetes, but I didn't realize I had congestive heart failure until I collapsed at work," Moulton said.

A candidate for a heart transplant, Moulton makes an effort to exercise daily. He has also changed his eating habits and works to keep his blood sugars within reasonable limits.

"Suddenly you've got changes in your life and you're in angry denial. You go through all of that and finally, you wake up and say, 'Hey stupid, if you want to be around, you've got to do these things and quit whining,'" he said.

Because he has eliminated salt from his diet, Moulton has become an expert at reading and understanding food and beverage labels.

Even though a proper diet, exercise and medication are helping people with congestive heart failure to live longer, productive lives, prevention is the best way to deal with the condition.

A healthy, well-balanced diet and routine exercise are the best ways to prevent or delay the medical conditions that result in congestive heart failure.

For example, most heart failure is traceable to high blood pressure, diabetes and heart attacks, which are largely preventable conditions. If you are overweight, try to shed those extra pounds; diabetes and high blood pressure are associated with excess weight. Talk to your physician about ways to control high blood pressure. This can be done by a combination of diet, exercise and sometimes medication.

Researchers work on relieving PMS with spray

Premenstrual syndrome (PMS) has long been the subject of many jokes. But premenstrual syndrome is no laughing matter.

Forty percent of women who suffer from it seek medical treatment because their symptoms are so severe and uncomfortable. And of those women, a small percentage suffer from a debilitating hormone-related mood disorder called premenstrual dysphoric disorder (PMDD).

"I couldn't process things very well. I would get very fuzzy and very slow," Lari Start, who has been diagnosed with PMDD, said.

"Everything was very difficult for me to do. Balancing a check book was monumental, and I'm a math teacher," she added.

Imagine if those symptoms could disappear with the sniff of a nasal spray.

That's exactly what is being tested by researchers at the University of Michigan Health System. Nancy Reame, R.N., Ph. D., professor of nursing at the University of Michigan School of Nursing and research scientist in the reproductive sciences program at UMHS, said the spray is designed to help the millions of women who experience these symptoms on a monthly basis.

"PMS affects 40 percent of women who are of childbearing age. Every month they are faced with both physical and emotional symptoms," Reame explained.

"Bloating and craving chocolate are not the only symptoms; these women are also suffering from irritability, sleeplessness and in some cases the inability to function normally," she added.

PMS is related to hormonal changes during the menstrual cycle. However, the exact cause of the syndrome is still unknown, making it difficult to prevent. Health care providers often recommend PMS/PMDD patients try to lessen the symptoms by eating a healthy diet, maintaining a normal weight and exercising regularly. In more severe cases, prescription treatments are often used, but according to Reame, they're not always reliable.

"The only real proven effective treatment that's available on the market today is an anti-depressant," she said.

"But since it carries significant side-effects and is very expensive, it's not always the best option for patients. That's why we're evaluating a new drug."

Reame, along with her research team, recently launched a phase two clinical trial aimed at testing a new investigation compound called PH80 that's designed to deliver a synthetic drug to the brain in a convenient nasal spray. Reame said the new compound and new delivery approach has the potential of relieving PMS/PMDD symptoms.

"Women with clinically significant PMS/PMDD need and deserve our help," Reame said. "We believe that PH80 has promise, but it will take time to determine its value."

PH80 is designed to stimulate nerve receptors in the vomeronasal organ (VNO), a structure located just inside the nasal passages. When stimulated, the VNO receptors send impulses to the hypothalamus, an area of the brain that regulates the reproductive system, the stress system and a person's emotions and moods.

U of M is one of eight sites across the country participating in this double-blind, placebo controlled study. Researchers are looking for women between the ages of 20 and 43 who have regular menstrual cycles with extremely significant and bothersome symptoms. And according to Reame, the method of collecting data in this study is very unique.

"Typically in PMS studies, women keep a daily diary of their symptoms," she noted. "Our study is going to be easier for women because they'll keep track of their daily symptoms on a Palm Pilot. After they enter the data they will literally mail it over the Internet so we can keep a record here at U of M."

Previous research has already indicated PH80 has a positive effect on reducing anxiety in both men and women. Reame said her study hopes to prove the drug administered through a nasal spray can really help reduce PMS/PMDD symptoms in millions of women.

"Hopefully, if this investigation drug proves safe and effective, we would have a new, more convenient, safer, and cheaper way of treating our PMS symptoms as they occur," she said. "Something that would bring relief to women around the world."

For more information on the PMS nasal spray contact the Women's Health Project at the University of Michigan's School of Nursing at (734) 936-3590 or e-mail jlc@umich.edu.

Two Charlevoix teachers receive award

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Two long-time Charlevoix High School employees, Brian Certa of Ellsworth and Barb Miller of Charlevoix, will be given the seventh annual Outstanding Person in Education (OPIE) award at a banquet tomorrow night at North Central Michigan College.

"The OPIE award celebrates what's right with public education," Dave Bowman, Uniserv Director, said.

The two were nominated and chosen to be recognized, by other teachers in the Charlevoix School District, earlier this school year.

"It's an honor to be chosen. I know the K-12 teachers we have here are outstanding — highly qualified, motivated. For me to get the award is overwhelming, there are so many others just as deserving as I am," Certa said.

Certa has taught and coached at Charlevoix High School for 23 years.

Seven years ago, he started a four year construction management program. Students enrolled in Certa's program start their freshman year working in a lab environment and by their junior and senior years are busy building homes.

He said he has seen many of his students go on to college and others who have participated in his apprenticeship program have gone out into the field after completing the program.

Before starting the construction program, Certa taught wood and metal working and drafting and architecture courses at the high school. Then, he stepped out of his industrial role and into the gym where he taught physical education and health for six years.

He said during the past 23 years he has learned many things.

"Where do I start? Probably one of the biggest things I've learned is the impact you have on kids lives as an adult and how important it is to be a role model for them," he explained.

Fellow OPIE award winner Miller has also impacted the lives of numerous students in her work with the school district over the past 26 years.

Miller started out as a teaching assistant in the Learning Center, a special education program, and moved on to the position of high school secretary.

She made the decision to work at the high school when her children were students at Charlevoix Public Schools, the compatible work and school schedule coupled with her love of children sealed the deal.

She said over the past 26 years working with the students has kept her young and active.

"I've learned kids are all the same, times have changed and styles have changed, but the kids still have the same likes and dislikes in terms of school and the same goal — they want to be productive adults," she said.

Certa and Miller will be two of 27 honorees from 30 area school districts served by the Michigan Education Association, to have their contributions to the schools recognized.

The OPIE Award ceremony will begin at 8 p.m., April 11 in the new Student and Community Resource Center at North Central Michigan College.

Scouts honor the first girl born after March 12

It will be a few years before Auguste Ann Legato is ready to join a Daisy Girl Scout troop, but she's already received a warm welcome into the Girl Scout family.

Members of the Boyne Area Girl Scouts presented Auguste, born on March 21; and her mom and dad, Kari Clark and Gary Legato; with a gift basket containing 90 helpful items to mark the ninetieth birthday of Girl Scouting.

The Girl Scouts — representing Daisy, Brownie, Junior, Cadette and Senior troops from the Boyne City and Boyne Falls area — came up with the way to celebrate scouting's anniversary and worked for several weeks to plan and create their basket of baby articles.

Among the basket's contents are sleepers, simple toys, blankets, toiletries and other useful items. The girls earned money and designated part of their cookie sale proceeds to purchase things for the gift basket.

Girl Scouts and their adult leaders enlisted the cooperation of Charlevoix Area Hospital to identify the first baby girl born in Charlevoix County on or after March 12, considered to be the official birthday of Girl Scouting in the United States. After anxiously awaiting her arrival for over a week, the scouts received word of Auguste's birth and made arrangements to visit the hospital and meet their newest recruit.

"This was a fun way for the girls to get involved in the celebration of Girl Scouting," said Tami Whitley, service area manager for the Boyne Area Girl Scouts. "The Girl Scout movement began as a way to help girls grow strong, develop confidence in their abilities, enjoy unique experiences and become tomorrow's leaders. It's especially fitting that we begin that journey with our youngest new member."

Auguste has an older sister, Kaylee Louise, who is 2 years old.

What will happen with Marion sewer line?

SEWER

longer valid.

"The DEQ Part 41 permit for the sewer is essentially suspended pending a final decision of the director of the DEQ on hearing and proposed findings and conclusions from a DEQ administrative law judge," Ferguson's letter states.

But whether or not Ferguson's claim is valid remains to be seen.

David R. Porter, an environmental engineer with the Surface Water Quality Division of the MDEQ who issued the permit, said he has been told the permit should be considered held in abeyance or suspended. But Christopher Konn, MDEQ divisions contact person for contested case hearings, said this decision has not been made.

Konn explained Part 41 permits are rarely challenged and the DEQ isn't sure what direction to take.

"It's a rare thing for this permit to be challenged. We are in the process of trying to find precedent as to whether it is currently in effect or not," he explained.

The environmental group claims the DEQ made an error issuing the permit. Ferguson's letter states the MDEQ did not "evaluate the environmental and land use effects of the growth directly called for by the sewer extension, the likely pollution and impairment of natural resources including release of odors due to lack of flows, and other problems including likely malfunctioning of the system and maintenance problems."

The group is basing this contested case on correspondence made between Porter and Wiesner during the design phase of the project.

Porter said concerns he initially expressed with regard to the sewer extension project were related to nuisance odors and potential problems with cleaning the 8 inch line, not concerns with the additional waste going to the city's treatment plant.

Porter said the Part 41 permit of the Natural Resources Environmental Protection Act of 1994 is required of any public sewer project. And the permit is in place to make sure the design appropriately protects the public health and meets standards for today's design and construction.

"The city's current plan does meet those standards or I wouldn't have issued the permit," he said.

Porter said in including the alternative line in the design, the city has met and rectified concerns he previously raised.

"I was worried — that's why I wouldn't have accepted the project unless they paralleled the line with the 4 inch," he said.

The contested case brought by the environmental group has been acknowledged by the hearings office of the MDEQ and the petition has been filed.

Jim Young, city attorney, has filed paperwork to engage the city in the defense of the permit with the MDEQ.

Now, Konn said the administrative law judge of the MDEQ will wait for the two parties to contact one another and try to negotiate a settlement.

But Konn said he doesn't see the two parties reaching an agreement. He could not comment as to whether the case will be granted expedited review by an administrative law judge.

The expedited review would work in the school's favor as the district plans to open the new facility in the fall.

Dr. John Sturock, Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, said, "Unfortunately the school is the pawn in all of this, we have no control over it. Hopefully the sewer will be put in place. We'll keep monitoring the situation."

Sturock said the district understands there is the option of an on-site septic system, but that is not the avenue it has chosen to pursue.

Planning commission to rehear monitor issue

WIND

He said this process creates a record that can, if needed, be reviewed by a judge to ensure the township exercised its judgment in a lawful manner.

In the minutes, recorded by township clerk Don Hayden, there is no discussion of the standards the planning commission was supposed to look at or findings of fact regarding if those standards were met.

"It seems to me there is an error in the writing of the minutes, which is obviously my fault. I'm sure there was discussion of the standards and of the findings of fact," Hayden said.

However, the lack of documentation is a problem.

"There is no documentation that establishes the reasoning behind the planning commission's decision to grant the special use permit request subject to the township board's final approval," Graham explained.

However, in making that decision, and jumping out of the line of fire of opponents of wind turbine generators, the township may have spurred a lawsuit from Bay Windpower.

Dan Skrzeczkoski, township supervisor, said, "No matter what we do, this will probably end up getting us sued."

Graham said in making the decision to remand the issue back to the planning commission, the developer, Bay Windpower, could go to court and demand its permit. The initial permit request was made in November of 2001.

Steve Smiley, co-owner of Bay Windpower, said, "I'll have to consult with my partner (Richard Vanderveen, president and CEO of Bay Windpower) and decide how we'll proceed."

The 164 foot tall proposed wind monitoring tower would be placed on the property of Dawson Way, located north of Ferry Road in Eveline Township, where it would collect data for six months and then be removed.

It is made of a 10 inch pipe and guy wires. It has temporary screw in anchors and a steel base and does not have concrete or permanent fixtures.

Its purpose is to gather more information about wind speeds in and around the Way property.

A preliminary computerized wind resources analysis has been conducted on the properties of Way and Richardson utilizing data analysis procedures and mapping of the Wind Energy Resource Atlas of the United States.

"If there is not sufficient wind at that site, there will not be a project there. We're just testing the winds and will only go forward if there is enough wind," Vanderveen said.

In Bay Windpower's project description it states this preliminary study showed, "more than adequate wind resources exist to provide cost-effective wind energy from these sites."

"These sites are rated as Class 4 wind sites, some of the best in Michigan, with annual average wind speeds at wind turbine hub height between 15 mph and 16.8 mph," it adds.

Township residents said they understand the tower is temporary, but are worried this is the first step in locating wind turbine generators at the site.

They claim the wind turbine generators will cause safety issues, lower property values and will create noise and visual blight.

Bay Windpower initially outlined a project description showing seven commercial wind turbine generators, five on Way's 150 acres and two on Ralph Richardson's 80 acre parcel. Both parcels are zoned agricultural.

The tip of the tallest tower described in the project description would reach 392 feet above ground level.

However, community opposition may change the direction Bay Windpower takes.

According to Smiley, the nature of the plan attached to the permit application which depicts seven wind towers is "open for discussion."

"I think we may change some things, move things around a little and may consider a different windmill," Smiley said.

Bay Windpower believes the turbines will provide clean energy to 4,600 homes and will help to save agricultural property from development.

The company's project description further claims, "the proposed installation will improve the character and value of the property and environment in the vicinity and community. The wind turbines are designed to be attractive and appealing to the eye; a kinetic environmental sculpture, a barometer of the wind, just like sailboats on Lake Charlevoix."

However, in spite of Bay Windpower's claims of environmental utility and the protection of agricultural land, over 200 Eveline Township residents have fought to keep the wind monitoring tower out.

To recognize these concerns, Rich Vanderveen said the company has a patient approach.

"Let's step back and think this through and do it well to build a project that will benefit the community, the state and the Great Lakes. Under the law we have the legal right to push forward for permits under the zoning ordinance. Instead, we're taking a step back and saying we will work with the community, acknowledge their concerns and address those concerns," he said.

Vanderveen said the first step in approaching the project is a need for current, accurate information. Information he believes will be provided by the monitoring tower.

Bay Windpower's plan was to start installing the wind turbine generators in the spring and summer of this year, completing the project in August of 2002.

Charlevoix graduate still shining on the ski hills

Tiffany Sloan Fisher, of Charlevoix, is continuing to shine with skiing.

Tiffany Sloan Fisher

The 2000 graduate of Charlevoix High School and currently a sophomore at Princeton University in New Jersey, has been named to the United States Collegiate Association All-American All-Academic team.

Fisher also recently returned from the United States Collegiate Ski Association National Championships at Waterville Valley, N.H.

Previously in March, the Princeton University Women's Ski Team placed second overall against the 16 Mid-Atlantic Colleges and universities at Syracuse, N.Y., to qualify for a national event against universities and colleges from across the country.

Fisher has also earned honors in high school academically as the 2000 valedictorian and athletically as a four year All Conference, All Region and All State ski competitor for Charlevoix High School and as a Junior Olympian.

In addition to Fisher's accomplishments, her brothers are also well known in the skiing world.

For the past two years, Taylor Fisher, 16, has completed on the Charlevoix High School "Dream" class C ski team, which has placed second in the state high school class B-C-D meet for the last two years. Also, Tanner Fisher, 12, competes for Charlevoix Middle School, Boyne Mountain's Northern Michigan Ski Academy and CUSSA.

Youth wrestling

Last week, the Charlevoix Elementary/Middle School Wrestling team hosted a meet with Mancelona. There were only three losses out of 22 matches that night and 11 wrestlers pinned their opponent in Charlevoix's dreaded cradle. 'Days gone by'

Charlevoix at one time had two newspapers.

In 1965, Bob Clock came to Charlevoix as the editor of the Charlevoix Courier. He wrote the wonderful column "Clockwise." We enjoyed his columns, especially the stories of Neverville, a town located in the Upper Peninsula, which remained the way it was in years gone by. His imagination was unbounded, and we loved to read about Neverville's mayor, Status Quo, and various inhabitants of the make-believe town. We could almost believe Neverville existed and some people actually wanted to know where to find it.

In 1967 Glen Sheppard became Courier editor and Bob continued to write for the Petoskey News-Review and the Courier. In 1967, he started a paper called the Charlevoix Beacon. He was editor and his wife Judy, the manager. His first issue was on the stands on Oct. 18, 1967 and cost $.10. It was in tabloid style, very easy to read, and a subscription only cost $3 a year.

He felt there was a need for a second newspaper in town and his aim was to have a well-written, readable newspaper about Charlevoix. He planned to distribute the paper free for the first few months, with ads from the merchants supporting it, while he conducted an intensive subscription campaign. The paper was printed at the Boyne Citizen in Boyne City.

In that first issue were stories of interest to everyone. One of them was covering the fiftieth anniversary of Charles and Geneva Stevens. Mr. Stevens was a native of Marion Township, where he was born March 16, 1899. They had five sons and three daughters, 23 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren at the time. Also, that week, the Charlevoix Beach Hotel burned. It was razed to make way for a new nine-story hotel. "I" beams valued at $2,500 were lost. The fire was believed to have been started by vandals. The homecoming queen, Geraldine Oliver, was crowned at the game Oct. 23. Her court included Kris Lieberman, Janet Pease, Lauri Wilson and Mari Tervahauta, an exchange student from Finland.

Mrs. William T. Butters, a former Charlevoix resident died Oct. 17. She and her husband came here in the later 1940s from Lansing and opened Butters Sunset Lodge at 203 Michigan Avenue. One of the things she was known for, was her little lamb, Buttercup, which was dyed a lovely yellow color. She took him down the streets on a leash. The Charlevoix County Supervisors decided to replace the present county jail. Improvements and additions to the present high school and grade school were discussed by the Board of Education. The cost would be $2,068,000. The County Bank requested the alley behind the bank be one way, so they could build a drive through facility.

The second issue of the Beacon was out on Oct. 25, 1967. Under a column entitled, "It happened in Charlevoix" were short local news items about residents. The papers always carried these columns and throughout the years there were columns about Norwood, Barnard, Hayes, Clark, Inwood, Ironton and various places where people lived, including, Charlevoix. Everyone kept up on the latest news about where people went and who visited with them. The churches at that time were: St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, Community Church of God, First Baptist Church, Christian Science Society, First Congregational Church, Assembly of God Church and the Church of the Nazarene.

There was also the news from the court, which was very frank, including names and charges. Bob also wrote a front page article about a girl who visited Charlevoix whose name was Debra Dene Barnes of Maron, Kansas, who went on to win the Miss America title. She spent five days camping at Bell's Bay in August of 1966 with her sister, and their cousin, Miss Jodi Lamb, an old friend of the Clocks, from the days they taught in southern Michigan.

She enjoyed camping by the lake, and when asked a question as she was in the contest, she mentioned the sound of the waves as being one of her favorite things, and they knew it was about here, as it was the only place she had enjoyed being by a lake.

In that issue, Dale Fassett was named the new director of the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District. The Assembly of God Church on East Upright Street was now constructing a Sunday school addition to the church. The Chamber of Commerce was building new shower and restroom facilities for yachtsmen on Bridge Street, and the offices are to be located on the street level. A home was advertised for $16,900 which had 500 feet of frontage on a creek and has a view of Lake Michigan. Some of the amenities included, nine rooms, four bedrooms, bath, basement, 50 x 60 barn, basement, pens, stanchions, 20 x 40 tool shed and well house. It was situated on 40 acres, 90 tillable, all in hay and improved pasture, two creeks and 20 acres of woods. It fronted a county blacktop highway, only six miles from town, with a new oil furnace and roof.

The paper was well done, and the merchants were advertising in it, but it didn't continue very long. I have the book which Judy compiled and edited in 1995, entitled "Clockwise with Bob Clock." It contains selections from 1965 to 1967, and is one of my treasured volumes. Bob's writings are to be cherished throughout the years.

Bob was a substitute teacher during his retirement and he died March 16, 1995 in Charlevoix. I, for one, am so glad he came here and we were treated to his talents.

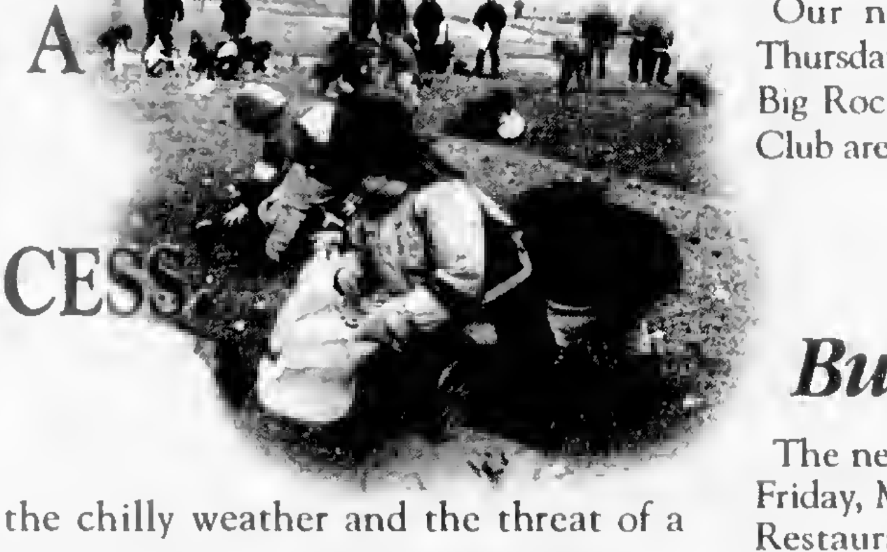
EASTER EGG HUNT WAS A BIG SUCCESS



Despite the chilly weather and the threat of a snowstorm, the children of Charlevoix gathered at East Park on Saturday, March 23rd, for the city's Eleventh Annual Easter Egg Hunt. Kirby Dipert blew the starting whistle promptly at 2 p.m. and within 5 minutes the children had gathered all 5,000 plastic Easter eggs.

A special thank you goes to members of the retail committee, who made the hunt a success and especially to Kirby Dipert (Charlevoix Harbor Wear) and Jacqueline Mabee (The Clothing Company) for all their work in chairing the event. Thanks also to Marell Staffel, of Charlevoix Camera, for taking pictures of children with the Easter Bunny and Jeff Sprecksell for all the arrangements at the Weathervane Restaurant. We specifically thank the following volunteers: Jeanne Eaton (Central Drug Store), Lisa McCormack (Black Bear Coffee & Tea Lodge), Audrey Shapiro (Gallery 704) and notably thank the following crew members from the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Acacia for their help in making the event successful: Ensign Christopher Billiau, and SN Dan Guise, Mike Lutz, Dave Woodbury, and Chad Wortman. All of your efforts together made this a great event for our kids!

Business Briefs

Congratulations, Pat McKeown Ford, Lincoln, Mercury, on your 20th Anniversary!

Pat McKeown Ford, Lincoln, Mercury, is celebrating its 20th Anniversary in Charlevoix. McKeown's dealership is the only "Stand-Alone" dealership in this area, with new and used car and truck sales, a service department, parts department and full body shop. The dealership was recently renovated and expanded to include a new quick oil change facility, and a new separate tire department. The construction and renovation utilized the services of twelve local contractors.

"We're a small town and a small dealership, but we do anything the larger dealers do - and we remember your name!" said Pat, proudly.

Pat, we congratulate you on your achievements, and wish you 20 more years of successful business in Charlevoix!

Huge complex in works

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A major planned unit development (PUD) proposed for Charlevoix's Hayes and Charlevoix townships will kick off this summer with construction of a new hotel.

The hotel, Americinn Motel and Suites, will be a two-story, 54 unit structure with an indoor swimming pool and on-site parking. The hotel will span almost 4 acres and will be located northeast of Bethany Lutheran Church, fronting US-31.

The hotel project will be undertaken by David Haywood, a developer from Lansing, who is expecting to break ground this summer.

According to master plan documents submitted to Ethel Knepp, Hayes Township clerk, the entrance and exit to the hotel, and the development that may accompany it, will be an entrance located across from the Charlevoix Country Club entrance.

The hotel is part of a larger proposed development which may extend into both Hayes and Charlevoix townships. The whole plan includes Americinn, office space, senior housing, a restaurant, retail space, apartments and self-storage buildings.

The proposed development will cover 73 acres total, with 44 acres in Hayes Township and 29 acres in Charlevoix Township.

The colors of spring

The recent warm weather and spring rains has resulted in the blooming of many beautiful flowers throughout Charlevoix and many more to come, if this little bee has anything to say about it (left). Bike trail to connect Petoskey, Charlevoix

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix bike riders will be able to ride a partially paved trail with boardwalk areas, from Waller Road, on the north side of Charlevoix Township, to Bay Harbor this fall.

The trail that will connect Bay Harbor and Charlevoix is part of the Little Traverse Wheelway, a non-motorized trail project that has been in the works for over 20 years.

In the last four to five years the project has seen significant improvement.

Its aim is to connect Charlevoix to Harbor Springs. And this goal will almost be met with the extension in Charlevoix County, to begin in June.

According to Jerry Corley, vice president of the Top of Michigan Trails Council and chairman of the Charlevoix Trails Committee, there are plans in the works for Emmet County to purchase land — called the Resort Bluffs — to continue the extension and connect the trail to Petoskey.

To complete the connection from Charlevoix to Harbor Springs, there are still a few places in Emmet County where the trail needs to connect and the bluffs area is one of them.

Larry Sullivan, Charlevoix County Planner who has helped coordinate the extension with Corley and others, said, "This will be a tremendous asset to the entire area. People talk about eco-tourism — here, they can ride from community to community."

Beaches getting significant improvements

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Major renovations are underway at Charlevoix's Michigan and Depot beaches for visitors and locals.

When asked about the Michigan Beach project, John Martin, the city's street department superintendent said, "There has been some work from time to time down there, but nothing of this magnitude. We've got quite a project going on down there."

Currently, Michigan Beach is not the most heavily trafficked beach in the city of Charlevoix — Ferry Avenue Beach is — but, Martin said, "Once this project is complete I think you're going to see much more use of it."

He explained, even though the Michigan Beach project is big, it is still scheduled to be completed during the first week of June.

"It's going to be beautiful down there," Martin said.

The entire project will include a new beach wall, a change in the grade of part of the driveway, the addition of beach volleyball courts, a picnic pavilion, new and repaved walkways, a renovated restroom and concessions facility and an interpretation station and trail network leading from Park Avenue to the boardwalk which runs along the Pine River Channel.

The improvements got underway this fall when H & D, the project's general contractor, worked on demolition projects and ran underground utilities.

Carlson Home Improvements worked through the winter to renovate the concession and bathroom facility.

Recently, Manthei Construction workers have been hard at work rebuilding the beach wall.

Martin said this wall was both designed and constructed by Manthei and is unique to Charlevoix; it hasn't been used anywhere else.

Work crews are gearing up to start on the Michigan Beach picnic shelter in the next week. Martin said this would he complete in the first or second week of June.

Also starting in the next week, are changes to the old water tower property off Park Avenue. This project will include wood chipped trails, an interpretive information station and scattered bench seating. The park entrance will he similar to that of Hoffman Park, also located off Park Avenue, with its fieldstone accents.

The water tower park off Park Avenue is scheduled to be complete by June 19.

"They're just starting up on this. You are going to see a lot happening down there," Martin said.

Some of the subcontracted labor H & D has hired on for the water tower portion of the project include: Al and Jim's Tree Service, Robinson Landscaping, Sky Electric, Manthei and Smith Irrigation.

H & D has a few extra weeks after completing Michigan Beach, to finish the Depot Beach project, which also has several upgrades on the way.

Depot Beach will see a major transformation in its landscaping including fieldstone retaining walls that are currently 80 percent complete.

Martin said the largest undertaking at Depot is the new restroom facility which will be constructed in the same style as the old train station and the picnic shelter currently in place. He projected this facility being complete in late summer.

New children's play equipment, similar to what was built at Ferry Beach, will be built by mid-June at Depot Beach.

Construction at Depot Beach started in the fall when underground utilities, including sewer and water service, were run.

Martin is excited to see the work at both beaches making progress. He said this has been a long time coming.

"This has been in the works for a while. The funding mechanism, with grants and the city match, was able to be put together last year," he said.

The total cost of both projects is $650,000.

Charlevoix's Downtown Development Authority contributed $95,300 of its funds to the projects. Granting agencies including, the Department of Environmental Quality and the Coastal Zone contributed $290,100 and the city's Lake Michigan Beach Public Improvement Fund allocated $136,782.

City beach projects great use of money

EDITORIAL

Tax time has finally past. Some of us are enjoying significant refunds, while others are still in dark moods over having to pay out more to the government.

But, one common theme that can be seen across the country is Americans' unhappiness with taxes. We hate paying them and have even gone to war over them.

Sometimes, though, we can see the results of those taxes that we pay.

A prime example of this is the work being done to Charlevoix's Michigan Beach and Depot Beach. While much of these renovations were paid for with grants, a good portion of it was paid for using tax money in a city fund.

And what we have here is a good use of those taxes.

The improvements currently being constructed at these two beaches will benefit not only the tourists to our town, but also those living in and around the town. They are perfecting already beautiful areas of Charlevoix to allow families, both from Charlevoix and elsewhere, to enjoy the water wonderland that surrounds us.

While construction on the beaches are still in high gear, one can clearly see the vast improvements being made, specifically at Michigan Beach with the building of a new wall. If you have not seen it, we suggest you do. It is the first sign of bigger and more beautiful changes to come.

The city of Charlevoix should be applauded for making these improvements to Michigan Beach and Depot Beach. They are already looking great and we can't wait to see the finished results early this summer.

The tax money and grant money the city has used to improve these beaches has been spent wisely on something that will beautify the city and benefit everyone. A government that spends its money on wise projects is something that all taxpayers appreciate.

Charlevoix resident has memorable Australian trip

Edith Gilbert

'Ear to the ground'

With a stylish certificate to prove it, Ann Hufford is proud to report to us, upon her return to Charlevoix, that it was a one in a billion chance when she stood on the Sydney Harbour Bridge in Australia on the only day that the American Flag ever flew there!

Let's back up and start at the beginning. Gutsy Ann booked herself on a month long tour to visit Australia, New Zealand and Fiji, while husband Walter chose to stay home and do a bit of ice fishing.

While the tour group visited Sydney, Ann made a reservation to climb the bridge. (It's the thing to do in Sydney, just like our visitors always enjoyed climbing Mt. McSauba.) Of course the Sydney Harbour Bridge is much higher. Opened in 1932, it is the largest single span arch bridge in the world.

Climbers are outfitted in specially designed, warm-weather gear, closely resembling a space suit.

Ready for her climb, Ann noticed that a large American flag was flying from the mast so naturally she asked the tour guide, "How come?"

He replied, "This has never happened before — never has any other country's flag ever been flown from the bridge — but today is a very special day! It's the six month anniversary of Sept. 11 and we are hosting 10 New York City firefighters and their families, who are vacationing in Australia."

Still deeply moved, Ann showed me a picture of her standing on the summit of the bridge with the American flag flying high above her. She showed me her sliek Bridge Certificate that says, "This is to certify that Ann Hufford successfully climbed to the summit of the Sydney Harbour Bridge on 12 March 2002."

Of course, the reason it reads March 12 instead of March 11, is because Australia is on the other side of the International Date Line, but you knew that.

The three hour climb to the summit is scary, but Ann thought, "If others do it, I can do it too!"

The group of eight men and women climbers wore a harness attached to a steel cable that slides along the bridge. Ann walked across steel girders not over a foot wide and climbed straight up steep stairways on a bridge that rises 134 meters above the deep blue water below.

Didn't I tell you she was gutsy?

Later that evening the tour group was dining in the Waterfront Restaurant overlooking the harbor and noticed a fire fighting boat circling the harbor and spraying a large stream of water into the air in honor of the firefighters. Indeed, this six month celebration of the Sept. 11 anniversary is an occasion Ann will always remember with gratitude to those down under.

No cell phones in cars

Editor:

I'm a student at Charlevoix Middle School. I think people should not use cell phones unless they have hands free in cars.

Also, you could get a ticket because you might be too occupied, and then you could pass a stop sign.

Another reason is, it's dangerous. Sometimes when you are looking at your cell phone, your eyes are not looking at the road, and you could get into an accident.

Also, if you laugh your head goes down and you could crash.

Finally, what if an ambulance was trying to get past you. It could not get past you because you couldn't hear its siren. Then, somebody could die. That's what I think we should do.

Need new bus routes

Editor:

We need new bus routes.

One reason is buses are crowded is because it takes a long time to drop off all the kids. Some seats have two to three people in them. Kids get home late because of how crowded it is. Kids get angry because they get home late. Next, the students who ride the bus get to school late. Buses have so many kids on them you get there late and we get a tardy because we're late.

Another reason is people get grumpy because of the time they get up at. They wake up so early for the buses and get home so late, they can't play. Kids get mad because of friends not being able to come over because they get home so late.

Winter is the best season

Editor:

I am a sixth grade student at Charlevoix Middle School. I think winter is the best season. You can plow the snow. Snow needs to be moved so people can get around. I think plowing snow is a lot of fun.

Also, you can go snowmobiling. You have to have some snow so you can have fun. You and your friends can ride in the woods or the fields.

Finally, you can have snowball fights. You can ask your friends if they want to have a snowball fight. You can have a war by making a wall and trying to knock it down.

By reading this letter you know that winter is the best season.

Make BMX jumps better

Editor:

I am a sixth grader at Charlevoix Middle School. First, I think the city of Charlevoix should make the BMX jumps better at Shanahan Field. They should fix it so kids will stay out of trouble.

A lot of kids don't do drugs because they would rather BMX bike.

One time, I had to go to Traverse City just to practice BMX racing.

Also, it will help people get good exercise for their body. People need exercise to stay in shape. People need a track to learn how to BMX race. It will help kids get good at BMX racing.

Kids will learn how to BMX bike if they fix it. People won't have to go to Traverse City to go BMX bike riding. People need that BMX track fixed.

Let sixth graders on track team

Editor:

I am a sixth grader at Charlevoix Middle School. I think the sixth graders should be allowed to run on the track team.

I think the sixth graders should have the same chance as the seventh and eighth graders do, to be good at track. Not all sixth graders are slower than the seventh and eighth graders. Some sixth graders can run just as fast.

Also, the sixth graders can behave just as well as the older kids, if they try. I think the sixth graders should be allowed to join the team.

Some kids might not have a lot to do after school. Not all kids are good at, or like, the other spring sports, but they might like track. Also, kids that can't afford a bike or other athletic equipment can get their exercise from track for probably not much money.

I think the kids that run would not be bored after school.

Running track is great exercise. If kids go to bed tired, which they probably will if they are allowed on the track team, kids usually sleep better. As a result, they are more awake the next day, so they do well in school the next morning.

Also, if the kids can join they will get more exercise and won't be so wound up during the day and at home. Running is good for kids so the sixth graders should be allowed to join the team.

Sixth graders would not have enough time to get into trouble if they were on the team. By being around kids who do not do drugs kids that do drugs would see you can be happy without drugs. As a result the kids would be too tired to do bad or illegal things.

That is why I think the sixth graders should be allowed on the track team.

Need more breaks

Editor:

My name is Ariel Ramsey. I am in sixth grade and attending Charlevoix Middle School.

I think we should have more breaks in the winter and go to school on the weekend in the summer. I think we should have more breaks so we don't cram our brains full, trying to learn everything in the school year. We also hurry to get our work done so we don't have homework so we can have fun and our work is not the best we can do.

Another reason we should have school in breaks is that we go during the winter and we get sick and miss days of school. We also pass the germs on to friends and they too miss school.

We should go in the summer on weekends so that we don't forget what we learned. Also, we stay on schedule. We also need the school days from having the days off from the breaks that we would have in the winter.

Next reason, is that so we don't get tired of going to school, so if we had breaks we would have time to get sleep, rest up and be ready to go back to school.

That is why I think we should have more time off during the school year and go to school in the summer on the weekends.

Start school one hour later

Editor:

I am a sixth grade student attending Charlevoix Middle School. I think that the middle school and the high school should start the school day one hour later.

I don't think that kids can do all of their homework and still get enough sleep to be ready for the next day. Sometimes I have so much homework, I don't go to bed until 11 p.m.! It has been proven that middle school students and high school students need more sleep than kids in elementary school.

Another reason school should start later is that some school buses come to pick kids up really early in the morning. For example, one bus in Charlevoix comes to pick some kids up at 6:45 a.m.! Some people on that bus fall asleep on their way to school. Sleeping in a sitting position could most likely hurt your neck.

One more reason why school should start later is because there are some things that disrupt the class. This comes as a result from the buses and school being so early. I have heard some kids yawn very loud during class. I have yawned loudly during class before too, because I am so tired. I have heard of kids falling asleep during class. All of these reasons are because children are unable to get enough sleep. That is why I think school should start one hour later.

Charlevoix dental office receives training in non-surgical treatment of gum disease

A landmark national study is now in progress across the United States treating gum disease without surgery.

A nationally recognized periodontist (gum specialist) Dr. Neil Gottehrer of Philadelphia, PA is heading up a critical study on the successful, non-surgical treatment of gum disease in which a select group of dentists were invited and received specific training, including Dr. John Merrill.

Most teeth lost are not due to cavities, but due to gum disease. Symptoms include: Red or puffy gums, bleeding with brushing, flossing, or eating of hard foods, teeth that are becoming loose, receding gums and mouth odor.

"By the time symptoms appear, there may already be bone loss and irreversible damage," says Dr. Gottehrer. "With a four-pronged approach — detection and diagnosis, in-office treatment to disinfect the diseased area, application of new pharmaceutical treatment therapies and patient home care, bacterial gum infection can now be treated and healed without surgery or tooth loss."

This landmark national study is pleased to have selected the practice of Dr. John Merrill of Charlevoix, to participate in providing the most advanced non-surgical treatment available to patients with gum disease.

Dr. Merrill's office can be reached at 231-547-9141.

Two injured in accident April 12

Two people were injured in an automobile accident around 12 p.m., April 12, on US-31, north of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road.

The accident occurred when Christopher Lee, 29, of Kingsley driving a red Chevrolet Trailblazer, thought there was adequate distance between himself and the 1999, silver Crown Victoria in front of him, driven by James Greco, 72, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, Canada.

Lee reached down to pick up a bottle of water from the floor of his vehicle, when Greco braked because vehicles ahead of him had slowed down. The Lee vehicle crashed into the Greco vehicle.

Both drivers claimed they had no injuries.

The passengers in the Greco car — Lorna Greco, 68 and Virginia Funk, 69 — were transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by Charlevoix Ambulance. Lorna stated she had pain in her back, neck and chest and Funk had neck pain.

According to the Charlevox County Sheriff's Office, a citation was issued to Lee for a violation of the basic speed law, driving too fast for conditions and being unable to stop within assured clear distance ahead.

Township may put turbines in another area

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

In revising its zoning ordinance, Eveline Township is considering creating a district where wind turbine generators will be permitted.

But the area it's looking at wouldn't include the property of Dawson Way or Ralph Richardson, two landowners who have provided Bay Windpower a land easement for the turbines.

"We're heading toward having a district. Instead of allowing wind turbines in farm and forest areas, the zoning ordinance would allow them in a district. This pretty well says, 'If we have them, this is the area they'll be.' But it doesn't exclude them," Eric Beishlag, Eveline Township Planning Commission Chairman, said.

"Way's and Richardson's property probably wouldn't fall into that district because we're going to go on density," he added.

If the planning commission decides to go the route of designating wind turbine districts, Steve Smiley, president of Bay Windpower in Sutton's Bay, said it would likely be creating an exclusionary ordinance.

"We told them it seemed difficult for them to say what was windy and not windy. And it would be discriminatory to the landowners in other areas of the township that might want windmills; it's tricky and I think it very well could be exclusionary zoning. Why shouldn't a farmer with windy land be able to do this? How does it effect homeowners and their rights?" Smiley questioned.

The goal of Eveline Township officials is to establish the district in an area of low development.

"Our goal is to get it (the turbine project) away to a place where there are less houses. This is a change from where they're (Bay Windpower) proposing them, but not a great distance," Beishlag explained.

One area the planning commission has considered is a sparsely populated region near Sequanota and Phelps roads, south of the Cedar Ridge Landfill, in close proximity to Beishlag's home.

"In between Sequanota and Marion Township there aren't any houses. I feel it's a better area, even if it is next to me. Where I am, the odds of development are pretty slim; there are a lot of wetlands," he said.

Beishlag was addressing concerns voiced by over 200 Eveline Township residents, who claim the proposed wind turbine generator project, near Brock and Ferry roads, has no place in their residential community.

Nancy Ferguson, an opponent of wind turbines being located on the properties of Way and Richardson, said, "We feel they're (the township board) listening and working with us. But it still worries me that the ordinance is still in effect."

Her concern is that Bay Windpower will push the permits through before Eveline Township is able to make changes to the zoning ordinance.

The zoning ordinance was changed in October of 2001 to permit the wind turbines in the township with a special use permit.

Way and Richardson have since been working with Bay Windpower on the project. The original plan submitted to the township, along with Bay Windpower's request for a special use permit to put up a wind monitoring tower, showed its plan to locate five wind turbines on Way's property and two on Richardson's.

Since then, the developer has faced numerous delays in locating its temporary wind monitoring tower which would test wind speeds in and around the Way property for six months.

The township board tabled the decision twice to gather more information and at its third meeting, April 9, remanded the request back to the planning commission.

The board's decision was made after its attorney, Bryan Graham, in-

School district gets funding for lighthouse

By JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix School District has received funding to restore its Beaver Island lighthouse, known as the Beaver Head Light, located on the south end of the island.

The school district owns 107 acres of land on Beaver Island, part of which the lighthouse sits on.

The district purchased the lighthouse from the federal government for $10 over 20 years ago, when it was decommissioned.

According to Dr. John Sturock, superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, in 2006 the lighthouse will be the property of the school district, "free and clear."

He explained that since the purchase, the state of Michigan has budgeted funds for restoration of publicly owned lighthouses across the state. And last summer, the school district applied to receive money to restore both the lighthouse and foghouse.

The district received a matching grant of $250,000 and has since applied for the Save America's Treasures federal grant to further fund restorations.

Sturock said the district is in the process of meeting with a historical architect to start renovations this summer.

He hopes to see renovations completed before the fall of 2002.

The lighthouse is the landmark that established the name of the Lighthouse School, an alternative education institution on the Charlevoix School District's island property.

The school, which is run through the Traverse Bay Area Intermediate School District, started 17 years ago and offers students two sessions each year.

Over the past two years, Sullivan and the Michigan Department of Transportation have struggled to get state funding for the 7.6 mile stretch from Waller Road to Bay Shore.

In fact, it took three grant requests to get the full amount it will cost to extend the Charlevoix County portion of the trail. One request was shot down in 2000, in 1999 another was approved for $1.4 million, a portion of the project, and in 2002, the third, awarded $1.3 million.

Prior to the bids being returned on April 5, Sullivan was worried the project would need to make another request. But, bids came in under the engineer's estimate.

He said the $4 million price tag in comparison with the distance the trail would run, made the granting agency — federal government officials in charge of TEA-21 Transportation Enhancement Act funds — uneasy.

He explained the high cost is a result of the trail's location. It will run close to Lake Michigan raising erosion concerns, has some steep slopes, runs in the area of archeological sites and winds through some wetland zones.

"Lake Michigan Shores was a big point of contention. Trying to figure out how to run people along there with the steep slope was challenging," Sullivan said.

Petoskey engineering firm Northwest Design, came up with a plan for the Lake Michigan Shores portion of the project and ended up saving money. They'll bring in "fill" to that area to make it level and a safety rail will border the trail.

Sullivan said this plan, "lowered the cost to allow sufficient funds to construct the whole trail this year."

In the wetland areas the design shows boardwalks will be built.

The group initially considered running the trail along the railroad spur where the terrain was naturally better suited and would cut construction costs. But planners found it wasn't easy to get easements from residents.

In opting to run the trail along US-31, Sullivan said users will have better lake views and more access to parks and recreation facilities.

"If the trail was on the old railroad bed, the grade would be better, but you would lose scenic views," Sullivan said.

The trail will run on the north side of the road.

Sullivan said the extension will increase recreation opportunities in the area.

"It will provide an alternative, safer means of transportation for people getting around. I would not ride down the shoulder of this highway with my children," he said.

So far, the Emmet County portion of the trail has been heavily used by bikers, joggers, and roller bladers.

While the Waller Road to Bay Shore extension seems to bring the Wheelway closer to completion, project aspirations have grown.

"Eventually, I see this as not just a Charlevoix and Emmet counties trail, I think it will be regional," Sullivan said.

He mentioned the trail connecting to Boyne City, East Jordan, the Mackinac Bridge and Traverse City.

Sullivan has been in contact with Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner to discuss designating a city route as part of the trail. He also plans to support a project that would extend the path south to Fisherman's Island State Park.

Sullivan said in previous discussions, Cemex has expressed its openness to providing the project an easement along the old railroad bed to access Bell's Bay Road.

The Michigan Department of Transportation is currently reviewing bids to make sure the specifications include all facets of the project.

Several groups were involved to make this project a reality. They include: the Top of Michigan Trails Council, Charlevoix County officials, Petoskey's Northwest Design, Williamson Works of Grand Rapids and Trail Committees from Charlevoix, Petoskey and Boyne City.

HEALTH

Antibiotics not always needed for earaches

Dennis Joy, M.D.

'Your Health'

After seeing the third child with an earache after midnight recently, I decided to write this article.

Over the past half century, otitis media, or middle ear infection, has been one of the most frequently used reasons physicians have used to prescribe antibiotics.

This condition usually occurs as a complication of the common cold. With the congestion that occurs with a cold, the passage between the throat and the ear space in the middle of the ear, behind the ear drum becomes plugged.

A vacuum forms in the middle ear space and fluid forms and possibly bacterial germs from the mouth and throat gain access to the middle ear space. Bacteria multiply and an inflammatory response occurs.

The ear may be perceived as painful at any point during this sequence of events.

Bacterial germs in recent years have become resistant to many antibiotics thought to be because of over-prescribing. Thus, they will kill the germs and will not have the desired beneficial effect.

About 80 percent of ear infections get better without antibiotic therapy and about 95 percent get better with antibiotics.

In Europe, and more so now in this country, physicians are recommending antibiotics be withheld in otherwise healthy children, over 2-years-old, for 48 to 72 hours and treating symptoms with analgesics and perhaps decongestants. If symptoms persist then antibiotics are started.

When antibiotics are used, susceptible bacterial germs are killed leaving resistant bacteria in the mouth and naso-pharynx. Many harmless bacteria reside in the mouth and naso-pharynx like normal flora and these often serve to crowd out bacterial germs which may cause disease.

Also, when antibiotics are used, the normal flora is often killed off as well, making it easier for antibiotic resistant, disease causing germs to survive and thrive.

At the same time, a family member or close contact can also become infected with germs that cause infections that are hard to cure.

Therefore, in otherwise healthy adults and children, over the age of two, an earache without a high fever or drainage from the ear canal can be managed at home with symptomatic treatment.

If after 48 to 72 hours symptoms do not resolve, one should consult their physician.

Way, Richardson properties may not get turbine zoning formed them the minutes of the meeting didn't include findings of fact, which are required under Michigan law.

The commission will now have to schedule another public hearing to discuss the wind monitoring tower and decide whether it fits with the township zoning ordinance.

Beishlag said he hasn't scheduled a date for the public hearing because there are three meetings he has to line up first.

The planning commission and members of the township board will meet with Graham to get a crash course in how to document and move forward with public hearings.

Then, Beishlag plans to meet with Leslie Sickterman of Traverse City's Gourdie-Fraser and Associates, the planner the township hired to help change its zoning ordinance.

After the commission has gathered information from Graham and Sickterman, it will approach representatives of Bay Windpower and explain the township's plans.

"I want them (Bay Windpower) to know what plans we have and that they can still apply for that area (the Way property) but they might not want to," he said.

Smiley said Graham has discussed the township's plan to create a district for the wind turbine generators, but has not been contacted about a specific location.

As of April 15, the company's request to have a wind monitoring tower placed on Way's property had not changed. Smiley said the district plan is just speculation.

"We want action on our wind monitoring tower as soon as possible and we don't think it's fair to be delayed. We still want to gather information at what we think is a better site in the township and that landowners ought to have the right to use their land in a responsible manner, for generating clean power. We're set up with agreements with landowners and would like to know if the wind is there; it would be useful information for us and others," Smiley said.

After the three meetings are complete, Beishlag said he will set a date for the public hearing. He anticipates being ready to set that date by the end of April with a May hearing scheduled.

It is likely that if the district is established, Eveline Township will be a location of wind turbine generators.

"We are allowing a fairly good size area and it's usable. We do have a landowner in that area who does want one (wind turbine generator)," Beishlag said.

AAA gives car, bike safety tips

As a rite of spring, bicycles and motor vehicles share the road more frequently. And while cyclists are responsible for following the proper rules of the road, drivers should be cautious around these vulnerable road "partners" to help keep cyclists safe, AAA Michigan advises.

"Crashes often occur because drivers are not looking for cyclists and cannot see them because of blindspots and lighting conditions," said Richard J. Miller, AAA Michigan Community Safety Services manager.

Some common cyclist errors that motorists should also watch for include wrong-way riding, riding out of a driveway without stopping, failing to yield to crossing traffic and failing to yield when changing lanes.

In 2000, there were more than 2,271 bicycle/vehicle crashes in Michigan. Twenty-nine cyclists were killed and another 1,860 were injured.

Here are tips for drivers:

- Visibility is a primary concern. Before heading into traffic, look down the road 12-15 seconds to see if any cyclists are ahead of you.
- Look for bikes when driving in a residential area. Youngsters could come shooting out of driveways without looking or be riding the wrong way against traffic. Children on bicycles are often unpredictable in their actions. Expect the unexpected.
- When sharing the road with cyclists, change lanes, if you have room. If not, move as far left as you can to give the cyclist extra space.
- Reduce your speed when passing a cyclist, especially if the roadway is narrow.
- When turning left at an intersection, yield to oncoming cyclists just as you would yield to oncoming motorists.
- After passing a cyclist on your right, check over your shoulder to make sure you have allowed adequate distance before merging back in. Experienced cyclists often ride 25-30 mph and may be closer than you think.
- In inclement weather, give cyclists more room, just as you would other motorists.
- Learn to recognize situations and obstacles which may be hazardous to cyclists, such as potholes, debris and glass. Then, allow cyclists adequate space to maneuver.
- Look for approaching cyclists before opening your car door.

Tips to help cyclists stay safe on the road include:

- Obey traffic signs and signals. Use hand signals when turning and stopping.
- Ride with the flow of traffic on the right hand side of the street.
- Be cautious going through intersections, pulling out of a driveway or changing directions. Most drivers aren't looking for cyclists.
- Always wear a helmet — they reduce the risk of serious head injury by 85 percent. Research concerning known helmet use in Michigan reveals that most people killed in 2000 chose not to wear them. Wearing helmets might have saved many of those lives.
- Attach a rearview mirror to your bike or bike helmet. You'll be able to see cars as they approach.
- Give cars and pedestrians the right-of-way.
- Wear light or bright-colored clothing and use safety flags to make yourself more noticeable.

"Children often engage in thrill-seeking and risky behavior on bikes," said Miller. "Parents must teach youngsters not to risk their safety."

In 2000, 14 cyclists under 16 years of age died in crashes with motor vehicles, 48 percent of the 29 total bicycle fatalities in Michigan. Nearly 970 children in that age group were hurt-52 percent of total injuries.

Baseball team looking good at start of season

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders baseball squad opened its season last week sweeping a doubleheader from Mancelona at home, 1-0 and 4-2, then splitting a pair at Cadillac, losing the opener, 12-9 but rallying to take the nightcap, 5-0.

Chris Loper had two hits and was the winning pitcher in game one against the Ironmen, striking out two in one-and-a-third innings of relief. Dennis Avery started and worked six-and-two-third innings, netting eight strikeouts.

Patrick Gowell doubled and scored the winning run for the Rayders, who only managed four hits. Gordie Lake managed the only other Charlevoix hit.

In game two, the Rayders got another solid pitching performance as Nate Teuscher went the distance, allowing only two runs and fanning five in his five innings of work.

Rob Boss had two hits including a two-run homer. Loper, Avery and Teuscher all had hits as well.

At Cadillac, the Rayders lost a slugfest in game one. Neil Friske took the pitching loss, but he walked and was two for three at the plate including a double. Teuscher was four for five and scored two runs.

Gowell, Avery and Loper all had hits for Charlevoix.

Coach Brian Certa praised the defense of Lake at third base.

In the nightcap, Loper picked up his second win of the young season dominating Cadillac hitters in a shortened game win, yielding only one hit and fanning seven in three innings of work.

Certa tagged Friske as the offensive standout in the game, with two singles that plated two runs. Avery, Matt Kilkenny, Matt Kochanny and Ben Speigl all added singles to the Rayder hit parade.

"We need to improve on the mental part of the game and our intensity," Certa said. "But that's to be expected this early in the season. We also need to improve upon our baserunning and knowing the strike zone as hitters, but I'm looking forward to watching the team improve as the season progresses."

The Rayders played at Maple City Glen Lake on April 16 but the results were unavailable at presstime.

Tennis team wins first match of year

The Charlevoix varsity tennis team beat Grayling at its first home match of the season April 11, 6-2.

"I was happy. It was a good way to start the year," said coach Erik Lundteigen. "We are doing some good things, but we certainly have a long way to go with making improvements."

Individual Charlevoix results were:

- Number one singles — Allen Brooks was beaten 6-1 and 6-2.
- Number two singles — Nate Turner won 6-2 and 6-0.
- Number three singles — Roscoe Serrels was beaten 6-4 and 7-6.
- Number four singles — Bill Foster won 6-0 and 6-3.
- Number one doubles — Mitch Klooster and Andrew Mailloux won 7-6 and 6-1.
- Number two doubles — Sparky Nitchman and Taylor Martin won 6-2, 0-6 and 6-3.
- Number three doubles — Josh Paggett and Cody Wheat won 6-1 and 6-3.
- Exhibition match — Lesley Pollard and Jim Dillworth won 6-3.

Soccer team takes invitational

The Rayders dropped their opening game to Petoskey on April 11, but rebounded April 13 by taking the championship of the Glen Lake Invitational.

In the opening game of the invitational, the Rayders dominated play with 23 shots, holding the Glen Lake Lakers without a shot opportunity.

Goals were scored by Shayna Drost, Kate Madison, Danielle Vogelheim and Libby Withrow. Assists were given by Madison, Vogelheim, Withrow and Kelly Zimmerman.

Charlevoix's all state candidate at sweeper, Jayme Murray, effectively controlled the day on the defensive end, helping Charlevoix shutout Glen Lake..

An improving Charlevoix team made the finals with a first round victory over Clare.

The Rayders again controlled the play with 28 shots to three for East Jordan.

. Goals were scored by Murray, Vogelheim and freshman Jaime Pettis. Assists went to Vogelheim, Withrow and freshman Sarah Cross.

Softball team opens season with losses

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders softball team opened its season last week with four losses, being swept by Mancelona, 8-4 and 5-1 and by Cadillac, 13-3 and 10-0.

Coach Liz Grunch said, "We're improving but it's been hard with the weather and not being able to get outside much."

Monica Cronell pitched well against Mancelona while Krystal Meredith keyed the hitting attack with four hits in the doubleheader.

Against Cadillac, Grunch said it was an uphill battle.

"They are a Class A team with very good pitching," Grunch said. "No one really hit well for us."

Natashia Kleiber was solid defensively at shortstop.

The Rayders travel to Maple City Glen Lake Tuesday for a doubleheader, but results were unavailable at presstime.

Huge development could be coming to townships

TOWNSHIPS

Knepp said the Hayes property was rezoned from A-1, agricultural to C-1 commercial this winter.

The Hayes Township property planned to be developed is located at the northeast section of the US-31 and Boyne City-Charlevoix Road intersection, surrounding the Bethany Lutheran Church and adjoined with the Vidosh Landscaping parcel.

The request for the hotel project, which was granted by the Hayes Township Planning Commission on March 19, was made by Dorian Lange on behalf of Lange Limited, LLC, of Eaton Rapids.

Planning commission chair, Marlene Golovich, said the commission approved the concept of the overall development and granted the hotel site plan approval.

Lange said each proposed site has to be approved by the township its planned for and the Hayes Township hotel is currently the only approved site.

Lange's next move is to request site plan approval of the senior housing and assisted living complex planned for property behind the church.

He has also proposed construction of an office facility southwest of the senior housing complex. A restaurant could be on the opposite side of the hotel entrance.

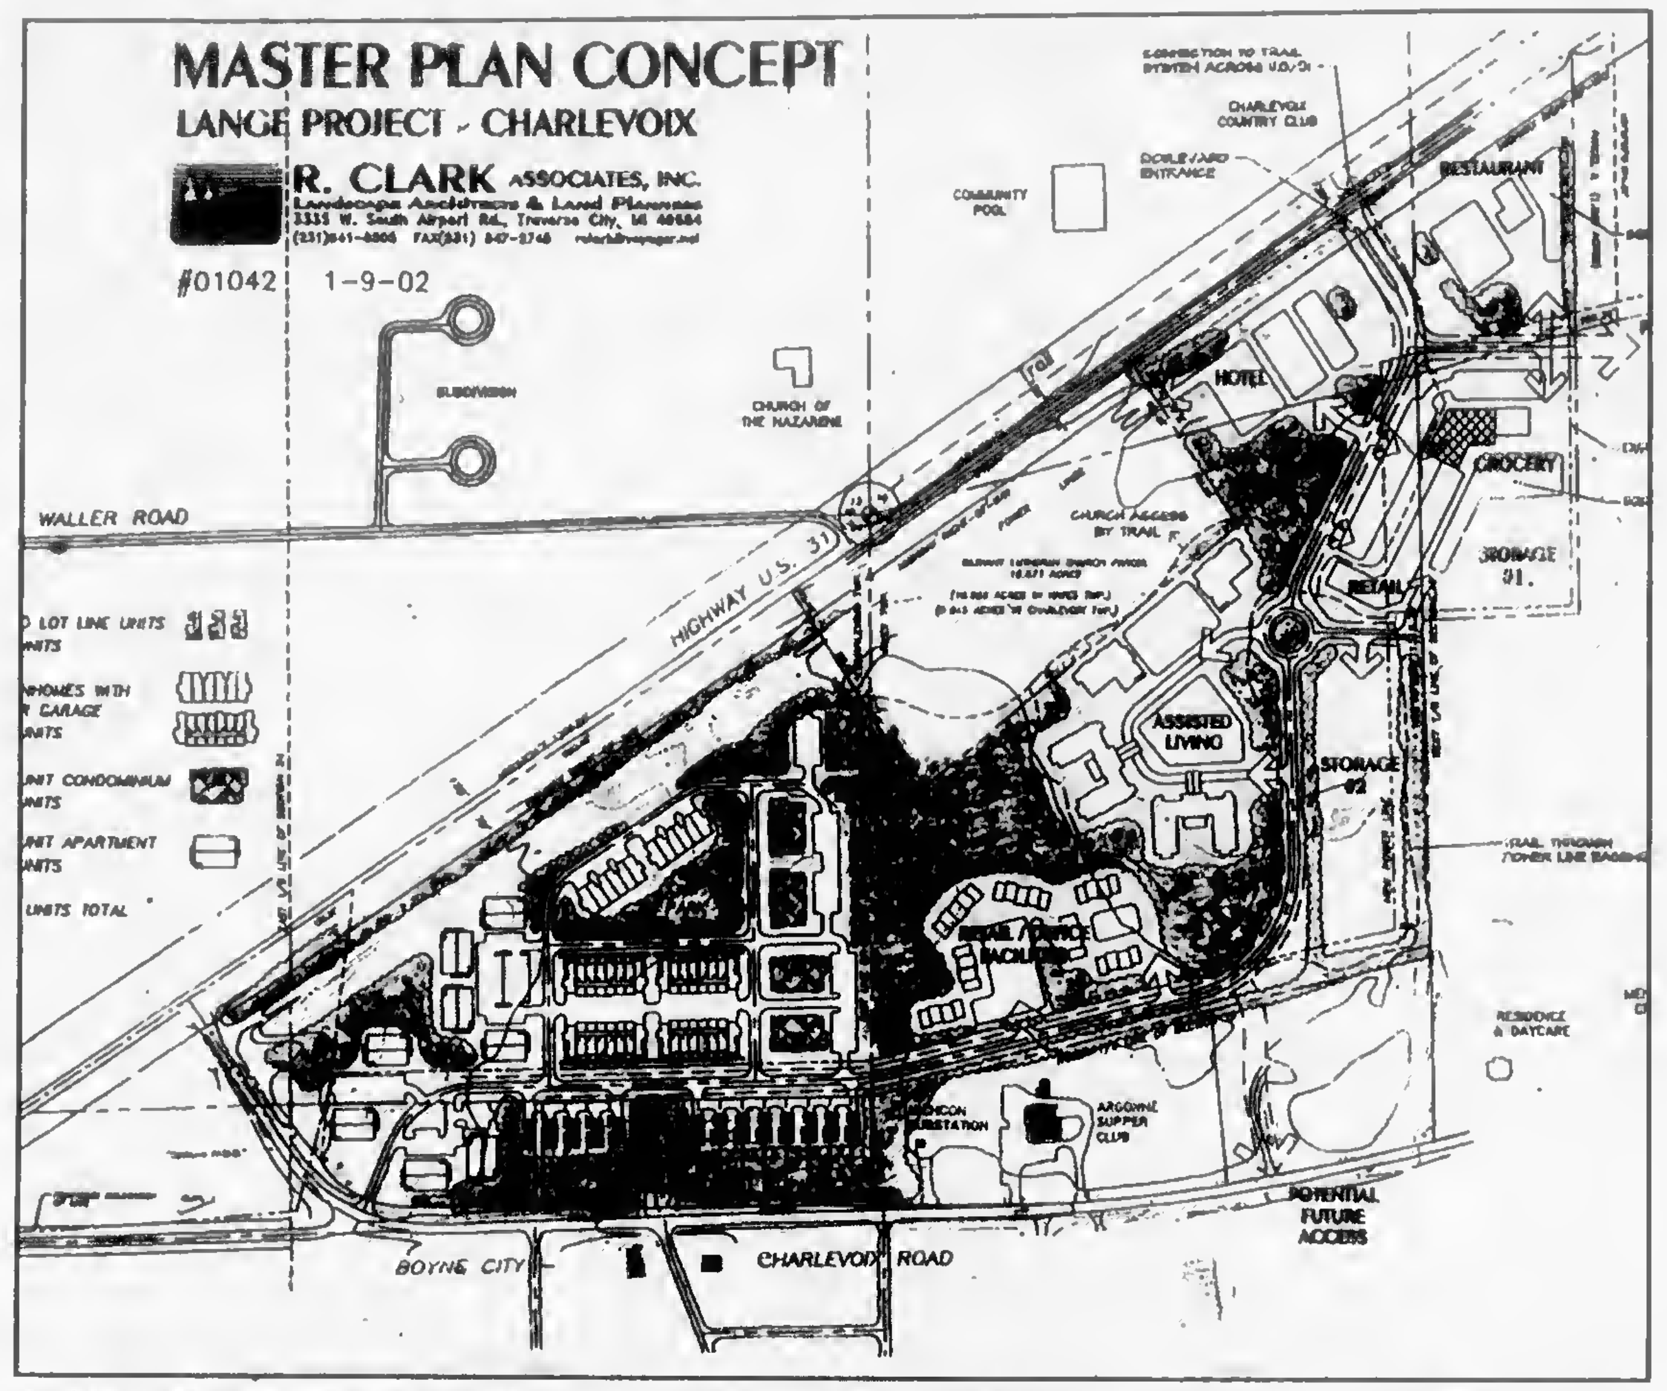
Plans also show a grocery store and a retail strip development located southeast of the hotel.

"It is anticipated that this will be a desired location for convenience retail, including video rental, dry cleaner, laundromat, insurance sales, real estate sales, etc.," Lange's development request for the hotel states.

Lange described the grocery store as a neighborhood shopping center that is 15,000 to 20,000 square feet, featuring "high end" products, including wines and meats.

The plan also shows apartments to be built over the Hayes Township retail strip center.

Behind the grocery store Lange has planned construction of self-storage units. The request states this storage area will be hidden from view by the retail and senior housing complexes.



This 73-acre development could be constructed along US-31 in Charlevoix and Hayes townships in the near future. (Courtesy graphic)

Soccer team rebounds after opening loss

SOCCER

Blanchard recorded her second shutout of the day in goal.

"It was a refreshing change from our less than stellar effort against Petoskey. The girls worked well together and are beginning to understand the team concept. We went in and effectively controlled the play. The girls deserve this first tournament win. We still have much work to do preparing for consecutive games against Suttons Bay on Tuesday, Harbor Springs and Elk Rapids," head coach Carol Madison said.

In the April 11 game, Charlevoix's lone goal was scored by Pettis, when a long ball up from Murray was redirected by Withrow to Pettis.

The Rayders held Petoskey to 2-0 at the half, but Petoskey's ability to substitute wore down Charlevoix in the second half. This was the first game or scrimmage of any kind for many new Charlevoix players.

Sophomore Brooke Blanchard made eight saves in her first game in goal for the Rayders.

LexaLite to sell city property, consolidate

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The recent downturn in the economy has prompted LexaLite International Corporation, one of Charlevoix's largest manufacturers, to consolidate.

According to Dale Troppman, vice-president of operations at LexaLite's Charlevoix location, the company is closing its site at 12555 Taylor Road in the city of Charlevoix to consolidate and do some "reevaluating."

He said the reason behind the close is, "economical," and pointed to new competition in the market, coming mainly from China and Mexico, and electronic changes as two factors impacting the economic climate.

But, even though the building itself is closing, the 10 employees who work there are staying on. In fact, Troppman said, no layoffs have come about at the Charlevoix location as a result of the sour economy. LexaLite currently employs 140 people.

The site's Taylor Road location was where research and development, special projects, photometrics and vacuum depositions took place. These services support their role in the global economy as leaders in manufacturing of quality lighting components.

The Taylor Road site functions, as well as its employees, will be transferred to the corporate site at 10163 US-31 North in Hayes Township.

Troppman said the company intends to put the Taylor Road site on the market.

Representatives of LexaLite came to Charlevoix City Council April 15 to request its equipment tax abatement be transferred from the Taylor Road location to the company's corporate location and for its property tax abatement to stay at that location.

Seven years ago, those abatements were granted by the city of Charlevoix for a 12 year period.

Council approved the request and LexaLite now needs to establish an industrial development district in Hayes Township and then ask for the township's approval of the abatement.

City manager Mike Wiesner told council in selling the property with a 50 percent property tax abatement the city may benefit by attracting another industrial company.

LexaLite has had a presence in Charlevoix for 39 years.

In Loving Memory...
RONALD WILLIAM HAGGARD
AUG 18, 1977-APRIL 27, 2000

One grief-filled, lonely day turns into a week. The week becomes a month, the months become a year; and now it is two.

We continue to miss and remember Ronald. How we wish that he was here with family and friends. Our hearts still ache with his absence. And yet, we celebrate his short life. We fondly recall his love of poetry and his many victories as a varsity wrestler for Charlevoix High School. We remember his laugh and sense of humor. Ronald loved motorcycles and he loved to hunt on Beaver Island. He loved his family and friends. And we love him.

May God bless Ronald and may Jesus cradle him in a tender embrace.

MERCHANT-POLAR BEAR GAME FRIDAY

FEATURE CONTEST CLOSES LOCAL BASKETBALL SEASON

Contest Between Charlevoix Merchants and Former Polar-Bears Expected to be Thriller

Present and former Charlevoix independent basketball team stars will match their ability in a feature contest scheduled for Friday evening, April 12th, at the high school gymnasium.

Marking the close of their 1939-40 season, the Charlevoix Merchants, current protectors of Charlevoix Merchants, current protectors of Charlevoix's independent basketball laurels, have booked a game with the once-famous Charlevoix Polar Bears, a team which in years not so distant, cleaved a glorious path in northern Michigan competition.

Thus the days when the combination composed of Dean Davenport, Floyd Brown, Glenroy Ikens, Ray "Stub" Kipke, "Bill" Supernaw, Howard Davenport and Carleton Ikens flourished mightily will be relived briefly (perhaps too briefly) on the local court Friday night.

That the former stars will have an advantage in weight is admitted, but whether they will be short of stamina and ability are subjects for conjecture. Regardless of these doubtful matters, it is a good gamble that the game will be an interesting one to witness.

There will be no preliminary game, the feature contest opening at 8 o'clock.

Editor's Note — Local drug stores, anticipating pressing demands, have ordered an extra supply of liniment.

HAVE UNIQUE WINDOW DISPLAY

Hamilin Bros. Window to Be Attractive One

As a follow up to their annual broom sale of Saturday last, Hamlin Bros. are planning on a unique and somewhat unusual window display for Saturday of this week.

During the afternoon Mont Wither's dog "Repeater" and her family of eleven puppies will be placed in the window of the store, which will be specially prepared for their reception.

This dog, by the way, recently broke the birth record of this section. About three weeks ago she gave birth to a litter of fifteen puppies, eleven of which are alive today. Her name, "Repeater," is a very proper one. If you should want further information regarding the dog's pedigree, ask Mont or Mike.

"Mike" believes in advertising. He believes "Repeater's" recent record should be known world wide, In placing the dog and her puppies in his window, he will attract the attention of hundreds of people. We wouldn't be at all surprised if something in the line of special prices would be offered.

At any event Mike's action will bear watching.

CITY ACCEPTS OLDHAM'S GIFT

SITE FOR MEMORIAL SHRINE IS MINERAL WELL

Artistic Fountain, Cannon, Monument and Flag Poles Features Of Attractive Scheme

At the council meeting last Monday evening the city council accepted by unanimous vote a proposition submitted by Mr. Harry L. Oldham to cede to the city the lot now owned by him on which the mineral spring stands, at the south east corner of Bridge and Antrim streets, and an additional parcel nine by eight-six feet, for the purpose of erecting thereon a county memorial, which shall be financed by public subscription and be jointly under the supervision of the city and county. The council also extended to Mr. Oldham a vote of thanks for his generosity.

The plan, in general, contemplates the removal of the present building over the mineral spring, the erection of a memorial fountain to the woman workers of the Charlevoix County Red Cross, a memorial to the veterans of the Civil War and the fallen heroes of the present struggle, a cannon for salutes, and at the corners and center of the park thus formed, which is to be enclosed, grassed, curbed with granite or stone and otherwise beautified, the erection of flag poles, bearing respectively the national colors, the city and county service flags and a flag on which a star will be placed for each soldier who dies in service to his country. This memorial is intended as a spot kept sacred and set apart for the purpose of honoring those who have gone forth from our community in the cause of justice and humanity, and to the end that each man, woman and child may feel that he or she has a share in this tribute of love and honor, subscriptions will be accepted, if only for a few cents always provided that the giving does not interfere with doing one's duty-by-the Liberty Loan and W. S. S.

It is a fine proposition and one that is worthy of all possible support. We have too long been "behind the lighthouse" in the matter of civic pride here in Charlevoix and this plan of Mr. Oldham's will give us a good chance to redeem ourselves. We expect to have further details for our readers in the near future, as work on the new project will be begun at once.

Motor Boat Capsizes; Coast Guard Drowned

Companions Suffering Shock From Exposure

One Coast Guardsman stationed at the Charlevoix Lifeboat Station was drowned and two others hospitalized as a result of a boating accident in Lake Michigan Tuesday.

William Witt, 21, Boatswain's Mate third class of Chicago was drowned near South Point when the boat in which he was riding capsized Tuesday noon. His two companions, Horace F. Stodt, BM1, who owned the 12 ft. boat, and Jack L. Powers, CS3, were rescued from the icy water after they had held on to their overturned boat for more than an hour.

Stodt and Powers were taken to the Charlevoix hospital for treatment of shock and exposure and were unable at the time to give an account of the accident.

The three men had gone out in Lake Michigan in the 12 ft. boat powered by 22 hp outboard motor for a pleasure spin during their lunch hour. They were seen by the man in the lookout at the lifeboat station and residents of the community who live along the lake. No one witnessed the accident and when the boat, which had been in the area of South Point disappeared from view, it was assumed that it had rounded the point.

Later when the men failed to return, the 30 ft. patrol boat which had been out in Lake Michigan on a trial run, was dispatched to the area. They found the men clinging to the bow of the capsized boat. They were immediately taken ashore and rushed to the hospital where their condition, on Wednesday, was said to be satisfactory.

It was not known exactly how long the men were in the water but it is believed that it was more than an hour before they were found shortly 2 p.m.

Dragging operations for the drowned man were initiated at once by the crew of the local life boat station and the 65 ft. cutter stationed here. Later they were joined by sheriff's officers, Michigan state police, former Coast Guardsmen living in the area and other volunteers. The search continued during the night when special lights were brought here from Traverse City.

The search had been unsuccessful at noon Wednesday.

At the time of the accident Lake Michigan was calm and there was little wind. It is not known how the accident which capsized the boat happened but according to boatmen it could have been a number of things. The men and their overturned boat were not seen from shore because they could not be sighted against the rocky terrain of South Point. The accident occurred east of the bell buoy at South Point, about 440 yards from shore.

Witt, who was to have been promoted to Boatswain's Mate second class on May 1, was a veteran of 2 1/2 years in the Coast Guard and had been stationed here for two years. He had become well known here as a member of the Coast Guard softball team.

A native of Chicago, where he was born April 11, 1936, he is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Witt of Chicago; one brother and a sister.

State police to investigate allegation

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Allegations of an open meetings violation by a Charlevoix County Commission committee were forwarded to the Michigan State Police for investigation last week.

According to Genna Beaudoin-Gent, spokesperson for the Attorney General, the report was given to the Michigan State Police for further investigation into allegations that the Charlevoix County Commission's Personnel Committee violated the Michigan Open Meeting Act at a late February meeting.

"We have asked them (the Michigan State Police) to review the facts of the case and determine if there is a need for us to prosecute," Beaudoin-Gent said.

She added this is standard procedure for this type of investigation.

Charlevoix County Commission Chair Phillip Johnson said he is just waiting for the findings by the Michigan State Police.

Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur, who reported the possible violation to the Attorney General's office, said, "I am hopeful that there will be a resolution to this conflict — that is between my legal opinion and the commission's legal opinion — so we know how to conduct ourselves according to law."

Kur added, "It is an issue that is important for all public bodies to have resolved. What I want most out of this is a definite decision on what the law is."

According to the allegations, the three member Personnel Committee had an unposted meeting in late February with a former employee of Kur's. While a representative of the Charlevoix County Clerk's office came to the meeting to take minutes, the committee members asked her to leave.

Members of the Personnel Committee are: County Commissioners Carl Price, James Behling and Don Smith.

The County Commission insists that the committee did not violate the law and has retained the services of Attorney Peter Patterson to fight any charges by the Attorney General that it violated the Open Meetings Act.

If these commissioners are found in violation of the act then they are guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000.

Get a spring cleaning on your teeth this month

It's time for a spring cleaning- and not just for the corners and closets of your house.

April is National Dental Health Month. TIPDON, Northern Michigan's Diabetes Outreach Network, reminds everyone, especially those with diabetes, to get their teeth cleaned this spring.

Cleaning your teeth regularly does more than give a shiny new smile — it's a way to protect your health.

High blood sugar levels cause people with diabetes to have more tooth and gum problems than people who do not have diabetes. Some tooth and gum diseases have no early signs — regular dental exams and cleaning can catch serious problems early. Developing a tooth or gum infection makes controlling blood sugar more difficult for those with diabetes.

If your teeth have not had a cleaning within the last 6 months, call your dentist today. It's time for a spring cleaning. When summer comes, having healthy teeth can make those garden vegetables and picnic foods even more enjoyable.

For more information about diabetes, call TIPDON, Northern Michigan's Diabetes Outreach Network, (800) 847-3665 or (231) 348-8596.

A treat from the trees

Local couple market own sweet syrup as a hobby

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix residents who are trying to figure out why on earth their neighbors have buckets hanging from the trees in their yard, need look no further than their breakfast tables.

The buckets are part of syrup production, a spring tradition in Charlevoix — from the Kiwanis Club's long run of manufacturing Charlevoix syrup to current residents still making a go of it.

From 1958 to around 1996, the Charlevoix Kiwanis Club would kick off spring by tapping maple trees in the city's right-of-way and then manufacturing, bottling and selling the local delicacy to help fund youth programs. In 1980, the club grossed about $3,000 in profit from syrup sales.

But, according to current Kiwanis president, Terry Edger, the trees started to age and weren't producing the 500 gallons they once did and it was time for the club to make a change.

Court sends sewer case back

Charlevoix Circuit Court must provide more information

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The case brought against the school district Oct. 12, 2000, by Kenneth Richard Tunison, Kenneth Staley, Robert G. Mossman, Paul Richards and Joseph Seidel, private Charlevoix residents, recently gained ground in the State Appeals Court.

On April 16, 2002, Judge Richard Allen Griffin, of the appellate court, entered an order remanding the case back to the Charlevoix Circuit Court for "further proceedings."

According to Ferguson, "The Court of Appeals is asking the circuit court to look deeper into new evidence regarding the sewer design and contractual agreements between the city, school and townships and to address issues regarding the misuses of school bond money for the sewer extension along Marion Center Road and the constitutionality of the school paying for a sewer designed to serve large residential and industrial/commercial development."

Griffin stipulated a timeline for rehearing the case with Pajtas submitting an opinion and order no later than June 11, 2001. Then, Olson's firm has to have its brief in 35 days later and the school has to have its brief filed 21 days later.

At the crux of the lawsuit is whether or not money from the $18.8 million bond district voters passed in 1999 can be used to extend the city's sewer to the site of the new high school.

On Sept. 14, 2001 in Charlevoix County's 33rd Circuit Court, Judge Richard Pajtas

Cost for Ironton Ferry coupon books go up

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Frequent users of the Ironton Ferry who purchase coupon pass books for bulk rider savings, will pay 40 percent more this year, causing some to question whether it's still cost effective to use it.

According to Cherie Browe, Chief Deputy Clerk with the Charlevoix County Clerk's office, the price of a book of 20 ferry passes increased from $25 to $35.

"$25 was not enough. It's $2 for a car to ride and there are 20 coupons in a book, paid separately that's $40; there was too big a difference. At $35 they're still saving by buying a coupon book," she said.

But Bob Hermann, a resident of Ironton and owner of Reh Acres Home Heating in Boyne City, said he's weighing whether it's worth it to him to pay almost $200 more this ferry season than he did last and the ferry could lose his business all together.

"It was a convenience all the years I've used it since 1997. Door-to-door, it was 12 miles using the ferry and $1.25 (the cost per ride with the old price per book) was affordable, I saved on gas, wear and tear on my car and time. Now, I'm looking very hard at whether it's worth it to use the ferry or if I would save to drive around," Hermann said.

The decision to increase the cost of the book was made at a meeting April 2 of the Charlevoix County Transportation Committee.

The committee is made up of Jim Behling, Charlevoix County Commissioner for the first district, Doug Way, Chairman of the Charlevoix County Road Commission, and Bob Winchester a member of the public who lives in Charlevoix.

Winchester was not at the meeting.

Behling said the group discussed the economics of running the Ironton Ferry, which has operated since 1883, and found they had no other recourse.

"We (the committee) had left the coupon books low for several years and we just finally had to raise them enough to cover costs because we don't have a very big surplus anymore. We did a lot of work there last year. It was just a necessity that we raised them," Behling said.

Last year, low water levels on Lake Charlevoix, where the ferry runs, made the county re-engineer its design to prepare for future water fluctuations. But the work hit the ferry's account hard.

According to Toni DeVries, assistant county treasurer, as of March, the ferry account was at $33,467.52.

Behling said he understood the concerns of those impacted by the increase.

"They are still a quarter less a ride, they're $1.75 — the normal fare is $2. I'm sure a few people will think its probably too much but hopefully they'll understand. The ones that use it the most are the ones we have it (the coupon book) for," he added.

But Hermann wants to know why local taxpayers, who Behling said most commonly purchase books, are the only users feeling the increase.

"Local people are carrying the burden," he said

"It's going to impact the small man — for carpenters, contractors and business owners, it's going to make the cost of living a lot higher. I don't understand why local people have to pay the brunt of this increase. I use the ferry two times a day, six days a week, I'm the first in line April 15 and Nov. 15.

Behling said an increase on all rides including cars and pedestrians wasn't considered.

Enough with the finger pointing

EDITORIAL

The actions surrounding the alleged Open Meeting's Act violation of the Charlevoix County Commission's Personnel Committee have been disappointing, to say the least.

Last March, the three members of the committee — Commissioners Jim Behling, Carl Price and Don Smith — were accused of having an unposted, special meeting by Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney Mary Beth Kur. The matter was sent to the state attorney general's office for review.

The bare facts of what happened are: These three commissioners, who make up the Personnel Committee, met with a former employee of Kur's on March 6 in an unposted meeting. It was suggested by Smith that a deputy clerk, assigned to take minutes of that meeting, leave and she did. Kur saw this meeting taking place, found out it was unposted and chastised the three commissioners in a regular County Commission Meeting for it. She then sent the matter to the state attorney general's office as any county prosecutor should do when faced with similar situations.

According to our interpretation of the Michigan Open Meeting's Act, this meeting was a clear violation. The act states a committee falls under the definition of a public body and therefore must post all of its meetings within a required time-frame.

The law is as simple as that.

Was it an oversight by the committee members? Probably. Did they mean to do it? Probably not.

In similar situations, the government body admits its mistake, someone takes the blame and the situation does not happen again.

But, not in Charlevoix.

Instead of saying, "We were wrong and we are sorry," our commission wants to fight the matter by saying the meeting may not have had to be posted and hiring an outside attorney, at taxpayer cost. By the way, no official charges by the Attorney General have been filed.

In addition to this, some of these commissioners had started pointing their fingers at everyone but themselves over the matter. First they blame Kur, then they blame the county clerk, Jane Brannon, and then they say the press isn't showing their side.

Gentlemen, the only people to really blame is yourselves. Kur did not have the unposted meeting, the county clerk did not have the unposted meeting and the press did not make up this unposted meeting.

The problem here was created by your actions, even if they were unintentional.

It is time to stop making excuses and to say you are sorry for what happened. It is time for county government to stop disappointing the citizens of Charlevoix.

Professor visits island to see its famed plant

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

Professor Roger Seymour and his wife Robin came from the University of Adelaide in South Australia to spend three weeks on Beaver Island at the end of March and the beginning of April.

They did not come for St. Patrick's Day and they did not come for the late winter cross country skiing. They came halfway across the world specifically to study the Eastern Skunk Cabbage, which grows on Beaver Island.

That plant grows in many places in Northeast North America, but nowhere are there bigger, older and healthier plants than on Beaver Island. An individual plant can live for more than 200 years and long, undisturbed swamps are the perfect place to find old ones.

I have written about Skunk Cabbage plants before, but it may be worth repeating their unique characteristics. When they bloom in very early spring they send up above the ground a purplish, horn-shaped flower structure that generates enough heat to melt the snow for six inches around it in all directions. Any single plant will generate heat for about two weeks and for most of that time, the flowers will maintain themselves at about 75 degrees — hot enough to warm your hand in the late March cold.

Professor Seymour wants to understand how the Skunk Cabbage plants do that.

Central Michigan University, which has a Biological Station on the island that is mostly used in the summer, was happy to provide the Seymours with housing and transportation during their visit. Island Airways was cooperative in helping to transport some elaborate equipment for measuring temperatures and rates of respiration. The information accumulated will help explain the activities of these remarkable plants.

If the plants are suddenly chilled to temperatures below freezing, they are able to increase the heat they produce and maintain their 75 degree temperature. No one in the world knew that for sure until two weeks ago when Professor Seymour made the first complete measurements.

This is not earth-shaking news, but at least three people in the world were very interested. Roger Seymour, myself and a Professor Wu in Japan have all spent years trying to understand the plants.

Professor Wu has a $1.5 million grant to pursue his studies and Seymour has funds from the Australian government for travel and equipment. Maybe we will figure it out.

From here, the Seymours are off to the island of Corsica in the Mediterranean, where they will be looking for a plant called the Dead Horse Arum. It too produces heat, but only for a short time.

The flower of that plant looks and smells like the south end of a horse that was going north when it died. There is no snow to be melted on Corsica, but the warm flower is of great interest to carrion flies.

It is good to know that there are people in the world who care about foul smelling plants and are willing to travel great distances and spend large amounts of money examining them. This research has no practical applications at the moment, but it is possible to think of splicing genes into other plants that might make them less susceptible to frost or capable of growing faster at cool temperatures.

The Seymours loved Beaver Island and their two days in Charlevoix. They will probably be back.

Dissappointed with coverage

Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to express my heartfelt appreciation to Ms. Marina LaBlanc and all the children of Charlevoix Elementary School for their outstanding musical performance on March 20.

I can only imagine the countless hours that teachers, students and volunteer parents spent in preparation of that patriotic tribute performed in front of hundreds of people. It is just unfortunate that those who were unable to get in the gymnasium door that evening, couldn't even read about this spectacular performance in our local newspaper, the Charlevoix Courier.

With the exception of the beautiful color photo of the fife and drum re-enactment on the front page of the Petoskey News-Review, taken by Mr. Randy Goss (thank you), the children were not even rewarded by seeing their pictures (correction: a few phone calls and a couple weeks later) or reading an article about their efforts and talents in our local newspaper. I'm sure many parents would have purchased that week's paper had the children from the elementary school been newsworthy.

What will it take to recognize the value of other students and events in the Charlevoix Public School System? I only hope it will not be something negative or tragic that will get the attention of this newspaper.

At a time when public schools are criticized for failing to educate, the 2002 Spring Musical was a truly wonderful example of what is right about education.

With the participation of members of each armed service and several veterans, the children of Charlevoix Elementary presented with pride to this community an outstanding evening of tribute to our country. It's just a shame that the Charlevoix Courier did not cover this event with the respect it deserved.

Comments on story

Editor:

Believe it or not, I remember that night in 1953 when the ref called steps on Deano (his dad's name was Dean) Davenport. I was 11 years old. I agree wholeheartedly with Deano; those were very exciting as well as foundational years for Charlevoix sports.

I was a 1960 graduate of Charlevoix High School and those guys that Deano talked about were my heroes during my growing up years.

Deano Davenport, Bill Mosier, the Swansons, the Walkers, the Mols, Bill Denemy, Tom LaBlance, Markie White, and on and on. But, in my opinion the best basketball player to ever lace 'em up for ole Charlevoix High School was William E. "Bobo" Bennett.

I will probably get some arguments from some of the more recent teams, but trust me he could have played with any of them. There just wasn't another player that could do more with a basketball and affect the outcome of a game like Bobo could. I think our teams of the late 50s and early 60s have their place in the history of Charlevoix successes. Our 1959 and 1960 football team won back to back state titles, going 16-0 in that two year span and our defense didn't allow an opponent to cross the goal line in 1959 and we only gave up 19 points in 1960. Our basketball teams from 1957-60 won 65 games and lost about six.

Our 1960 team went to the regional finals 20-0 before losing to Frankfort — a game we should have won, but as they say that is why you play the game. Charlevoix was best with coaches who not only cared for the players, but were students of the game themselves, and have all taken their place in the history of Charlevoix sports.

Stewart "Irish" Coleman, Ray Kipke, Don Carey, Del Terrell, all legends in their time. Some of the players from those late 50s early 60s teams are still around. Talk to Joe Beaudoin, Sam Supernaw, Bud Balch, Buddo Cross, John Martin, Jim Ladd, when he is in town, they can share some of our experiences as athletes growing up in Charlevoix.

They were fun times and especially on Tuesday and Friday nights during basketball season, we all laid it on the line for the Rayders, but then again that is what we were expected to do, because we had a tradition of holding up that of those guys before us, Deano and the gang.

Thanks Deano for sharing that article (March 20, 2002 Charlevoix Courier) and also thanks for all you contributed as an athlete and a role model for the youngsters growing up and and now for what you are giving back to the community that means so much to all of us.

Streets need work too

Editor:

I read in the Charlevoix Courier last night that article "Beaches getting significant improvements," and your editorial, "City beach projects great use of money."

As I watch the rains come down today, April 18, and the street in front of my house fill with water 8 inches deep, 75 feet long and the width of the street, I question the priorities that are set for our city taxes.

You cannot park in front of my home after a rain and driving can be hazardous. The standing water is a great place for mosquitoes to breed during the summer and it can be a fine place to skate during the winter. Because we cannot access the street on foot without rubber boots for several days after a rain, my family jokes about our lakefront property!

Prospect Street, between US-31 and Dixon, has been deteriorating for the 12 years I have lived here, as many streets in this city have. I have called both the city manager and the street department over the time I have lived here to inquire about repairs and was told that it is not in the budget. Just recently, it may be considered in the city master plan.

It is apparent, that in our city, the priority for our tax dollars goes to the show places and not the infrastructure that we use in our daily lives. Consistent street repair, I think, would be "A great use of (tax) money," to keep Charlevoix not only beautiful but also functional and safe.

Sexual Assault facts

Editor:

April is Sexual Assault Awareness Month. I would like to share with our community some facts on sexual assault and how all of us here in northern Michigan can be part of solving this violent crime that impacts hundreds of thousands each year in our country.

Sexual assault is an act of power and control. Seventy-eight percent of all rapes committed involve a perpetrator who knows, or has met, their victim. In Michigan, the legal term for sexual assault is criminal sexual conduct and is defined by actions of the perpetrator, not the victim.

Women, children and men are raped in our society. Although most sexual assaults are perpetrated by men, it's important to understand that only a small percentage of men in society commit this crime. Both men and women need to work together to stop this minority of men who abuse their power.

As responsible community members, we can offer support to survivors of sexual assault by believing them, holding offenders accountable and never accepting any excuses for the assault.

For sexual assault support services in your area, call the Women's Resource Center information line at (231) 347-0082 or (800) 275-1995.

Visualize a future free of sexual assault.

Man gets 18 months to 15 years in baby's death

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Juan Antonio Barcenas, 23, an illegal alien who most recently lived in Charlevoix, will spend a minimum of 18 months and a maximum of 15 years in prison for his role in the November 2001 death of 9-month-old Carissa Nicole Kuzmik.

The involuntary manslaughter sentence was delivered by Judge Richard Pajtas at 9:30 a.m., April 19 in Charlevoix County's 33rd Circuit Court. Barcenas has been incarcerated since Nov. 12, 2001. The 156 days he has already spent in Charlevoix County Jail will be credited to the sentence.

In sentencing Barcenas, Pajtas said he took into account the risk he poses to society and the potential of him harming other children.

Pajtas said Barcenas has had a history of aggressive behavior and difficulty controlling his anger, prompting him to include anger management training at the direction of the Michigan Department of Corrections in the sentence.

"The loss of life could have been avoided here. It's not a normal reaction, in attempting to resuscitate a child, to strike the child so hard in the stomach to cause that child's death," Pajtas said.

At the March 29 hearing when charges against Barcenas were reduced from first degree murder to involuntary manslaughter, Barcenas told Pajtas, the nature of the events leading up to his guilty plea.

"In the morning after I got up from bed, I fell down the stairs with the girl. She was on the floor and I picked her up and tried to help her, she was not breathing right I think. I struck her in the stomach, I was not feeling right, what I wanted to tell her was to breathe," Barcenas said through Ruth Gilmer, his court appointed interpreter.

Pajtas then asked whether Barcenas used excessive force when he struck the child in the stomach. Barcenas responded that he had.

The incident took place at the Kuzmik family residence, apartment 704 of the Pine Cove Apartments at 1001 May Street in the city of Charlevoix. Barcenas was the live-in boyfriend of Kuzmik's mother, Renee.

"I feel bad for what happened, that I couldn't do anything. But I miss the girls (Carissa's two sisters) very much and the girl that died. This is so very hard for me, I love them as my own daughters," Barcenas tearfully said to Pajtas in a statement made just before he was sentenced.

Barcenas was recently permitted to visit the child's grave under the supervision of Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater and Under Sheriff Don Schneider.

Barcenas' attorney, Christopher Turkelson said the visit was, "a very emotional experience for him."

In spite of Barcenas' claim that he fell down the stairs with Carissa and while trying to resuscitate her used excessive force resulting in her death, Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney Mary Beth Kur pressed for maximum sentencing.

"All accidents that result in death are not criminal, but this was. By the defendants admission he used excessive force that killed the victim. He was 10 times the baby's size. She paid a huge price for his mistake; she lost her life," she said.

The child's mother, Renee, said Barcenas was unfairly sentenced and should have been allowed to serve his sentence in Charlevoix County Jail.

Prior to his sentencing she made a statement to Pajtas on his behalf describing him as a father figure who loved her family "unconditionally."

"This man was to be my soul mate for the rest of my life. Now, because of an accident, I've lost one love. Do I have to lose another? We want to be a family and have a happy life with Juan," she said.

Pajtas told Renee, throughout this process, her affection for Juan was strong, but her credibility has been attacked and because of her emotional attachment to him, she may not have been candid with investigative authorities.

Renee said, "I've been honest from day one. He has never physically harmed me or my children in any way."

The first degree manslaughter charge originally brought against Barcenas carried an underlying felony predicate of first degree child abuse.

Barcenas can appeal Pajtas' decision. Turkelson did not return calls by press time concerning whether Barcenas planned to file an appeal.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service has a hold on Barcenas.

Library hires Youth Services Coordinator

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Amy Spegele, 25, of Charlevoix, the new youth services coordinator at the Charlevoix Public Library, has planned fun reading activities for students to participate in this summer.

"I think it's important to get children in the library and away from the TV. Reading will help them in school, especially reading over the summer. They (experts) say, children who don't read during the summer are actually behind when they start school," Spegele said.

In an attempt to alter this trend, Spegele crafted a plan that should keep kids on track with learning while still enjoying their summer.

The curriculum she's outlined is educationally oriented with a ton of entertaining learning activities wrapped in.

Elementary age students are invited to join the program any time during the six week reading program slated to begin in late June. That means, elementary school age, Charlevoix visitors, from anywhere across the globe, can partake.

Students involved in the elementary program will have the opportunity to be involved in presentations given by Charlevoix County Human Society Education Coordinator, Carol Huebotter, and by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department Canine Unit. Other events planned include, craft nights and an end of the session party.

All that's required of the elementary students, is some light reading with a parent, family member or friend and weekly progress reports at the library.

Children in grades five, six and seven will be admitted to a second, six week program, in which they're required to read a book.

The middle school students will be given the opportunity to earn points to make them eligible for an end of the session prize package that will offer gift certificates for Charlevoix stores.

This program will also feature a career theme.

Spegele has planned a trip to the city of Charlevoix Fire and Emergency Medical Service Station and one to the beach to see a lifeguard in action. She also plans to have a presentation by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Canine Unit and a tour of the United States Coast Guard buoy tender, Acacia.

These students will also have an end of session party fully equipped with an ice cream sundae bar.

While older children are learning to read and coming into contact with the world around them, parents can also get their babies started in the library's summer reading program.

No, Spegele doesn't intend

Lillian Isabelle Cole: Oct. 19, 1925 - April 14, 2002

Lillian "Lil" Isabelle Cole, 76, died at her home on Beaver Island on April 14, 2002.

Lillian was born on Beaver Island on Oct. 19, 1925, to Hugh and Catherine (Malloy) Connaghan, the eleventh of 14 children.

She served on the board of Beaver Island Community School for many years, was active in the Parish of Holy Cross Catholic Church and offered her nursing skills to countless residents and island visitors over the decades through the Medical Center near her home. In many ways she worked quietly for the betterment of her community and the care of those she was able to touch.

She is well remembered by all those who were privileged to know her for her humble graciousness, warmth and loving kindness that she extended to all. Her family, relatives and friends were inspired by her devotion to her faith and her principles, and her tireless commitment to her family.

She will be greatly missed by all whom she touched and her family and community are deeply grateful for the honor and gift of her presence in their lives.

She was preceded in death by three sisters, Bridget Marie Backus, Melvina Harmon and Frances LaFreniere; and four brothers, Raymond, Leroy "Roy," Gene and John "Jack" Connaghan.

She is survived by one brother, Lester; five sisters, Victoria "Vickie" McDermott, Catherine "Georgie" Gatliff, Anna Mae Maxwell, "Lila" Selfridge and Marguerite "Muggs" Welsh; her husband, Donald; children, Hugh, Raymond (Nina), James, Laurel (Tim) O'Guin, Garrett (Pam), Thomas, Paul (Shirley), Robert and Brian; and three grandchildren, Micaela Grace, Mackenzie Rae, and Marlaina Lillian.

A Funeral Mass was given on April 20, at Holy Cross Church on Beaver Island followed by interment at Holy Cross Cemetery.

Memorial contributions may be made to Holy Cross Church, Box 145, Beaver Island MI, 49782.

Isabel Corwin: May 4, 1912 - April 13, 2002

Isabel (Payne) Corwin passed away on April 13, 2002, surrounded by her loving family.

Isabel was born May 4, 1912 and married Loren L. Corwin Sr. on July 20, 1935.

She resided in Lansing as a loving mother and wife until 1963, when Loren retired from GM Oldsmobile and they purchased the Silver Birch Motel in Charlevoix.

Isabel lived in Charlevoix until 1991 when she moved to the Detroit area to be closer to her daughters after Loren's death.

Her husband Loren Sr., sister Aileen Jenks and brothers Cliff, Ab and Ralph Payne, preceded her in death.

She is survived by her five children: Lois (Larry) Payne from Florence, Ky.; Loren Jr. (Pat) Corwin of Petoskey; Barbara (Gary) Villeneuve from Brownstown; Jacquelyn (Ray) Kaipio of Woodhaven and Ralph Corwin of Ellsworth.

She is also survived by a sister-in-law, Addie (Ralph) Payne, of Petoskey. Isabel had 13 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren who will miss her deeply.

A viewing and memorial service took place April 20 at the John Molnar Funeral Home in Brownstown. A burial took place at noon April 22 at Brookside Cemetery in Charlevoix.

Memorials to honor Isabel Corwin are requested for Alzheimer's Association at 17220 West 12 Mile Road, Suite 100, Southfield, MI 48076.

Snow way

Mother Nature reminded Charlevoix residents that they still live in northern Michigan and the weather can do some funny things in the spring on Monday, with a coat of fresh snow after a week of 80 degree weather. (Photo by Jeremy McBain) to create literate infants, but does want to enhance their speech capabilities through her "Lap Sit" weekly reading hour.

Lap Sit is for children from one day old to two years of age and is scheduled to take place on Thursdays this summer, starting in early June.

All of the aforementioned summer reading programs are free of charge.

Spegele has worked with youth groups at the First Congregational Church of Cheboygan, her home town. There she headed the children's Christmas and Easter presentations, took the students on field trips and also helped organize parties.

She most recently worked for Petoskey Cardiology.

Spegele accepted the youth service coordinating position, to spend more time with her seven-month-old son, Aaron. She is balancing being a mom, working at the library and taking classes to earn her master's degree in social work from North Central Michigan College.

She currently has an associate's degree in psychology. After earning her master's she is hoping to return to school for a second degree in Play Therapy.

For more information about summer reading programs, contact Valerie Meyerson, Director of the Charlevoix Public Library, or Spegele at (231) 547-2651 or stop in at 109 Clinton Street in downtown Charlevoix.

Local Ford dealership expands its building

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Pat McKeown recently opened a major new expansion at his Ford dealership on US-31 South, that was built using many local builders and contractors.

McKeown said the expansion to the 20-year-old business took about three months to complete. Now that it is done, it adds 5,500 square feet to the dealership, bringing the building's total square feet up to 22.5. Renovations were also done on the showroom and all of the offices.

"I decided to do this about a year-and-a-half ago. We've been here for 20 years and the building was definitely dated," McKeown said.

The expansion also created a new quick oil change department and a full service tire department. These new services have added three more jobs to the business, making a total of 25 full time employees at Pat McKeown Ford.

McKeown said he decided that most of the workers on this expansion should be from the Charlevoix area when it came time to start. While he had to hire an out-of-area general contractor to oversee the project, McKeown said he put in a stipulation that every job within the project would be bid out to local workers and contractors first.

"Even if they (local contractor's bids) had been a little higher, I still would have used local people," he said.

McKeown ended up with 12 local people working on the project, taking over all areas of the job with the exception of the general contractor and some specialized cement work done on the outside of the building.

To celebrate completion of the work and being in business in Charlevoix for 20 years, McKeown hosted a special grand opening celebration April 17, complete with food, refreshments and musical entertainment.

McKeown came to Charlevoix in November 1981 to buy-out the Ford dealership. In January 1985, he officially bought the franchise from the Erber family.

Track season underway

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix High School track teams were busy with meets last week.

On April 18, the boys' team beat a highly ranked Benzie team 77-60. Benzie was the runner up in the state finals last year.

The girls' team lost to Benzie 60-72.

Boys' coach Ken Plude said the team did very well, considering Benzie is very strong. He said the event that really put them over the top was the two mile relay.

Ken Plude said the relay team ran under the qualifying mark for a tournament meet. Considering this is the regular season and the boys' legs are not as strong as they are later in the season, this is a great accomplishment.

"The rest of it was just a really good showing," he said.

Assistant girls' coach Mary Plude said the team did not stack against Benzie in this meet, meaning team members did not compete in as many events.

She said this was to give some of the runners a break, due to a hectic schedule this week. Charlevoix has three meets to take part in this week.

Individual results for the meet are:

Boys

- 3200 relay — Charlevoix in first with a time of 8 minutes, 18.45 seconds.
- 100 meter hurdles — Spencer Bryan in first and Ethan Winchester in second.
- 100 meter — Jeff Urban in first.
- 800 meter relay — Charlevoix in second with a time of 1 minute, 40.98 seconds.
- Long jump — Jeff Urban in first and Brian Christianson in second.
- High jump — Scott Parrish in second.
- Discus — Landon Brown in first and Kyle Dobrowolski in second.
- 1600 meter — Gordie Selph in first and Josh Popenhagan in second.
- 400 meter relay — Charlevoix in second with a time of 50.49 seconds.
- 400 meter dash — Peter Gorkiewicz in second.
- Shot put — Josh Carter in second and Brown in third.
- 300 meter hurdles — Selph in first and Spencer Bryan in third.
- 800 meter run — Gorkiewicz in third.
- 200 meter dash — Bryan in third.
- Pole vault — Kramer in first and Winchester in second.
- 3200 meter run — Tim Daining in second and Popenhagan in third.
- 1600 meter relay — Charlevoix in first with a time of 3 minutes, 43 seconds.

Girls

- 3200 meter relay — Charlevoix in first with a time of 11 minutes, 56.39 seconds.
- High jump — Amy Drew in first.
- 100 meter dash — Katie Leiberman in third.
- Shot put — Sierra Whisler in second and Kelly Way in third.
- 800 meter relay — Charlevoix in second with a time of 1 minute, 57.07 seconds.
- Pole vault — Lexi Wilson in first.
- 1600 meter run — Liz Ulrich in first, Katie Swenor in second and Jennifer McClellan in third.
- 400 meter relay — Charlevoix in first with a time of 54.81 seconds.
- 400 meter dash — Liz Madison in second and Theresa Martin in third.
- 300 meter hurdles — Jake Mailloux in first.
- 800 meter run — Brenna Bergmann in first.
- 200 meter dash — Jenny Miller in second.
- 3200 meter — Ulrich in first and Swenor in second.
- 1600 meter relay — Charlevoix in second with a time of 4 minutes, 50 seconds.

On April 16, both Charlevoix teams won over Harbor Springs and East Jordan. The boys' team had 80 points and the girls' team had 73.

A highlight of the meet was Lexi Wilson's pole vault of 8 feet, 9 inches. Not only did she beat her personal best on this jump and beat all of the jumpers on the boys' team, but she also beat the school record.

Rayder Baseball drops doubleheader

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

Charlevoix finished its preparation for the Lake Michigan Conference schedule by dropping a doubleheader at Maple City Glen Lake, 19-8 and 5-4, then placing second in its own Charlevoix Tournament, beating Grayling, 11-4 and losing to Petoskey in the finals, 3-2.

The Rayders were manhandled in the opener against the Lakers, as hurler Chris Loper suffered a rare off-day, yielding 10 runs in three innings of work to take the loss.

Nate Teuscher led the hitters with a 3 for 3 game at the plate, including a double and a homer. Neil Friske and Matt Kochanny each were 2 for 3 with Friske adding 2 RBI.

Dennis Avery drove in three runs with a home run.

In the second game, the Rayders rallied from a 4-1 deficit to tie the game, but couldn't pull out the victory.

Avery took the loss, giving up four runs on seven hits and two walks in almost four innings of work. He tripled and drove in two runs.

Chris Loper had two hits while Teuscher, Matt Kilkenny, Rob Boss, Kochanny and Ben Speigl had one hit apiece.

In the opener of its annual tournament, Charlevoix used an 11 hit attack to beat the Vikings.

Boss led the way with three hits, including a round tripper and three RBI. Avery also had three hits, scored three runs and had two RBI and a homer.

Kilkenny was 2 for 3 with 2 RBI. Loper, Kochanny and Friske also added hits for the Rayder cause. Loper scored three runs.

Soccer team loses opening league match to Suttons Bay

The Charlevoix girls' soccer team lost their opening league match by a score of 3 to 0, to Suttons Bay, April 16.

According to head coach Carol Madison, the heat and strong winds made playing conditions difficult for both teams this early in the season.

The Rayders received strong performances from a trio of freshmen, Sarah Cross at stopper, Madison McKenzie at right back and Jaime Pettis at forward.

Sophomore keeper Brooke Blanchard came into her own with 21 saves in goal. Senior Elissa Wood also showed great improvement with runs at forward and midfield.

"We learned a great deal from this loss, especially with regard to continuing our conditioning regimen. Because of our low numbers, we have to be in better condition than the teams we play. We are especially encouraged with the rapid progress of the younger players who have replaced last year's graduated seniors," Madison said.

Baseball team to open conference play

BASEBALL

Teuscher picked up the win in relief, going over four innings and giving up only one earned run on three hits and three walks while striking out six.

In the championship game, Loper was out-dueled by Petoskey's hurler as Charlevoix and Petoskey combined for only five hits.

Loper went the distance (over five innings) giving up only two earned runs on three hits. He walked only one, striking out seven. Petoskey plated the winning run in the bottom of the sixth inning, breaking a 2-2 tie.

Avery had both Rayder hits, scored one run and drove in the other.

Coach Brian Certa said, "Loper pitched a great game, but didn't receive enough help on the offensive end. This tourney was good for us in preparing for our league games."

Charlevoix opens conference play this Thursday at East Jordan.

Kids Corner to have 'Bring-A-Bike Day'

St. Jude Children's Research Hospital and Mary Beth Zimmerman with Kids Corner Nursery in Charlevoix have agreed to conduct a "Bring-A-Bike Day" Trike-A-Thon with its pre-schoolers.

This event, now in its seventeenth year, was developed by St. Jude Children's Research Hospital with the help of early childhood development specialists.

The "Bring-A-Bike Day" Trike-A-Thon raises funds to continue the hospital's programs of research, patient care, and education into childhood cancers and other catastrophic diseases. What makes this event so unique is that it is designed to expose pre-schoolers to using riding toys safely through a week-long fun activity and provides a parent-awareness program that involves the parents in safe behavior practices to help ensure their child's well-being.

Cancer is the leading disease killer of American children and St. Jude Children's Research Hospital is the leading cancer center for the conquest of these killers. Yet as dreadful as childhood cancers are, accidents kill far more children every year.

But, unlike cancer, whose cause and prevention is as yet unknown, most accidents can be prevented through safety education starting at an early age.

Accidents involving children on bicycles, tricycles, and other popular riding toys are a major cause of death and injury of your children. Knowing that the lack of training is the most frequent contributing cause, it is our intent that the "Bring-A-Bike Day" Trike-A-Thon will provide a direct, immediate benefit for the pre-schoolers and their parents.

Any further pledges can be sent to 510 E. Spring Street, P.O. Box 1313, New Albany, Ind. 47150-1313.

Couple get idea for hobby from Kiwanis

SYRUP

The club now buys the syrup wholesale, boils it, bottles it and sells it in local grocery outlets including Glen's and Oleson's in both Petoskey and Charlevoix.

While city trees are no longer being tapped, at this time of year, at the Rocky Ridge Farm owned by Betsy and Doug Reynolds — on the north side of Charlevoix Township — you'll find a mature maple forest decorated with buckets.

Betsy and her husband Doug have welcomed the last 12 spring seasons by tapping into the sweet, sticky sap that runs through the veins of the maple trees on their property.

In 1990, the couple were making their way through downtown Charlevoix when they saw the Kiwanis Club messing with the maples on the city's right-of-way.

Sure enough, club members were out there draining the trees of their delicious, authentic, sweet maple sap.

"We saw Kiwanis doing it, with buckets on the trees and we thought, 'We have all these maples, why don't we try it,'" Betsy said.

So she headed over to the Charlevoix Public Library, did a little research and became a maple syrup producer that next year, 1991.

For their first year, Doug carved the "spiles" — the apparatus you hook into the holes drilled into the trees — out of pine. He said this was the way the Native Americans did it and this was the way he thought it should be done.

The Reynolds' spiles have since been changed to plastic, but the process they use is authentic.

They make sure to protect their trees by drilling holes six inches away from where they drilled in previous years.

The sap trickles through the spiles. It looks and tastes like sweet water in its pure form.

Then, after the sap has been collected, things start to get messy — not messy like the sticky situation syrup consumers are used to — the mess is created by water. There is intense boiling involved to extract the water from the sap. The temperature has to reach almost 220 degrees to get the desired result.

Needless to say, the Reynolds operation quickly became an outdoor event.

"The moisture builds up so bad in the house," Betsy said.

The Kiwanis Club used to operate out of a sugar shack on property donated to the cluh hy Kit Carson on Carson Avenue.

The boiling process is one instance Doug doesn't employ traditional Native American practices. He explained, Native Americans used to drop fire heated stones into the hollowed log vats filled with sap. Then they would harter with the syrup.

Doug cuts and splits wood to heat a large metal basin holding the sap.

Boiling is a veteran's strong point and an acquired skill. Betsy said she's mastered the point when the sugar, water substance becomes syrup. And offered readers this tip — foam is a sure sign you're minutes away from syrup.

But the Reynolds' know not to be tempted to walk away during a boil, there's skimming to be done, which removes sedimentation and foam.

After it's reached this syrup point, you let it settle. The sugar sand will drop to the bottom.

Betsy said you boil 40 gallons of sap to get one gallon of syrup. The trees on the Reynolds property produce about 120 gallons of the sap "on a good day," grossing only 4 gallons of the sweet treat.

The whole process ends up taking them about 80 hours of hard work. But both say it's worth it.

"It's worth the effort; it's the first thing we do in spring; it gets us outside and it's fun to sit around out there and talk," Doug said.

Just as the Kiwanis operation was a community event with local students coming out in droves to help collect buckets, anxiously awaiting their first taste of syrup, sap processing at the Reynolds' is a family event.

The Reynolds' children and grandchildren make their way to the farm for a weekend boil off party. Betsy said their grandson Douglas even helped drill the holes and strain the sap this year.

Doug and Betsy said this year's syrup production was mediocre due to the late, cold weather — but they still produced 24 quarts which have been canned and will soon wear the family lahel, "Made for friends and family at Rocky Ridge Farm."

Commissioners respond to allegations

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Members of the Charlevoix County Commission, accused of violating the Michigan Open Meeting's Act, say their side of the story is not getting out and they did not knowingly do anything wrong.

Commissioners Jim Behling, Carl Price and Don Smith issued a statement last week about the County Personnel Committee — which they are all members of in addition to the commission — March 6 meeting with a former employee of the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's office, John Jarema.

When questioned why he had a special meeting, Behling said the committee was simply meeting with a county citizen who had some complaints. He said there was no room to fit Jarema in during the committee's regular meeting the next day and Jarema had a conflict with that time anyway.

Behling said the committee would be willing to have a special meeting with any citizen of the county who had a complaint.

The meeting was a day before the committee's regular meeting and was not posted within the 18 hour required window as stated by law.

According to the statement, Behling, who chairs the committee, informed the Charlevoix County Clerk's office of the special meeting around 3 p.m. However, the statement says, the clerk's office did not post the meeting and did not tell Behling or other members of the committee that it wasn't posted.

The statement also says Charlevoix County Clerk Jane Brannon assigned a deputy clerk to attend the meeting and take minutes.

"The meeting was held in a room in the county building, the door of which had a window. When all were in attendance, it began. Not only were the commissioners and Mr. (John) Jarema not aware that the meeting had not been posted, because the clerk's office had arranged for the room, had assigned a deputy clerk to take minutes and had provided documents for use at the meeting, everything appeared normal," the commissioners said in the statement.

However, Smith suggested that the committee could be more open if the deputy clerk was not present and offered to take minutes himself. Smith and Price said they did not have a problem with the deputy clerk's presence, however she left the meeting, according to the statement.

Behling said he is not trying to place the blame on the county clerk.

"If we would have known it wasn't posted, we could have had the meeting a couple of hours later," Behling said.

However, Brannon said this is not the case.

She said Behling did not inform her until 3:30 or 4 p.m. that day, which was past the legal posting time for a special meeting.

Brannon added she told Behling they were "making a big mistake" by having the meeting.

"Obviously, they should have listened," she said.

Brannon said she secured a room for their meeting and assigned a deputy clerk to take minutes so "at least this way we would have a record of what happened."

"Not in my wildest imagination did I think they would ask her to leave," Brannon added. "I refuse to accept the blame for them."

Furthermore, the statement said Charlevoix County Assistant Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur noticed the meeting taking place. Later she chastised the committee for having the unposted meeting and informed the Michigan State Attorney General of it.

The statement questioned why Kur did not do anything that day.

"If she thought something was wrong, we believe that she had a duty to come in and find out what was going on and to advise us. However, rather than enter, which she was free to do, she went to the clerk's office, inquired whether the meeting had been posted and was advised that it had not been. She did not return to the meeting room while we were there," the statement said.

Behling said, while the committee was not blaming the clerk's office, it is "pushing it off on the prosecutor."

"She should have notified us we were doing something illegal," he said.

However, Kur said she did not notify them at the time, because she did not find out the meeting was unposted until after it was over.

"There was not enough time to go up there and say anything," she said.

Kur added this is just another case of these commissioners trying to place the blame for the meeting elsewhere.

"For the life of me, I can't understand why none of these people have stood up and said they made a mistake," she said.

Behling added, if the meeting was illegal, he will accept the fault for it and the whole committee should not be blamed for it.

"It boils down to a slight oversight and some reactions that were out of line," he said.

However, the committee's statement argues they may have not even broken the law with the meeting.

"We have since learned that whether a committee meeting must be posted under the Open Meetings Act is not as clear as we had thought and there is good reason to believe that the meeting of March 6 was a meeting which did not have to be posted," the statement said.

Brannon added, "I think this is too bad. It isn't going to help anything. I have been in office for 29 years and I guess I hold the commission in the utmost regard and I could not imagine anything like this would happen."

> "If we would have known it wasn't posted, we could have had the meeting a couple of hours later."

Price: It is time for commission to move on

One of the Charlevoix County Commissioners on the Personnel Committee said it is time for the controversy of its March 6 meeting to end.

Price said he will be making a statement to the commission at its regular meeting 7 p.m., tonight, Wednesday, in the Charlevoix County Commissioner's room in the county building. He said he wanted to say this on April 11, but the two other commissioners on the committee with him — James Behling and Don Smith — wanted to add more to his statement.

"I was trying to get both commissioners to agree, but they wanted to add more about posting blame and whose fault it was. But, I didn't think we needed all that. It just wasn't done properly," he said.

Price said he will be making this statement at the commissioners meeting as his own if Behling and Smith don't want to be a part of it.

In part, he said, "(The Personnel Committee) has been subject of much public debate. I believe public business should be done in the public. In holding the meeting we did not intend to violate the law or circumvent anyone. If we knew what we know now, we would have done things differently."

Price added, "I just want this thing to get over with so we can get on with business."

Appeals Court wants more information

COURT

ruled to dismiss the school from the plaintiff's claim that the school's use of bond proceeds to construct the sewer was unconstitutional.

Jim Olson, of Olson and Bzdok in Traverse City, the firm representing the five plaintiffs, filed a claim of appeal with the State of Michigan Court of Appeals on Sept. 27.

Ferguson said when Pajtas rehears the case, her firm plans to argue precedent set in an attorney general case where a school system paid for power lines to be run to one of its facilities.

"In response to the school's brief (filed in the appeals court) we brought attention to the attorney general's opinion and said, "Look, they (Charlevoix) are trying to do the same thing and the attorney general found it to be unconstitutional,'" she said.

The "new evidence regarding the sewer design" Ferguson alluded to, is related to changes made to the sewer line's design.

On Jan. 4, 2002, the city received notification from David Porter of the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality, pointing out possible problems related to using an 8 inch gravity sewer system near the school.

The city responded by altering the design to use a four inch force main line for 1,050 feet. However, when it came time for the Marion Township Planning Commission to consider the project, the city's design had reverted back to use of the 8 inch line with a 4 inch force main run alongside.

City Manager Mike Wiesner said the current design doesn't constitute a change from the original.

"I don't think it was a change in design. It's just a matter of closing two valves and opening two others," he explained.

But, the city's decision to operate on the 8 inch system, instead of the 4 inch, sparked the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association, an environmental group whose membership includes the aforementioned plaintiffs in the lawsuit, to contest the issue with the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality.

Wiesner said the city is waiting to hear from the MDEQ before moving forward with the sewer extension, but the lawsuit pending in the Michigan Court of Appeals isn't a factor for the city.

"That's really a school issue. We have a contract with the school. They agreed to reimburse the city," he said

But, Ferguson said the lawsuit could end up being a problem for the city.

"They're taking a huge risk and if the judge rules in our favor they may have to tear it out. If he (Pajtas) rules in our favor, the school may want to continue the appeal but, the whole posture of the case has changed," she said.

In the meantime, the new high school is nearing completion.

Dr. John Sturock, superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools said the district expects to complete the school in July. The academic area is nearing completion, with carpeting being installed in the next couple weeks. Teachers will be moving furniture in by the end of June.

The auditorium, the commons area and the food service area are scheduled for completion in August.

Sturock said the building is right on schedule and the opposition voiced by the environmental group and the private residents of Charlevoix, "Doesn't set the school schedule off."

Baseball team returns nine

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

With nine players returning, and most of them starters from last year, Charlevoix varsity baseball coach Brian Certa is looking forward to a very successful season.

This large number of returning players also gives Certa a nice pool of talent to pick from, most notably in pitching. He has six strong pitchers to pick from this year.

Added to the skills that spectators can see coming from the mound is a very strong defense and several players that had good hitting statistics last year. Certa expects them to carry those numbers over to this year.

"We will be growing stronger as the year goes," Certa added.

This growth will he even more important for the team's offensive game and outfield positions.

While his infield is strong, Certa said his outfield is lacking experience, but he believes that will improve as the season progresses.

To help him guide the team to success, Certa will be looking for great leadership from many of the players, most notably the three team captains: Dennis Avery, Nate Teuscher and Chris Loper.

Avery is known as a player who has skills at many positions, along with Teuscher. Certa said he can put these two players pretty much anywhere on the field and get a good game out of them.

Loper is one of Certa's best pitchers and is expected to improve on his hitting this year.

Taking the first base position is Rob Boss, who is also known for his hitting skills, specifically home runs. In addition to getting some power hitting from Boss, Certa expects similar results from Avery, Matt Kilkenny and Neal Friske — a new player on the team.

Friske will be playing short-stop and doing some pitching.

Patrick Gowell, a player showing a lot of improvement as the season progresses, will be playing in left field.

Other players on the team are: Matt Kochanny, at third base and pitching; Kreg Wager, a pitcher and at first base; Ben Speigl, at second base; Bo Moore, in the outfield; Nick Schwein, in the outfield and at third base; and Gordie Lake, at third base and in the outfield.

As for the opponents Charlevoix will face this year, Certa said Boyne City and Elk Rapids will probably be very strong teams. However, he added there is no one that really can dominate the league.

"I think we will all come out and beat up on each other a little bit," he said.

But, Certa added, even with a league so evenly matched, "We have a serious shot at winning our league."

New coach already seeing improvement

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

While the late spring did not allow the team to get outside for practice much, coach Liz Grunch said this year's varsity softball team has already shown some great improvement.

"I will also be seeing improvement throughout the year," she said. "We are working on fundamentals that the girls need as a starting point. We need to perfect those."

According to Grunch, Charlevoix's strong points are batting and fielding.

The students on the team have been showing some great skills hitting off of the pitching machine indoors. How that relates to hitting off of a live pitcher is yet to be known.

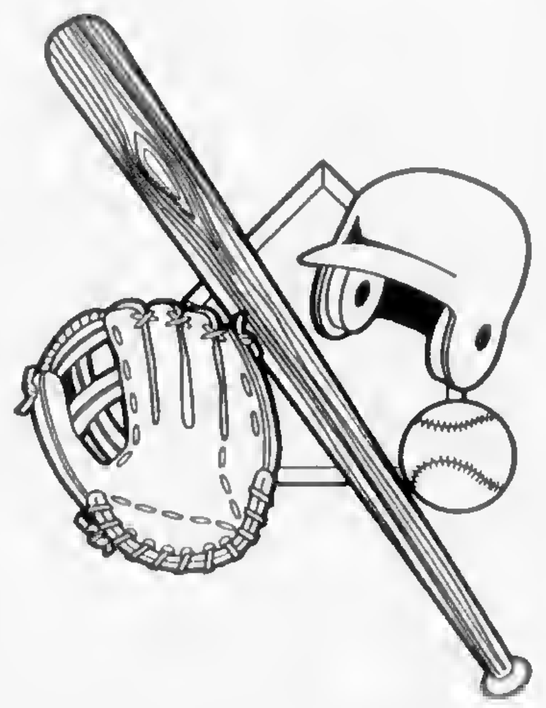
"We will know a lot more later," Grunch said.

As for their fielding skills, Grunch said her team has very strong legs and they are really good with their gloves. These skills are also improving by the day.

Grunch added the team's major weakness has been lack of outdoor practice early in the year. To get over this hurdle, Grunch will be looking to some of her standout players for great performances on the diamond.

She specifically pointed out Natashia Kleiber, who will be playing shortstop. According to Grunch, Kleiber could be "one of the best players in the league."

On the pitching mound, Grunch will be looking for hard work and strong skills out of Monica Cornell and Krystal Meredith.



She added her one senior, Krista Swenor, is also a strong player. She will be changing positions throughout the year and is doing very well at learning new techniques.

Grunch will be looking to each of her players though when the Rayders go up against the many strong teams in the conference. She said Traverse City St. Francis and Elk Rapids seem to be the ones to beat this year.

Adding a little more difficulty to these match-ups will be the fact that this is Grunch's first year coaching softball at Charlevoix.

"I think that I look forward to the season being fun and improving. My goal this year is to improve," Grunch said.

The girls' great attitudes are also helping Grunch meet her goal.

"Being a new coach, they are accepting of me and know my style," she said.

Boys' track team has good shot at conference

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

According to the Charlevoix High School boys' track coach Ken Plude, the Rayders have a good shot at the conference title this year.

However, Plude added, the regional will be tough with five outstanding schools going head-to-head.

As for Charlevoix's skills, Plude said, parts of the team are very experienced.

He said the distance runners on the team are very strong and the sprint runners, while they are young, are talented.

However, he added, everyone in the conference is also strong in their distance running.

"It is not like we get an easy ride," Plude said.

In addition to the running events, Plude said his field event competitors are also very talented, especially the throwing group. He said he has 16 boys that want to throw the shot-put and discus.

Plus, this group is coached by Bruce Waha, who has coached at the state level.

"He doesn't like a lot of publicity, but he deserves it," Plude said.

All of this makes the Rayders a "well rounded team," he added.

As for his relay team, he said there are some holes that need to be plugged, but he expects a lot of improvement, especially since he has members of last year's all-state cross country team making up the Two Mile Relay. They are: Gordie Selph, Tim Daining and Peter Gorkiewicz.

Plude said these three guys have a lot of skills they can use in many other events.

"They can cover so many holes," he said.

Plude will also be looking for strong performances out of Scott Parrish. Parrish went to the state finals last year in the high jump and has expanded his event listing this year.

Two other returnees to the team also went to state last year. They are Josh Popenhagen and Todd Carey.

Plude's top pole vaulter this year will probably be Kyle Kramer, who is also looking great in the discus throw.

"(Kramer) is just a multiple purpose athlete. He will be a big help," he said.

In addition to the strong skills of those on the track team, Plude also has a lot of depth with the Rayders with around 55 participants.

He said this is a huge team for a Class C school, but added half of those are students who are new to the team.

As for the Rayders top competitors this year, Plude said it is still too early to tell. He does know, though, that the regional will be very tough.

In regional competition, Charlevoix would face Benzie, who was the runner up in the state finals last year, in addition to tough teams from McBain, Kingsley and Suttons Bay.

"The key is going to be those distance guys being able to handle three and four events. If we use our depth alone, with experienced runners, then we have a good chance," Plude said.

Girls' track team returns several

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

With just about everyone returning from last years' girl's track team, coach Jennifer Peters said this year's team will have a great amount of talent.

Last year there was a lot of inexperience on the team, due to the team's youth, however, this year's team is more seasoned and can show it with some nice skills. This year's girls' track team has just under 30 athletes on the team, with nine seniors.

Peters said the team's strong areas this year are its relay teams, pole vaulters and long jumpers.

"Relays are really where we will succeed the most," she said. "We have a few numbers we can work with. So we can interchange. And we have quite a few girls around the same times."

But, the team does have some areas that need a little work.

Specifically, the Rayders have a pretty young crew taking part in the shot-put and only two hurdlers — who are pretty good — but Peters said she could use a little more depth in this event.

As for individual competitors to look for this year, Peters said Lexi Wilson is showing some great skills on the pole vault. Recently, she broke the school record and beat all of the heights posted by the boys' team in the same event.

In the long jump, Peters said Jenny Miller has been doing good.

Peters also has quite a few strong competitors in the running events. Liz Ulrich and Katie Swenor, both state qualifiers, will be returning to take part in distance events.

In the sprint relay, Peters will be using the skills of Miller, Amy Kurtz, Kate Lieberman and Sonya Plude.

While Charlevoix has the experience to put up a great fight this year, Peters said many of the other teams will have some nice depth to use. Specifically, she said Boyne City and Kalkaska will be tough teams.

As for predictions, Peters said it is too early to tell. But she did mention that she will have two relay teams that qualified last year for the state finals competing this year.

Perhaps there will be even more state qualifications this year.

Large tennis team creates competition

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

With 35 students playing for the varsity tennis team, coach Erik Lundteigen said he has plenty of great choices for the matches this year.

While there are a lot of players on the team, Lundteigen said only the top 10 or 12 will be playing in those varsity matches. To make things a little more competitive, those top 10 or 12 players could change all through the season.

"I love that we have competition for spots. It keeps everyone hungry," he said.

"I am not going to cut anybody. If they are not one of the top 10, they will still get a chance to play in exhibition matches."

This means, even the seniors and returning players on the team have to fight for those top spots.

"It is nice having seniors back, but that is not a guarantee they will play," Lundteigen said.

Seniors on the team are: Jason Haas, the number one player last year; Allen Brooks, the number two player last year; Bill Foster, who may play some singles; Lesley Pollard, a doubles player; Jim Dilworth, a doubles player; Heather Belding; Gayle Williams and Roscoe Serrels.

Also playing on the team as doubles partners are: Mitch Klooster and Andrew Mailloux; Sparky Nitchmen and Taylor Martin; Cody Wheat and Josh Fassett; and Lesley Pollard and Jim Dilworth.

Lundteigen said he is hoping to have four singles positions on the team and four teams for doubles play in the season. During conference play, he wants four singles players and three doubles teams.

He added, the key to a successful season this year is how quickly the team improves. But, the team seems to be ready for this challenge.

"We have some real hard workers with great attitudes," he said. "We certainly want to be competitive. It is going to take a lot of effort, but we will get there. I am really optimistic about the fact that we have kids that want to work."

This will be Lundteigen's first year coaching tennis after a seven year hiatus to start a family.

"It is going to be hard work and I hope everyone understands that," he said.

Helping him out this year is Linnie Klooster.

New coach says team eager for great year

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

While the varsity girls' soccer team may have a lot of young faces, their work ethic is enough to overcome many obstacles.

According to Coach Carol Madison the team has five great leaders in the seniors, but it is mostly composed of sophomores and freshmen, due to the fact Charlevoix does not have a junior varsity team. There is one junior, four sophomores and six freshmen on the team.

"Everyone is working hard. The seniors are showing real leadership, but we are real young," Madison said. "But, they are really good athletes."

Madison added, "Our team chemistry is wonderful. The older girls are very encouraging to the younger girls. They are all working hard and pushing each other."

In the goal position, Madison has a brand new goalie named Brooke Blanchard, a sophomore. But, like the rest of the team, Blanchard is willing to learn.

"She is really coming into it. She is really showing good progress," Madison said.

Additionally, the team has returned most of its star defensive back group with Kelly Zimmerman, Kate Madison, Jayme Murray — who Madison calls the "heart and soul" of the defense — and Danielle Vogelheim.

Madison said Zimmerman and Kate Madison have been stepping up this year to fill a hole in the defense created when Katie Romig graduated last year.

Also, she said Vogelheim is really leading by example this year.

"Nobody works harder," Madison said.

Also added to the team's skills are two third year varsity players, Elissa Wood and Libby Withrow, both seniors.

Madison said Wood has a tremendous throw-in and Withrow is doing well in the midfield and forward position.

With the eager youth on the team combined with the experienced players, Charlevoix will have some good skills to use this year. Those skills will be needed, as the conference is very tough.

Madison said the conference has Harbor Springs, which went to the state finals last year and Elk Rapids and Suttons Bay, both very strong soccer schools.

Tap-in cost to be over $8,000

The Charlevoix Public School District has approved signing a contract with the city of Charlevoix to pay $504,009 to extend the city's sewer line to the new high school, with the district being reimbursed when others tap-in — but some are saying the cost to tap in is too high.

Marion Township property owners whose homes are located in a zone spanning 14 parcels along Marion Center Road, referred to by the city of Charlevoix as "area D," will pay at least $3,000 more to tap into the city sewer than it would cost to build a septic system.

To tap into the city sewer, these residents will pay $8,600. According to Marion Township Zoning Administrator Bob Drebenstedt, a septic field costs between $3,500 and $5,500.

See the related story on page 23.

The new sewer line will be constructed along the Marion Center Road right of way, to the site of the new Charlevoix High School, located at 05200 Marion Center Road.

Over the next 20 years the school district will get some of the tap-in costs for new users, but Drebenstedt said he doesn't envision residents lining up for service.

East Park meetings to continue in summer

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Inadequate public bathroom facilities, the positioning of the band shelter and the fate of the Wharfside property were some of the many discussion topics at an East Park goal setting session April 22 in Charlevoix.

The gathering was a joint meeting of Charlevoix's Downtown Development Authority (DDA) and city council.

"As I see it, we want to try and define what we want to accomplish as a community in our park area," City Manager Mike Wiesner said of the goal setting effort.

Peter Pollack, principle representative from the firm Pollack Design Associates in Ann Arbor, the company the city hired to design renovation plans for East Park, addressed council and the DDA, bringing to their attention a set of goals his design firm established following the Dec. 6, 2001 public park input meeting.

Wiesner explained the goal setting approach to the project as one the city chose after running into tough decisions in planning Bridge Park changes.

In 1995, when the city started its $5 million renovation of Bridge Park, it looked at several alternatives and had a hard time making a final decision. So, the city stepped back and went through a list of items to decide what is important.

Benefits in the form of disability compensation, pension, education, insurance and indemnities were paid directly to many of the county's 2,297 veterans.

Geraldine V. Johnson, director of the Veterans Affairs Regional office in Detroit, the office that administers benefit payments for Michigan, said, "This influx of money into the Charlevoix County economy was a significant portion of the more than $1 billion Veterans Affairs expended to serve the 891,295 veterans living throughout the state of Michigan."

"Over half of all expenditures, more than $500 million, are paid directly to veterans and their families each year. The rest is used to support Veterans Affairs medical services provided at Michigan's five Veterans Affairs medical centers, two outpatient clinics and the numerous community based outpatient clinics located throughout the state."

Johnson reminds any Charlevoix County veteran that if their service connected condition has gotten worse or if they have questions about their Veterans Affairs benefits to contact the regional office by calling local representative Bob Drehenstedt at (231) 547-7220.

Traffic study focuses on crosswalk 'ambassadors'

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A new traffic congestion study being proposed by the city of Charlevoix and the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, which will consider cross walk attendants at intersections along Charlevoix's Bridge Street, has the support of the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT).

"We have been in contact with the city manager (Mike Wiesner) and think the study is a good idea," Bob Felt, spokesperson for the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT), said.

Although MDOT has conducted traffic studies in Charlevoix, this study will most likely take a new approach to solving Charlevoix's problem.

"It's my understanding that the chamber traffic committee is concerned because chamber members are worried people are avoiding downtown because of traffic and that's affecting businesses," Charlevoix City Manager, Mike Wiesner, said.

He added it's not just downtown businesses being impacted, contractors who have to make it from one side of town to the other are being slowed down.

"'Time is money,' this is what I'm hearing," he added.

John Campbell, a member of the chamber's transportation committee, echoed Wiesner's understanding of the study's aim.

He said, "Our goal is to create a quicker route through town during the five to seven weeks I call Charlevoix's special event — summer. Even if it saves 5 minutes to get across town, to and from, that's 10 minutes. It doesn't take long to add up to an hour. This affects the local citizenry," he explained.

To reach this goal the city is looking at placing cross-walk attendants at intersections along Bridge Street.

"I see this (the study) focusing on point control (situating a person at intersections to help direct pedestrian traffic.) I really think we've looked at the traditional control types — traffic lights, signs, right turn lanes," Wiesner said.

In the past, MDOT has studied Charlevoix's traffic situation and offered proposals to alleviate the congestion, none of which have been used .

According to Wiesner, a study conducted in 1996 by MDOT, proposed a "one way pair system," with State Street running one way south and Bridge Street running one way north.

But he said the city didn't pursue the pair system due to a lack of community support.

"I didn't get the impression it was something the community wanted to consider at that time (six years ago)," he said.

In the next month, the city will bring Rick Lyles, a traffic engineer, and Scott Beckner, a traffic expert, both of Michigan State University, to Charlevoix to study the possibility of implementing point control traffic attendants in downtown.

Chamber representatives, including Campbell, have referred to the proposed attendants as "ambassadors."

While the attendants seem to be the primary focus of the study, Wiesner said its definite direction has not been decided. Lyles and Beckner will help define what the city will do.

Beware of letters promising money

EDITORIAL

Recently, the Charlevoix Courier was the recipient of a couple of strange offers.

The offers promised us oodles of money in return for monetary help for an out-of-country person, usually Nigeria. If we sent this person a large amount of cash to help them get out of the country or start up some sports program, this person would pay us back millions of dollars.

For us, the offers came by e-mail, but sometimes we get them in the mail. We didn't buy it.

And we were the only ones to get this offer. A reader of the Charlevoix Courier sent us a letter he received in the mail saying how much money he could get back if he just helped out this poor soul in Nigeria.

Luckily for him, he also didn't buy it. After he gave us his letter, we gave it to Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater.

These letters and e-mail are common throughout the United States in the past few years and are all a scam that is being investigated by law enforcement officials. They are nothing but an attempted scam on American citizens.

Unfortunately, some people have fallen for these letters and have lost a lot of their money and in at least one case — in which the person went to Nigeria to collect his money — an American was killed.

If any of our readers receive a letter describing this type of scenario, promising money in return for help and is from a man in Nigeria, we urge you to report this to your local law enforcement agency.

Don't fall for the promises in these letters or e-mails. This old saying is usually a good rule of thumb in these matters: "If it sounds too good to be true, it isn't."

The Charlevoix area is full of great places to eat

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

With apologies for lack of space, here's a modest run down of only half the nice places to eat in Charlevoix proper. Still here are my, "special treat," recommendations that our visitors should be sure to order, once they are seated at any one of the following local restaurants!

Let's begin on the south side of town.

Naturally for breakfast they should order the best French toast at Juilleret's. For lunch they should try a half portion of an appetizing Cobb salad at the Acorn. The World Class Cafe has started making crispy donut holes and the Weathervane's cherry ice cream is irresistible.

Cocktails before dinner? They should be sure to try a Bloody Mary with a jumbo shrimp and pickle at Whitney's. As an appetizer, people may like the grilled scallops on a bed of homemade salsa at Charley's. For dinner Grey Gables prepares the most delicious cream of mushroom soup.

Terry's serves the tastiest hot tomato vegetable dish and on Wednesdays the Villager Pub offers super spaghetti to take out, if you like.

On the north side, they will find that Guiseppe's clientele raves about the lemon bourbon barbecue sauce served on salmon, and the Argonne is the only place where they can get those great hush puppies with maraschino cherry jelly during the week — if they're lucky.

For dessert, the Charlevoix Country Club is best known for their giant Chocolate Vesuvius, which easily serves two, but please remember, it's only available during the week — never on Sunday!

One more thing. I wouldn't dare rate local restaurants according to noise the way the San Francisco Chronicle does, because the Chronicle critics remain anonymous!

Still, I will venture pointing people in the right direction for a quiet meal where they can talk! For One Bell (quietest) rating, opt for the Charlevoix Country Club for lunch or dinner. Should the music be too loud they will turn it down. The Weathervane is also quiet and the channel view is a year 'round treat. You may be surprised to learn that the Flap Jack Shack would also get a One Bell rating from me.

Here is my very own Teddy Bear rating for grandparents! Tired of going to MacDonald's and stuck with the little kids? Want to take them out to a real sit down dinner? Your best bet is the porch at Guiseppe's or a table at the Argonne.

Here's another suggestion. Why not make your own Bon Apetit listing and include some of the surrounding restaurants in the area? This is the rating key for meals according to the S.F. Chronicle. You may even consider tacking this confidential record on the door of your refrigerator so the rest of the family can cast their thoughtful vote!

(* extraordinary, $ entrees — under $10.  excellent, $$ moderate — $10-$17  good, $$$ — expensive $18-$24.* fair, $$$$ very expensive — more than $25. 0 poor.)

STAR program a success

Editor:

During President Bush's State of the Union Address in January, he spoke about the need for American citizens to give back to their communities by volunteering. I would like to take this opportunity to recognize a group of dedicated individuals who are WAY ahead of President Bush! These are people who have been volunteering at the Charlevoix Elementary School in our STAR (Success to all Readers) Tutorial Program that date back to 1995!

These concerned and caring adults commit time each week to assist students who need a boost with their reading. In the past seven years, nearly 200 students have benefited from the time and effort these wonderful people contribute.

It is heartwarming to wander our school halls during "STAR time" and watch the relationship develop, our students' self-confidence blossom and their reading abilities soar!

I have had the pleasure of coordinating our volunteer program this year and it has been one of the most rewarding experiences of my career in education. Each one of these special people has left a mark on the life of a child.

There isn't space here to list all of their names, but they know who they are! Thank you, from our STAR students, their parents and teachers and especially from me!

Sewer is too big

Editor:

The sewer capacity need for the new Charlevoix High School is equivalent to less than seven home sites. Although this does not sound correct, this can be verified through the city of Charlevoix Manager's or Treasurer's office and in other rural school systems around the state.

This means that a system that will service seven or conservatively eight home sites will service the school.

There is no need for an oversized system for over 1,000 new residences! The proposed new city sewer system will demand large amounts of water, pumped from the underground water table, to flush these oversized, unnecessary lines.

If the Charlevoix School Board is interested in cutting costs, in honoring the zoning of Marion Township, in moving ahead quickly and in not using taxpayer money to fund sprawl, they will construct an on-site sewage disposal system.

It is arrogant to move stubbornly ahead with construction, possibly in violation of the law, when it is totally unnecessary. What area contractor could afford or think of bearing the costs for this oversized project if the goal were to serve only eight home sites? The school has purchased 75 acres of land. There is room on the school property for a safe, modern septic system with capacity for the equivalent of eight home sites.

It is simply not true that an on-site septic is more damaging to the environment of Marion Township than a city sewer line.

The city sewer line will explode sprawl across miles of scenic rural landscape. Construction of driveways, roads and over 1,000 new homes and businesses and their new wells, will endanger groundwater, degrade streams and wetlands and will destroy farmland forever. What is driving the sewer is not the needs of a new school for our children, but the wants of developers.

The citizens of the Charlevoix School District should not be forced to fund this folly.

Drainage problems from school

Editor:

Thank you for your coverage of events in Marion Township. It is gratifying to see two points of view recognized in the continuing saga of the city, the school and the sewer. I am honored to see that standing up and fighting back so easily casts a shadow again, on the school construction project.

Recent events demonstrate if three separate state agencies cannot resolve the school sewer question, then maybe it is just plain a bad idea to begin with. To take from your article April 10, it is not the school, but the people of Marion Township that are a "pawn" in these events!

I take this all the more to heart because of recent events during the spring thaw. My family home has been on Marion Center Road for almost 50 years. Long ago a drainage system was coordinated by the Agriculture Department with my parents and our neighbors. This allowed the spring runoff to follow the natural course of the land from north to southeast, toward Stover Creek.

Water would pool up, ice would form and when spring came, there were about two weeks of soggy fields. This year, the water hasn't stopped; even with a mild winter, the amount of water is greater than anything I can remember. The ice is gone and there are still very large pools standing in fields. I have never seen such large flocks of birds feasting on whatever insects the water has brought out.

It seems the water table has changed or perhaps been broken. What was the norm is now in excess, by a whole lot. While I was gone, friends and neighbors brought out the fact that the school site was very wet. Their arguments were ignored. Now, it is easy to see the flooded sports fields. Further south, the flood continues through the land of at least two neighbors, for a mile or more. The school's neighbor to the east is also flooded. In case I didn't mention it, it is very easy to see where the water is coming from — the school construction site.

It is very difficult, if not impossible to work or traverse the land with any kind of vehicle. While I am trying to return to farming, my neighbor uses these fields for his living, and I in turn derive part of my income from their cultivation.

Waiting for them to dry out may be beyond the limited planting season we "simple country folk" have. I make mention of these facts not only because they affect my farm. I finally realized that the problems with my septic system were coming from the huge flood of water in my back yard.

It is bad enough to have to accept a huge increase in traffic and all its resultant problems because of the school. I find it intolerable to have my family's livelihood, safety and health now at risk.

Northwest band impresses judges

The Instrumental Music Department at Northwest Academy had a busy April.

Gray Stutzman, Director of Bands at Northwest Academy, and two of his students, Rachel Bellairs and Rick Smith returned from 12 days in Europe.

Stutzman's role in Europe was that of assistant director of the Harbor Springs Community Band, Bellairs played lead trumpet and Smith anchored the percussion section of the adult community band.

On April 13, after they returned to the states, Stutzman and his students joined other members of the Northwest Academy Jazz Ensemble and performed at the District II Jazz Festival in Traverse City.

The following week, the junior high band members put the finishing touches on their Junior High Solo and Ensemble pieces. Seven Northwest groups entered the competition and five received the highest award possible — a one — and the others received a two.

During the week of April 22, the Advanced Band fine-tuned the pieces they performed at the MSBOA State Band Festival which took place April 26 in Benzonia. The band performed three concert numbers for a panel of three adjudicators and then sight read two songs the band hadn't seen or played before. The scores from the concert and the site reading were added for the total rating.

The advanced band received the highest rating possible at the state festival — first division.

Stutzman said comments from judges praised the very small band of 25 students for their beautiful tone quality and the obvious talent of each individual player.

Warren Newell, adjudicator three, wrote, "There are no 'slackers' in this group."

The bands will be in a recording session May 1 and May 2 to produce a CD of the Advanced Band, the Jazz Ensemble and the Jazz Combo.

The final product will be available for purchase through band members and at local retailers.

Who scored the highest in high school basketball?

Q: Who has the highest scoring record for Charlevoix basketball?

A: According to Charlevoix High School records, the student with the most points scored in their basketball career is 1995 graduate Liz Grunch.

This former student — who is now a teacher and coach at Charlevoix High School — scored a total of 1,363 points in her girls' basketball career in Charlevoix.

As for the boys' team, while the school did not have his exact number, Scott Parrish took the honors. He has somewhere above 1,014 points — the old record held by 1985 graduate Brent Cole — and below Grunch's total points. Parrish will graduate this year.

Turbine zoning to be discussed

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Eveline Township Planning Commission will rehear a controversial special use permit request, made by Bay Windpower of Suttons Bay, on May 8 but the company may want to change its request after tonight's meeting.

According to Eric Beishlag, chairman of the Eveline Township Planning Commission, a review of the township zoning ordinance is scheduled to take place at 7 p.m., tonight, Wednesday. The long-term result of this meeting will most likely be changes to the ordinance, which currently allows wind turbine generators and wind monitoring towers with a special use permit.

Attending the meeting will be members of the planning commission; Eveline Township attorney, Bryan Graham; planning consultant, Leslie Sickterman, of Traverse City's Gourdie-Fraser; Steve Smiley, president of Bay Windpower; and opponents and supporters of the proposed wind project.

In a previous interview planning commission chairman Eric Beishlag said district zoning for wind turbine generators would be discussed at this time.

According to Beishlag, zoning administrator Barry Wood currently has a list of ideas Sickterman has compiled for discussion at the meeting. Wood was unwilling to share the information, stating it wasn't open to the public.

Beishlag later said one of the ideas included in the plan is district zoning where wind turbine generators and wind monitoring towers are allowed in a given area.

If the planning commission is ready to make revisions to the zoning ordinance, it will post a public hearing notice no less than 30 days before the next meeting when the changes will be decided.

In spite of probable changes to district zoning, Bay Windpower can move forward with its special use permit request at the May 8 planning commission meeting.

If approved by the planning commission, it will recommend approval of the request, to the township board, who has the final say. The tower would be constructed near Ferry and Brock roads.

SANE program offered at hospital for rape victims

Registered nurse Sue Coen remembers wanting to run and hide when a victim of sexual assault came through the door of Charlevoix Area Hospital's emergency department. She feared conducting the post-rape exam, dealing with the victim's raw emotions and controlling her own anger toward the perpetrator.

Now, thanks to collaborative effort between the hospital, the Women's Resource Center, Family Independence Agency, Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department and Charlevoix Police Department, she's trained the handle such emergencies. And assault victims receive comprehensive, compassionate care after suffering a life-altering experience.

In 2000, Coen participated in Sexual Assault Nurse Examiner (SANE) training, a vigorous, 85-hour program that prepared her to handle the medical, social, emotional and legal aspects of rape aces. The course focuses special attention on collecting forensic evidence to improve the chances of convicting alleged rapists.

According to Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater, for law enforcement, having a certified SANE nurse on staff at the hospital ensures reliable evidence collection.

"Statistics show that SANE programs dramatically decrease trial time in rape cases and increase the rate of convictions," Lasater said.

The SANE program officially began at the hospital's ER in August 2000, when Coen completed her training, and now offers 24-hour assistance to rape victims.

As the local population grows and awareness of sexual assault increases, Charlevoix Area Hospital's emergency department expects to see more rape cases. Nationally, it's predicted one of every three women, and one of every seven men, will be the victim of sexual assault during their lifetimes.

Although SANE programs have existed for more than 20 years in larger cities on the east and west coasts, the Midwest has been slower to embrace the training. Charlevoix Area Hospital's SANE program is only the fifth in Michigan.

The trauma of sexual assault can be lessened when our health and legal systems address the emotional needs of victims," Coen said.

For more information on this program, contact Coen at Charlevoix Area Hospital by calling (231) 547-4024.

Crooked Tree Arts Center to have Spring Youth Concert

The Crooked Tree Arts Center will have a Spring Concert of the Crooked Tree Youth Orchestra and the Crooked Tree Arts Center Beginning Strings Program students.

The concert is scheduled at 7 p.m. for Monday, May 20 at the John Hall Auditorium in Bay View. Also appearing are guest musicians, Interlochen Arts Academy students, Jeffrey Hood and Jesse Lewis.

Cellist, Jeffrey Hood, 17, made his orchestral debut at the age of 13 with the Kalamazoo Symphony Orchestra. Hood is a student of Crispin Campbell, as is Jesse Lewis. Lewis, also a cellist, will graduate in May and plans to attend the Cleveland Institute of Music in September. The concert is free of charge and open to the public.

In the fall of 2000, the Crooked Tree Arts Center began offering String Instruction to the public and private elementary schools of Charlevoix and Emmet counties. Every school child has the opportunity to learn string instruments in their own classroom, with instruction provided by Karey Johnson.

Musical instruments are rented to families at a very low cost.

In cases where families are not able to provide for the instrument rental fee, Crooked Tree Arts Center ensures that the child has an instrument provided at no cost.

What began as an exploratory effort to reach area youth who might be interested in playing a stringed instrument has blossomed to involve nearly 400 young people from Petoskey, Harbor Springs, Alanson, Charlevoix, Pellston, Boyne City, East Jordan, Ellsworth and Beaver Island. Johnson flies to Beaver Island every Wednesday to provide the children and some adults with musical instruction.

Local home school students come to the Arts Center to receive their instruction in violin, viola, cello or bass.

The Crooked Tree Arts Center's Beginning Strings Program is a community effort, as it requires the cooperation of the Arts Center, school districts, educators and parents. The support of the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs, Petoskey Harbor Springs Community Foundation, Charlevoix County Community Foundation and individual contributions make this program possible.

Further support of the Beginning Strings Program is provided by the Dorothy Gerber Chair for Children and Music. This anonymous gift in support of the chair enhances the arts center's efforts to bring music education to the young people of Charlevoix and Emmet counties. The Crooked Tree Youth Orchestra and the Beginning Strings Program directly benefit from the gift, named in memory of the work of Gerber.

The Crooked Tree Arts Center is located downtown Petoskey at 461 E. Mitchell Street. For more information regarding the concert, please call the Arts Center at 231-347-4337. The Web site is www.crookedtree.org.

Rotary gets $25,000 gift

The Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau (CCVB) approved a $25,000 contribution that will help make the new Charlevoix High School auditorium one of the finest performing arts facilities in northern Michigan.

Dan Barron, Rotary Reach for the Stars co-chair, said that in addition to helping provide a wonderful facility for performing arts students, the contribution supports the mission of the bureau.

"A world-class performing arts facility will help draw individual tourists and even tour groups to town which will in turn benefit our hotels, motels, restaurants and merchants," he said.

Barron said the convention bureau's $25,000 gift brings the campaign total to more than $80,000.

"Community support has been phenomenal. These contributions will help make this facility one of the finest, if not the finest, north of Grand Rapids," he said.

Barron said the campaign hopes to raise the remaining $20,000 of the $100,000 goal by July 1, when auditorium enhancements need to be finalized.

The Rotary Club of Charlevoix initiated its Reach for the Stars campaign in October 2000 to upgrade the new high school auditorium to professional theater status.

Businesses and individuals are invited to contribute at four different levels: galaxy, a $5,000 and over contribution; gold, a $1,000 donation; silver, a $500 donation; and bronze, a $250 contribution.

Forms are available in two Charlevoix area banks: Charlevoix State Bank and Standard Federal Bank.

Barron said contributors will be recognized on a plaque in the auditorium lobby and will receive advance ticket notification and purchase privileges for three years. The Rotary Club of Charlevoix will also host a tour of the new facility for Reach for the Stars contributors on May 18.

"One of Rotary's main missions is to support and nurture our youth," Barron said.

"Our club believes this program is a wonderful way to provide a first class facility for our performing arts and band students while also enabling the community to attract and showcase premier professional quality entertainment."

For more information, contact Barron at (231) 547-9950.

HEALTH

Protect your pets against Heartworm disease

Matthew Greimel, D.V. M
'Your pet's health'

Have you heard the buzz....it's heartworm season again!

Heartworm season has returned to northern Michigan once again. Mosquitoes are airborne and spreading one of our four-legged friends' most serious diseases. Understanding heartworm disease and how it is transmitted is the key to understanding why prevention is so vital and successful. Not only is the disease dangerous, the treatment is also associated with significant risk. Statistically, both indoor and outdoor pets are at risk of acquiring the disease. Thankfully, heartworm disease is very easily and safely prevented.

Heartworm infection is caused by parasitic worms (D. Immitis) taking up residence in the pulmonary (lung) vessels and the right side of your pet's heart. These worms can grow up to 14 inches in length causing heart failure and serious damage to the pulmonary vasculature. In addition, as worms die or become dislodged, they pass into the lungs where they cause severe lung damage.

The signs of heartworm disease are: lethargy, exercise intolerance, coughing and difficulty breathing. Unfortunately, the signs become evident only after serious heart and lung damage have occurred.

Once adult heartworms are present in the heart and reach maturity, mating occurs. The female releases large amounts of microscopic larvae, known as microfilariae when they are bitten. During the six month period following the bite, the injected microfilariae go through a maturation process and migrate to the heart.

Once the worms reach the newly infected animal's heart, lung and heart damage begin to occur, microfilariae production begins and the pet is able to spread the disease to others.

Prevention of heartworm infection is crucial.

The prevention (medication) kills the immature larvae as they migrate through your pet's body to the heart. Heartworm preventative does not kill adult heart worms.

Most heartworm preventatives are given as a treat once a month and provide additional protection against common intestinal parasites. Many owners choose to give the medication year-round due to this additional intestinal parasite protection.

Your veterinarian will usually require annual heart worm testing prior to dispensing heartworm preventative. The reason for this is twofold: One, some animals have adverse reactions to heartworm medication if already infected. Secondly, testing annually, thereby catching and treating an infection before significant heart and lung damage has occurred, provides for a much safer treatment and better long-term prognosis.

Economically speaking, annual testing and preventative care can be provided for 5 to 10 years before spending the amount required for the treatment of an adult heartworm infection.

Bottom line — when it come to heartworm disease, prevention by heads and tails is the best medicine. Our pets are great companions and add a lot to our lives. Keeping them healthy is a great way of saying thank you.▪

Open meeting issue continues

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Many audience members at the April 24 meeting of the Charlevoix County Commission expressed their desire for commission members to admit they made a mistake with an alleged Open Meetings Act violation in early March and get on with business.

"If you can just say a mistake was made and move on," said resident John Campbell.

Charlevoix resident Dale Boss added, "Bury the hatchet and let's move forward."

The County Commissioner's room in the Charlevoix County Building was packed that night with audience members making similar statements.

This all revolves around an early March meeting the Charlevoix County Commission Personnel Committee had with a former employee of Mary Beth Kur. Members of the committee are: Commissioners Jim Behling, Carl Price and Don Smith.

The meeting was unposted and commissioners stated they did not realize this. However, the matter was turned over to the Michigan Attorney General who is having the Michigan State Police investigate it for alleged violations of the state meetings act.

The three commissioners also retained labor attorney Pete Patterson, in case any charges are filed by the attorney general. Commissioners have said they believe they did not violate the Open Meetings Act with the meeting.

This came to a head at the April 24 meeting, because the commissioners were to vote on a resolution authorizing payment to Patterson for his services and to hire him to represent the commissioners if any charges are filed.

This resolution was defeated when a commissioner and audience members questioned why the county would hire an attorney before they even knew if charges would be filed.

"I feel this whole thing has gotten out of hand. First of all, I have been a police officer for 40 years, I can't think of once or twice where someone hired an attorney before he was charged," said Commissioner Vic Patrick.

Patrick added, "From my past experiences with the attorney general, I doubt we will see any action out of the attorney general's office."

Mary Beth Kur, Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney, said if wrong-doing was found, the attorney general would probably send a letter of warning to the county.

However, Behling argued that the three commissioners need Patterson's help.

"As far as our defense, I think we need someone on our side,

Commissioners meet for drinks

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

After a regular Charlevoix County Commission meeting April 24, where a possible Open Meetings Act violation by a committee was discussed, commissioners went to a local bar.

Commissioners Carl Price, Vic Patrick, Don Smith, Shirley Roloff and Jim Behling all went to the Villager Pub in Charlevoix after the county commission meeting, raising further questions about open meetings. The public was not formally invited and media was not present during this gathering.

According to Price, the commissioners just had a few sociable drinks together and did not talk about county business "persay."

"Nobody really wanted to talk about it anymore," Price said. He said the commissioners do this a couple times a year after commission meetings.

However, Price added, considering the topic of the meeting that night — a possible Open Meetings Act violation by the Personnel Committee on March 6 — getting together for drinks after the meeting probably was not a good thing to do.

Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur said, "The whole incident has been a disappointment in the way it has been handled. I think the board would be especially sensitive to any appearance of impropriety given all that has happened since March 6."

She added, while it is not really known what the commissioners were talking about at the Villager Pub, it is not illegal for them to meet like that.

But, Kur said, "I think if you polled other county boards and commissions statewide, I think you would find it is not the norm."

Price will not seek re-election to county

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix County Commissioner Carl Price has decided to not seek reelection to the county board.

Price is currently a commissioner for District One, that includes: Hayes, Bay, Evangeline and Melrose townships. A district redrawing last year placed him into the same district as current county commissioner Don Smith, who is also seeking reelection.

In a written statement, Price said: "All the support I have received the past 11 years, four months and hopefully eight months more, is sincerely appreciated. Thanks to all who signed my 2002 nomination petition for commissioner for the new District One: Hayes Township, Bay Township, the portions of Charlevoix Township and the city of Charlevoix, which are north of the bridge.

"After much thought and deliberation, I have decided I will not be a candidate for the commissioner's seat for the years 2003 and 2004. I will continue to serve to the best of my ability the remainder of my elected term."

Price said he came to this decision after much "soul-searching" over the past weekend. He added, this decision is the result of nothing personal or serious.

Price, along with Smith and Commissioner Jim Behling, are at the center of a controversial County Commissioner Personnel Committee meeting in early March. These commissioners have been accused of violating the Michigan Open Meetings Act because the meeting in question was not posted to the public, as is required by law.

The Michigan State Police are investigating the meeting for the Attorney General's Office.

According to Charlevoix County Clerk Jane Brannon, so far Smith, resident Paul Richards and former Charlevoix City Council member Valerie Barnes-Snyder have requested nomination petitions from her office for the commission seat.

Anyone living in District One, who would like to run for this seat, must have a nomination petition turned into the Charlevoix County Clerk's Office by May 14.

Sheriff's office arrests 10 illegal immigrants

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

> "Some do commit some very serious crimes in our county and before we know it they're back in the community. But some individuals work hard and are good citizens that abide by our laws when they come up here."
> George T. Lasater, Charlevoix County Sheriff

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department and agents with the Sault Saint Marie Border Crossing post of the United States Border Patrol, apprehended 10 Mexican citizens for immigration law violations this weekend.

The arrests took place on April 27 and 28, after the sheriff's office received information from an area resident regarding the whereabouts of an illegal alien, in hiding, who was wanted on larceny charges. The name of this individual was not released.

On April 27, a detective with the sheriff's department responded to the informant's call and arrested the suspected larceny perpetrator after a traffic stop on Marion Center Road in Marion Township.

This initial arrest led to the April 28 apprehension of nine more illegal immigrants in Marion Township. These arrests took place when a sheriff's department detective and border patrol agents raided a residence on Black Road.

The farmer's name where the immigrants were housed is not being released pending further investigation.

But, Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater said, "In fairness to the farmer, some have false documents that show they are legally here."

According to Lasater, he is unaware at this time of the exact reason the immigrants were at the Black Road residence.

"It could be, they're seasonal workers possibly waiting for the growing season to be in full swing. A lot are employed picking fruit," he said.

However, this isn't the first time some of the same people have been apprehended in Charlevoix County.

Lasater said many of the 10 people, taken into custody over the weekend, had previously been deported by the Immigration and Naturalization Service but keep coming back.

"It's like the revolving door concept, and it's really frustrating for us. A lot of money is spent to find them, apprehend them and ship them back out. Then they come right back," he said.

Lasater estimated the illegal aliens had arrived in Charlevoix about 30 days ago.

But the most serious side of the time some of these people are spending here can be crimes committed during their stay.

"Some do commit very serious crimes in our county and before we know it they're back in the community," Lasater added. "But some individuals work hard and are good citizens that abide by our laws when they come up here."

Seven of the subjects were taken into federal custody and the one who was arrested on larceny charges is lodged in Charlevoix County Jail. This individual will be released to the Border Patrol at a later date.

Two other remaining violators will be processed by the Border Patrol at a later date.

Two vehicles used by the illegal aliens have been impounded by the sheriff's office.

Some of the 10 subjects may now face federal prison time for the violation cited as re-entry to the United States after deportation.

Chamber, city working on traffic solution

CROSSWALK

The experts will be making observations this summer to help define what's happening. Then, they will focus on trying to make corrections.

After Lyles and Beckner gather data, they will do a test. In a previous interview, Wiesner said the city hopes to be ready for a trial run during Charlevoix's Apple Festival, which is scheduled to take place in October of 2002.

In spite of the possible benefits that could come of attendants, liability may halt the proposal's viability for Bridge Street.

Wiesner said safety comes first.

"We've got a real safe situation downtown. Any time you change the traffic situation, you have to look at the health, safety and welfare of the people. In looking at point control (attendants) you have to look at the health, safety and welfare of the individual in the intersection; it's pretty tight quarters out there," Wiesner explained.

"If we put people in the intersection and pay them, we accept responsibility for their actions as related to what may happen because of their actions and if they get hurt."

Bridge Street, where the attendants could be located, is part of a state owned highway.

Felt said MDOT believes city police chief Dennis Halverson in conjunction with the Michigan State police and the Michigan Vehicle Code will make the call as to the proper way to proceed.

The direction the city will take is subject to review by MDOT officials.

"We expect the city to come back with a proposal, after the study is complete. If the ambassadors get the green light, we may be able to provide them with necessary safety equipment," Felt said.

The city has not estimated study and project costs.

"After the project's scope is defined, we plan to go to the DDA (the downtown development authority) to ask for funding," Wiesner said.

Campbell said funding for the study and any solutions to be implemented later aren't included in the chamber budget for this year. But, it considers this to be a priority and funding is not out of the question.

Wiesner explained the city will weigh the costs versus the benefits of any change it makes.

"(The city will discuss) Where is the cost benefit? Are you going to improve anything and if you are, how much of an improvement can you see?" he said.

Designers to present plans for park to public

PARK

"I realized that's an important tool in a complex project, that's why we decided to use this method," he said.

Goals Pollack established and the DDA and council agreed to, work on a principal of maintaining openness.

"We want to continue to provide new facilities for different events and to build on the fall and spring and start winter, without making the park itself too prominent or too foreground," Pollack said.

Wiesner said the Wharfside will be brought down by July, further opening up the park. The building's occupants, which include Kilwin's Candy Shop and North Seas Gallery will vacate the site by May 6, moving to the former Bridge Street Bizaar, at the intersection of Bridge and Clinton streets.

The city received demolition bids April 29 and council will award the bid at its meeting May 6.

City officials have invited members of city council and others in the community who contributed to the acquisition of the Wharfside to attend a demolition celebration and to initiate removal of the building by "knocking out a few bricks."

The initiation will take place at 4 p.m. May 3, rain or shine, in Charlevoix's East Park.

Wiesner said he expects Pollack to return in late June or early July with three to four design alternatives for the community to review at a public meeting. Pollack said the exact date has not been scheduled, but the chosen summer time frame was picked to accommodate the greatest number of people.

The design alternatives will work with the current prospect that the United States Coast Guard may move its buoy tending operation and the Acacia elsewhere, opening up 3,000 square feet of office space under Bridge Park.

Later in June, another public input meeting will be scheduled to hear the community's interests in the marina planning process. From that meeting, a similar goal set will be developed and United Design Associates of Cheboygan will create design alternatives. Those different possibilities will then be reviewed by the community, prior to city council making a final decision.

After the park and marina processes are complete, the two plans will be merged and another public input meeting on the complete plan will take place with council selecting the final integrated plan.

A large amount of DDA money will pay for park changes and also funded the Wharfside acquisition. Because of its financial investment, DDA member Jeffrey Porter questioned why council will make the final park plan decision.

Councilman Gabe Campbell said any way the two boddies look at the project, the money is coming from taxpayers and by law, council has the final say.

"You're going to have to work together," Wiesner said.

Charlevoix resident buys Bridge Street Book shop

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Bridge Street Book Shop, on Bridge Street in downtown Charlevoix, has a new owner.

The Charlevoix business was purchased by Charlevoix resident Jim Berlage on April 15. Before taking over the book store, Berlage worked with Youth for Christ for 18 years.

"I was looking for a second career after 18 years with Youth for Christ that would allow me to live, work and play in Charlevoix and indulge in my passion for books and music," Berlage said.

Now, not only will he be able to satisfy his own cravings for books and music, but he will be able to help meet the needs of others in the community. He also gives his new customers a "place to sit and room to browse."

Bridge Street Books offers customers many different titles to choose from. Berlage said if he does not carry a certain book, he can special order it for a customer.

In addition to books, the store also carries fine cigars, cards, journals and will soon have a selection of Christian and jazz music. Berlage also offers free gift wrapping.

"We are a friendly customer-minded, full service book shop, serving everyone throughout northern Michigan and beyond," Berlage said. "We want to meet the customer's need helping them get what they want in terms of books."

Berlage has been a resident of Charlevoix since 1967. He is currently the outgoing president of the Charlevoix Rotary Club.

Track team finishes second in Clare meet

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix boys' track team made a great showing April 26 at the Clare Invitational, taking second and beating out a very strong Petoskey team.

Coach Ken Plude said the finish was great, especially considering he was missing some members of the team due to sickness. He specifically pointed out the work done by Gordie Selph and John Billington.

Plude said Selph won four events and set his personal best in each one. Billington came onto the 3200 meter relay team, to replace a sick runner, and kept the Rayders close in times to win it in the end.

Charlevoix placed behind Clare, who took first. Petoskey came in third.

Individual results were:

- Shot put — Landon Brown was in fourth and Josh Carter was in fifth.
- Pole vault — Kyle Kramer came in second.
- High jump — Scott Parrish came in second.
- Long jump — Jeff Urban came in third.
- 100 meter hurdles — Ethan Winchester came in eighth.
- 100 meter dash — Urban came in second and Rusty Walters came in seventh.
- 800 meter relay — Charlevoix came in eighth.
- 1600 meter run — Selph came in first, Tim Daining came in third and Josh Popenhagen came in eighth.
- 400 meter relay — Charlevoix came in fifth.
- 400 meter dash — Todd Carey came in sixth.
- 300 meter intermediate hurdles — Selph came in first.
- 800 meter run — Daining came in third.
- 3200 meter run — Selph came in first — with a meet record — Popenhagen came in sixth and Billington came in eighth.
- 1600 meter relay — Charlevoix came in third.

Soccer team takes two wins, one loss, tie

In the last week the Charlevoix Rayders varsity girls soccer team has tallied two wins, a loss and a tie.

Last week, sophomore keeper Brooke Blanchard recorded her third shutout of the young season against Elk Rapids, making 10 saves, as Charlevoix improved to 3-2 and 1-1 in its conference.

Senior co-captain and all state candidate Jayme Murray controlled the match at the defensive end. The Rayders also received strong defensive play from backs Kelly Zimmerman, Allysia McDonough and freshman stopper Sarah Cross.

Charlevoix got on the board in the first half when Murray sent a corner across to freshman Jaime Pettis. The Rayders managed 13 shots, forcing 10 saves also from the Elks keeper, winning the game 1-0.

Head coach Carol Madison said, "Our defensive effort improves with each game. Our passing is coming along well. We're beginning to see some nice combinations between the midfield and forward lines. We still need to improve on finishing off our chances, especially against a team the caliber of Elk Rapids."

The Rayders traveled to Roscommon April 24, and came away with a two to two tie in overtime and defeated East Jordan at home the next day.

On a field dominated by the wind, Charlevoix was unable to score with the wind at their backs until senior Kate Madison returned a goal kick into the net with 10 seconds remaining in the first half.

The Rayders hung onto the lead until the Bucks scored on a long cross with about 20 minutes remaining in the match. Charlevoix answered a minute later on a corner assist from sweeper Murray that was finished by sophomore Shayna Drost.

The Bucks came back again to tie with 12 minutes left on a Rayder miscue and both 15 minute overtime periods were scoreless.

"This was a good learning experience for us, playing with just one reserve, several starters nursing nagging injuries, away from home. Our inability to finish chances with the wind early in the match gave Roscommon the confidence to stay in the game," Madison said.

The Rayders overall record is 3-2-1 with 1-1-1 in their conference.

> "Our defensive effort improves with each game. We still need to improve on finishing off our chances, especially against a team the caliber of Elk Rapids."
> Carol Madison, Soccer team head coach

They hosted East Jordan April 25 and improved their record to 4-2-1 overall and 2-1-1 in their conference with a victory.

Drost led the way to the victory with five goals and one assist, setting a school record for goals in a game. Other goals were scored by Kate Madison, Jaime Pettis, Danielle Vogelheim and Libby Withrow. Pettis, a freshman, also set a school record with four assists in one game. Other assists went to Madison, Vogelheim and senior Elissa Wood.

East Jordan scored on its only shot of the day on a direct free kick from 20 yards, over a wall.

Some messages have to be repeated a few times before they sink in.

Study after study has proven conclusively that the more people are exposed to your advertising, the more they will like your product, and buy your product. Furthermore, the value of repetition is cumulative, which means that far too often advertising is ended just as it is beginning to work.

I can help you plan an advertising campaign that will take advantage of the benefits of repetition.

INTERGOVERNMENTAL AGREEMENT CREATING BEAVER ISLAND EMERGENCY SERVICES AUTHORITY

THIS INTERLOCAL AGREEMENT to create the Beaver Island Emergency Services Authority is entered into between Peaine Township and St. James Township (the Townships), both of which are Michigan general law townships located in Charlevoix County, Michigan.

RECITALS

A. The Townships have historically operated jointly a fire/rescue department and an emergency ambulance service on Beaver Island.

B. Because the Townships believe it is the most desirable and economic method of furnishing fire/rescue and emergency ambulance services on Beaver Island, they desire to preserve and maintain the joint fire/rescue and emergency ambulance services on Beaver Island as a joint emergency services authority.

C. The maintenance of a joint emergency services authority is authorized by Act 57 of the Public Acts of 19BB, as amended (the Municipal Emergency Services Act), being MCLA 124.601, et seq (the Act).

D. The Townships, therefore, desire to enter into this Agreement, incorporating a joint emergency services authority, and to bring the administration and operation of their joint fire/rescue and emergency ambulance services in accordance with current Michigan law.

AGREEMENT

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual promises contained herein, the Townships hereby agree to incorporate the following joint emergency services authority, under the terms and conditions provided herein, pursuant to the provisions of the Act:

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION

I. NAME

The name of the joint emergency services authority shall be the Beaver Island Emergency Services Authority (the Authority).

II. PURPOSE

The Authority shall provide fire/rescue and emergency ambulance services within the total territory of Peaine Township and St. James Township in Charlevoix County, Michigan.

III. LEGAL ENTITY

As provided in Section 6 of the Act, the Authority shall be a separate, non-profit body corporate, with power to sue or be sued in any court of this state. The Authority shall possess all the powers necessary to carry out the purpose of its incorporation, and those incident to those purposes. The enumeration of any powers in these Articles of Incorporation shall not be construed as a limitation upon the Authority's general powers.

IV. POWERS

The Authority shall have the following powers, which shall be liberally construed in its favor:

A. All powers provided in the Act, now or in the future, and all powers which a general law township may possess in connection with the operation or maintenance of fire/rescue and emergency ambulance services.

B. To acquire real and personal property by purchase, lease, gift, devise, or condemnation, either within or without its corporate limits.

C. To hold, manage, control, sell, exchange, or lease the real and personal property it has acquired.

D. To condemn private property under Act No. 149 of the Public Acts of 1911, being sections 213.1 to 213.25 of the Michigan Compiled Laws, and the uniform condemnation processes act, Act No. B7 of the Public Acts of 19B0, being sections 213.52 to 213.77 of the Michigan Compiled Laws.

E. To hire and discharge employees and/or volunteers, including but not limited to a fire chief, an emergency ambulance service director, and such fire fighters, officers, and ambulance personnel as shall be necessary for the proper and efficient operation and maintenance of the fire/rescue and emergency ambulance services, and attorneys, accountants, and consultants as the Authority considers necessary to carry out the purposes of the Authority.

F. To adopt bylaws and rules of administration to accomplish the purposes of the Act, including but not limited to establishing rules and regulations for the governance of the Authority's employees and/or volunteers and for the care and management of the Authority's equipment and property.

G. To apply for and accept grants, loans, or contributions from the federal government or any of its agencies, the state, or other public or private agencies to be used for any of the purposes of the Act and to do any and all things within its express or implied powers necessary or desirable to secure that financial or other aid or cooperation in the carrying out of any of the purposes of the Act.

H. To enter into any contracts with other entries not prohibited by law.

I. To investigate emergency services requirements, needs, and programs and engage, by contract, consultants as may be necessary and cooperate with the federal government, state, political subdivisions, and other authorities in those investigations.

J. To carry over fund balances from year to year consistent with sound financial management for capital improvements, equipment purchases, contingencies and other similar purposes for which contingency fund balances are customary.

K. To set up separate fire/rescue and emergency ambulance administrative divisions, combine them, or set up any other organizational framework which the Authority deems appropriate, including the ability to provide for separate or combined supervision of any division.

L. To form other entries necessary for the purpose of implementing the purpose of the Authority.

M. To hold public meetings and take such other actions required or authorized by law for the operation of emergency services which uses a special assessment as one of the methods of funding.

N. To take any additional action or make any policy necessary to implement these powers or carry out the purpose of the Authority.

V. LIMITATIONS

The Authority may not obligate any of the Townships to pay any debt of the Authority.

VI. BOARD OF DIRECTORS

The Authority shall be governed by a Board of Directors (the Authority Board). The Authority Board shall exercise final authority regarding the powers of the Authority. The Authority Board may delegate to its staff, volunteers and committees such powers as it deems appropriate, as long as such delegation does not create a conflict of interest or is otherwise unlawful. The Authority Board shall be comprised of two (2) members with one (1) member appointed by each Township. Each Township shall appoint its member for of three (3) years. Each Authority Board member serves at the pleasure of the Township Board which made the appointment. As a result, an Authority board member may be removed by the Township Board which made the appointment following written charges and a public hearing. A quorum shall be the two (2) board members. Except as may be provided in these articles, all decisions of the Authority Board shall be made by the unanimous vote of both Authority board members. If both Authority Board members do not agree on the issue being decided, then the Townships shall meet in joint session. A vote of the majority of the combined Township Boards may make the decision by motion (for example, six votes out of the combined membership of ten persons is sufficient to approve the motion). The Authority Board may create such offices and committees as it deems appropriate. The Authority Board shall set its schedule for meetings, but at a minimum shall meet at least once every six months. The Authority Board may pay its members a per diem payment only if the amount of each per diem payment is specified in the proposed budget of the Authority.

The Authority Board may also reimburse its members, officers and employees for expenses which have been incurred on behalf of the Authority. The Authority Board shall adopt its own rules of procedure. The Authority Board shall also comply with the Open Meetings Act and the Freedom of Information Act.

VII. DURATION

The Authority shall continue indefinitely unless it is dissolved as provided by these Articles.

VIII. FIRE HALL LEASE

The Authority shall execute a lease with Peaine Township for rental of the fire hall which is being constructed as the result of bonds which will be sold through the authority of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Rural Development (the bonds). The lease shall contain total rental payments which at a minimum shall be sufficient for Peaine Township to make all required bond payments. These rental payments shall be made to Peaine Township at such times as the parties shall agree. In addition, by the execution of this Intergovernmental Agreement, St. James Township shall be liable to Peaine Township for one-half of all bond payments if the Authority fails to make its rental payment or if the rental payment is insufficient to make bond payments when those payments become due. Peaine Township agrees to convey ownership of the fire hall property to the Authority for $1.00 as soon as the bonds have been completely paid.

IX. FINANCES

The Authority Board shall have budgetary and financial control over the Authority. However, the Authority shall adopt a line item budget. A copy of the Authority budget must be given to each Township Board at least fourteen (14) days before the budget is adopted by the Authority Board. The Authority shall be financed equally by both Townships, unless the Authority is funded by a district-wide millage, as provided by Section 12 of the Act. The funds obtained by any millage may be supplemented by charges for services or any other method authorized by law, including such supplemental payments by the Townships as the Townships in their sole discretion may elect. At its own expense, the Authority shall have its financial records audited at least every two years by the same auditor who is used by either Township.

X. TRANSFER OF ASSETS

All assets of the current combined Township fire/rescue department and joint emergency ambulance service, including all personal property currently used in connection with the existing fire/rescue department and emergency ambulance service, shall be transferred to the Authority immediately. The Authority shall also immediately assume all existing debts of the Beaver Island fire/rescue department and emergency ambulance service.

XI. WITHDRAWAL/DISSOLUTION

A. Neither Township may elect to withdraw from the Authority unless and until all of the following conditions are satisfied:

1. All bonded Indebtedness of the Authority, including indebtedness to the United States as the result of bonds purchased through the authority of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Rural Development, is discharged; and,
2. All outstanding obligations each Township has to the Authority are discharged and all outstanding obligations the Authority has to each Township are discharged;

B. After the conditions of paragraph A, above, have been satisfied, either Township may withdraw from the Authority following the procedures of this paragraph. Any withdrawal shall have the effect of dissolving the Authority.

1. Before a Township may vote on a resolution concerning withdrawal from the Authority, it must publish twice in the Charlevoix Courier or its successor, a public notice that the Township is considering withdrawing from the Authority and that this withdrawl will cause a dissolution of the Authority. Both notices shall be published within 30 days of the meeting at which the actual withdrawal will be considered and the second notice shall be published at least one week before the meeting.
2. The effective date of the resolution to withdraw must be at least six months after the meeting at which the resolution has passed.
3. A certified copy of the resolution to withdraw shall be sent by certified mail to the chair of the Authority Board and the clerk of the other Township. The resolution must be mailed at least six months before the effective date of the resolution.
4. If both Townships elect to dissolve the Authority then each Township shall follow the public notice and publication requirements of subsection 1, above. The Townships shall agree on the effective date of the dissolution. No mailing of the resolutions to dissolve the Authority is required.

C. Upon dissolution, debts of the Authority shall be paid and the net assets shall be divided equally between the Townships. Each Township shall also be subject to the obligations imposed by the Act. If the Authority's assets are insufficient to pay all of the Authority's debts, then each Township shall remain liable on an equal basis for a proportion of the debts and liabilities of the Authority incurred while the Township was a part of the Authority.

XII. PUBLICATION/FILING

The Clerk for Peaine Township shall be responsible for publishing these Articles of Incorporation in the Charlevoix Courier, Northern Islander and Beaver Beacon and for filing a certified copy of these articles with the Secretary of State as required by the Act.

XIII. EFFECTIVE DATE

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix tennis team came back from a loss April 23 against Boyne City, 4-3, to beat Traverse City St. Francis, 6-1, April 26.

According to coach Erik Lundteigen, the win against Traverse City was big for Charlevoix and was the result of hard work by many members of the Rayder team.

Individual results for the April 26 meet were:

- At number one singles, Jason Haas won 6-0, 6-1.
- At number two singles, Allen Brooks won 6-0, 6-0.
- At number three singles, Nathan Turner won 6-1, 6-1.
- At number four singles, Roscoe Serrels won 6-0, 6-1.
- At number one doubles, Mitchell Klooster and Andrew Mailloux won 6-4, 6-4.
- At number three doubles, Cody Wheat and Joshua Fassett won by forfeit.

Lundteigen added, at number two double, Sparky Nitchman and Taylor Martin fought a tough match that went three sets, only to lose in the end.

"But, they hung in there. It was the toughest match of the day," he said.

As for the April 23 meet against Boyne City, Lundteigen said he was definitely seeing improvement.

"We need our doubles to pick it up a little bit," he said.

Individual results were:

- At number one singles, Haas won 6-3, 6-2.
- At number two singles, Brooks won 6-4, 6-0.
- At number three singles, Turner won 6-0, 6-4.

Baseball team loses some tough matches last week

Charlevoix finished its preparation for the Lake Michigan Conference schedule by dropping a doubleheader at Maple City Glen Lake, 19-8 and 5-4, then placing second in its own Charlevoix Tournament, beating Grayling, 11-4 and losing to Petoskey in the finals, 2-3.

The Rayders were manhandled in the opener against the Lakers as hurler Chris Loper suffered a rare off day, yielding 10 runs in three innings of work to take the loss.

Nate Teuscher led the hitters with a three-for-three game at the plate, including a double and a homer. Neil Friske and Matt Kochanny each were 2 for 3 with Friske adding 2 RBI.

Dennis Avery drove in three runs with a home run.

In the second game, the Rayders rallied from a 4-1 deficit to tie the game but couldn't pull out the victory. Avery took the loss, giving up four runs on seven hits and two walks in over three innings of work. He tripled and drove in two runs.

Chris Loper had two hits while Teuscher, Matt Kilkenny, Rob Boss, Kochanny and Ben Speigl had one hit apiece.

In the opener of its annual tournament, Charlevoix used an 11 hit attack to beat the Vikings.

Boss led the way with three hits, including a round tripper and three RBI. Avery also had three hits, scored three runs and had two RBI and a homer.

Kilkenny was two-for-three with two RBI. Loper, Kochanny and Friske also added hits for the Rayder cause. Loper scored three runs.

Teuscher picked up the win in relief, going over four innings and giving up only one earned run on three hits and three walks while striking out six.

In the championship game, Loper was outdueled by Petoskey's hurler as Charlevoix and Petoskey combined for only five hits.

Loper went the distance (over five innings) giving up only two earned runs on three hits. He walked only one, striking out seven. Petoskey plated the winning run in the bottom of the sixth inning, breaking a 2-2 tie.

Avery had both Rayder hits, scored one run and drove in the other.

Sewer lawsuit to be in court on June 7

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

In spite of the fact that Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas already dismissed the case once, he will again hear motions at 10 a.m., June 7 in circuit court regarding a lawsuit filed against the Charlevoix Public School District.

Pajtas received an order April 16 from Judge Richard Allen Griffin, of the Michigan Court of Appeals in Lansing, sent the case back to circuit court for further proceedings.

The order stipulated that Pajtas submit an opinion in this matter, no later than June 11, 2002.

Pajtas dismissed the same case against the school district Sept. 14, 2001. And his decision was appealed by the plaintiffs, five private Charlevoix residents, on Sept. 27, 2001.

Now almost a year later, the claim is back on Pajtas' docket.

The plaintiffs in the appeal, Kenneth Richard Tunison, Kenneth Staley, Robert G. Mossman, Paul Richards and Joseph Seidel, claim the school district's use of funds — garnered from a $18.8 million bond passed by voters in 1999 — to extend the city of Charlevoix's sewer to the site of the new Charlevoix High School in Marion Township is unconstitutional.

One of their lawyers, Karen Ferguson, of Olson and Bzdok, the Traverse City firm representing the plaintiffs, said the reason the appellate court decided to have Pajtas rehear the case is since his September 2001 dismissal, new evidence has been found that supports the plaintiffs' claim.

She explained the new evidence as changes to the sewer design made by the city. The plan once was to use a 4 inch force main for 1,050 feet near the school but the city has since decided to run the four inch line next to the 8 inch.

Opponents of the project feel this decision poses an environmental threat to Marion Township and that it supports their claim that the school funded city sewer line is being run to service commercial and residential projects, not just the school.

However, the plaintiffs confidence that the new evidence might weigh the case in their favor has not shaken the district's plans to enter into a contract with the city to extend its sewer line to the school.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Dr. John Sturock recently said the district plans to continue moving forward.

According to city manager Mike Wiesner, sewer extension plans for the new high school site are currently on hold pending a decision by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) as to whether or not a permit it issued the city to run the line is valid.

The permit is currently facing a contested case, filed hy the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association, an environmental group whose membership includes the aforementioned plaintiffs.

An administrative judge with the MDEQ will review the permit but whether or not it is valid prior to that hearing has not been established. A date for the review has not been set.

If Pajtas rules in the school's favor, the case at the appellate court level will continue.

In the meantime, doors at the new high school are scheduled to open Sept. 3, 2002 for the first day of classes in the 2002-2003 school year.

Audience wants an end

MEETING

Our prosecutor can't be doing that because she turned us in. Would you sit still and not do anything?" he said.

In response, one audience member told Behling he did not think Kur had a choice on whether or not to report a violation of the law.

Patrick further pointed out the county has not received a bill and does not even know what it owes Patterson up to this point. He added that Patterson usually works with the county on labor matters and those costs may be included in a final bill.

Price added the resolution the commission was voting on not only pays Patterson for past costs related to this open meetings matter, but also hires Patterson to represent the commissioners.

Commissioner Shirley Roloff said the best solution at this time was for the entire commission to meet and discuss this matter.

The resolution to pay and hire Patterson failed 4-1. Behling voted for the resolution. Commission chair Phil Johnson was not at the meeting.

The county commission will meet at 1 p.m., May 8 to discuss the Open Meetings Act situation.

Sewer tap-in about $3,000 more than septic

SEWER

up. For that much money you can have a septic field put in and not pay monthly fees," Drebenstedt said.

"So, to me, this has got to be for big, expensive houses. I personally wouldn't pay a monthly fee on top of $8,600, when I can put in a nice septic field for under $6,000. I've never had a problem with my septic, so I consider it free."

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Strurock said over time he expects the school to recoup expenses.

"Your guess is as good as mine (as to whether people will tap in,) how do I know what people will do? This is over time — built into the agreement is a 20 year payback period. It's going to be a time thing," he said.

In March, city manager Mike Wiesner and city planner Gerry Harsch attended the Marion Township Board meeting.

At the meeting, Marion Township resident Joseph Seidel asked Wiesner and Harsch what it will cost residents to tap into the city sewer line.

Wiesner said the city estimates costs to residents living in area D to total between $7,600 and $8,600.

Wiesner explained the fees for area D include a $50 charge per residential equivalent unit (REU) for pump station number three which was built near Harbor Industries and will be part of the service. He said the average home constitutes one REU, the new high school's use is expected to be 6.7 REUs.

Also included in the price is a $200 fee for the sewer line that went in almost two years ago when the new entrance to Marion Center Road was constructed and an additional $550 to pay for the line that will be constructed.

Then there is a $700 fee that will be saved in a special city account to pay the $611,000 bill to oversize the line from Harbor Industries to the city's Waste Water Treatment Plant located near Lake Michigan Beach off Park Avenue.

"That line is going to have a capacity issue as growth takes place. Another 1,000 REUs can be put on it, then it has to be increased in size. Current sewer customers shouldn't have to pay for construction of a line in the future that wouldn't be needed without new customers coming in," Wiesner explained of the $700 oversize charge.

The $50 charge for pump station number three, the $200 charge for the already constructed sewer line and the $550 for the line to be constructed will be reimbursed to the school district.

Then, the city will charge a $2,100 "privilege fee." Wiesner said this is the only fee that has increased since planning for the sewer line started.

The fee increased April 1, 2002, for the first time in seven years. The cost went from $1,500 to $2,100 for out-of-city residents. City residents are charged $1,400 to tap in, $400 more than before April 1.

This privilege fee will pay for a future expansion of the treatment plant.

Wiesner said an engineer is in the process of calculating when an expansion will be necessary. Until the expansion, privilege fees will be collected in a city account.

Wiesner estimates the biggest cost to tie into the line to be installation of an individual small pump station to accompany the pressure line the city is installing. He estimated this pump station and the line that will be run from the residence to the force main, where it will connect, to be between $4,000 and $5,000.

He said there are currently between six and seven facilities including homes, the Belvedere Golf Club Clubhouse and a Girl Scout Camp within the 14 parcel area.

As of April 25, the city had received approvals from both Charlevoix and Marion townships to run the line and from the school district. But contractual agreements between the city and those entities have not been signed.

An addendum to the agreement, whereby the school will fund a portion of litigation costs that may arise from the sewer extension, is being drafted. Approval of the addendum by both city council and the school board has been received.

Wharfside coming down this month

Demolition bids for the Wharfside property, located at 330 and 332 Bridge Street in Charlevoix, came in $17,400 over what the city of Charlevoix anticipated paying.

City street department superintendent John Martin told city council at a special meeting May 2 the city had received a building demolition cost estimate of $35,000 during the planning process. However, this estimate came from a contractor who chose not to bid the project.

In an interview, Martin said the initial estimate was legitimate, but some uncontrollable factors have since entered the picture.

"From the time we got the estimate the landfill closed, so the debris has to be hauled further which adds to the cost. There's also the time of year; right now contractors' work loads are increased," he explained.

The city did receive two bids April 29 to demolish the building and fill the site. Council awarded the contract to low bidder C.H. Smith Co. of Charlevoix, for $52,400.

The surprise extra cost to demolish the building will come from the city's general fund where Martin said there is $50,900 in additional revenue.

The schedule accepted by council stipulates the project will be completed by June 5. Martin estimated the demolition starting by next week.

The completion date is mandated in the grant agreement the city entered into with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, the project's primary fund provider.

Funding sources targeted by the city for purchase and demolition of the building include: $500,000 in funding from Waterways, a $500,000 Trust Fund Grant, $62,000 from the Frye Foundation, $5,000 from the Charlevoix Community Foundation and a local match by the city of $173,000.

The city closed on the Wharfside Jan. 10, agreeing to pay Charlevoix residents Rex and Ineke McCarthy $1.2 million dol-

City to move ahead with sewer

> "What's going to happen if we keep going along with this and all the sudden it's reversed?"

> Charlevoix City Council Member

The school and the city of Charlevoix are finalizing last minute details and plan to move forward with plans to extend the city sewer line to the site of the new Charlevoix High School, opening this fall.

But, not all members of city council are comfortable with the progression.

Second ward councilman Gabe Campbell requested at the May 7 council meeting that city attorney, Jim Young, look into the precedent attorneys for the plaintiffs in a lawsuit filed against the school district, five Charlevoix residents, plan to apply.

"What's going to happen if we keep going along with this and all the sudden it's reversed?" Campbell asked.

According to one of the attorneys for the plaintiffs, Karen Ferguson, the previous attorney general ruling involved a school district that extended electrical lines.

Charlevoix County Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas ruled Sept. 14, 2001 this previous case did not apply to the one brought against the school district. The plaintiffs currently claim the school district's use of bond money to extend the city's sewer system to its new high school is unconstitutional.

However, the plaintiffs appealed Pajtas' ruling and the appellate court recently ruled to send the case back to Pajtas for further review. Pajtas will rehear the case at 10 a.m., June 7.

Young plans to review Pajtas' original decision, dismissing the school from the case, and respond to council as to how the judge felt the electric line precedent did not apply in this case and whether he feels it does apply in some way.

In the meantime, the school gave the city the go ahead for the project at a special city council meeting May 2 accepting two conditions. First, the school said to move forward in spite of a Michigan Department of Environmental Quality

Charlevoix police tobacco sting nets four violations

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Four area business's employees were cited recently for selling tobacco to a minor as the result of the Charlevoix Police Department sting

Charlevoix Police Officer James Schlappi said the sting used a high school student who went into 11 different businesses in Charlevoix that sell tobacco products. The list of businesses was furnished to Schlappi by the State of Michigan.

"No one was singled out," he said.

The student went in the business to buy a tobacco product — specifically Marlboro cigarettes. If the employee asked to see identification or asked the student's age, the student was instructed to give his or her real driver's license and not lie about their age.

"We placed the burden on the employees to verify the person was old enough," he said.

After visiting all 11 businesses on his list, Schlappi returned to the four locations where tobacco was sold to the student and issued tickets to the offending employee.

Schlappi said some of the employees were calm when they were ticketed, others cried. Two of the four employees were fired.

Furnishing tobacco to a minor is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not more than $50 and court costs.

Annual breast cancer walk to be this weekend

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

On May 11 Charlevoix residents and visitors will participate in the Sue DeYoung/Judy Edger Memorial Breast Cancer Walk, a 2.5 mile trek through Charlevoix to support the fight against breast cancer.

When the words breast cancer filter through the minds of many people, they are accompanied by an image of a woman they know or knew.

The ability for most everyone to associate a face with the disease is because one in every eight women is the victim of breast cancer. For some, the image in their head is that of Sue DeYoung or Judy Edger two, well-known Charlevoix woman who lost their battle with the disease in the 90s.

Sue DeYoung was a young mother of four when she died in 1992 and Judy Edger, an ardent supporter of the fight against breast cancer and a mother of two, succumbed to the disease in 1999.

Charlevoix residents and area visitors have since decided to become proactive and fight back.

This year, the walk gives people the opportunity to support both the American Cancer Society and to reduce the number of names on the long list of breast cancer sufferers right here in Charlevoix.

While enjoying the afternoon, participants will build a weapon to be used against the deadly disease. This weapon is a fund to pay for local cancer education and support programs.

Walk donations are Charlevoix's ammo in the fight against the disease.

Since its beginning, the walk has raised over $100,000 for the American Cancer Society and cancer research. But, this year, the bulk of the money raised will stay in Charlevoix so the lives donors will touch will be those of neighbors, friends or family members.

The Charlevoix Area Memorial Cancer Fund will be established within the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

According to Vivian Mettler, a volunteer walk coordinator, "A portion of the fund will be used for immediate support and part will go toward building an endowment, which will help ensure that financial resources are available for this important work into the future."

A donation to this cause for endowment building, qualifies for a special State of Michigan tax credit in addition to the standard income tax deduction.

Edger's husband, who has participated in the walk over the past seven years, said the endowment fund will help provide for the community into the future.

"The need for cancer funding is probably going to be with us for a long time," he said.

The walk itself begins with registration at 8:30 a.m. and sneakers start hitting the pavement at 9 a.m. To participate, meet up with fellow walkers in Charlevoix's East Park, off Bridge Street in the central business district.

Donation forms are available at Frisbey GMAC Real Estate located at 116 Antrim Street in Charlevoix.

For those who can't make the walk but would like to donate to the fund, make checks payable to the Charlevoix County Community Foundation with a memo to the Charlevoix Area Memorial Cancer Fund and mail it to: Charlevoix Area Memorial Cancer Fund, 116 Antrim Street, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Luck of the color spin

Charlevoix Elementary School had its annual Spring Carnival Friday. At the event, children could play various games to win tickets that enabled them to "buy" prizes. Corrections

Due to a computer error, a resturant rating guide in Edith Gilbert's column on page 4 of last week's Courier was incorrect. The rating guides for resturants should have been:

One bell — pleasantly quiet (under 65 decibels).

Two bells — can talk easily (65-70).

Three bells — talking normally gets diffcult (70-75).

Four bells — can only talk in raised voices (75-80).

Bob — Too noisy for normal conversation (80+).

For overall ratings, Gilbert suggests this:

* extraordinary  excellent
 good
* fair
0 poor

And for cost ratings, this may help:

$$$$ Very expensive — more than $25.
$$$ Expensive — $18-$24.
$$ Good —$10-$17.
$ Entrees under $10.

Also, the name of the girl in the front page picture should have been spelled Leah.

Why celebrate mothers on only one day?

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

The common image of a mother in the world is one of greatness.

A mother is the giver of our lives, the source of endless love, the maker of food and the healer of booboos across this planet. A mother is a cherished individual that has no equal.

When we are children, we can never think of being away from her. When we are adults, we best not forget to call her weekly, if not daily. This woman is the source of our greatest feelings and a bond that can never be broken.

It has been reported that the most common last words of a warrior dying on the battlefield is "Mommy." When we look at death, we wish for the safety and love that she provides us.

This can only begin to describe my own mother, as any son believes. There are no words in the English language that can do my mother, or any mother, justice.

You see, I am the result of a single parent houschold.

In the early years of my life, I did not know what it was to have monetary wealth. My little sister and I did not have the finest clothing, the biggest house or the ability to buy any toys that caught our fancy.

However, we did not suffer from want thanks to the hard work of my mother.

Every day my mother would slave at a low paying job to raise enough money to put food on our table and a roof over our heads.

Once she got home, the work was not over.

There was still dinner to be made, cleaning to be done and time to be spent with her children.

The work she put into raising my sister and I was amazing.

As my sister and I got older, my mother's lessons were very practical. We learned how to become more self-reliant.

We learned how to cook our own meals, clean our own clothing and, most importantly, finish our chores. We learned very quickly that chores were very important to complete, for there is no wrath like the wrath of a tired mother.

From this, my sister and I learned about respect. As much as we would be angry with our mother at times for her sternness, we still respected her as a queen. And she ruled over us with an iron fist at times.

You could not blame her. Here she was a single mother trying to raise two very stubborn children who had a healthy mistrust of authority figures and still do. She demanded our respect and we gave it.

But, she was not alone because at that time, and to this day, there are many single mothers in the same situation as her. Each of them are doing their best to raise their families and give their children good lives.

Too often single mothers are put down and it is said their children do not get a healthy family life. It is amazing to me how wrong some people can be.

My mother gave me a family life and taught me things that rivaled, if not passed, the experiences of my friends with two parent families.

And she still has an effect on me.

To this day I use the work ethic that she taught me in my life. Here I am, the editor of a newspaper in my 20s, working every day to become a success and make my mother proud.

I find myself working long hours, slaving over the paper, taking my work too personal at times but relishing its completion each week.

In my sister, I see the caring and protection my mother gave to us, as my sister interacts with her two little boys. And, since they are two little boys with the same stubborn attitude as my sister, I see her using the same tactics my mother used on us to get respect.

My sister is now the queen of her own realm.

Now I watch as my mother gets older and she continues to teach me. She is remarried and living each day to its fullest. Her smile is brighter than the sun when she is with her husband and there is a twinkle in her eyes that can only come with a wisdom I have yet to learn.

And no matter what kind of stress I am facing, no matter which of my readers or sources are mad at me for whatever I said to offend that week, my mother's voice can still make the angry thoughts go away.

It is not right to honor her, or any mother for that matter, on just one day of the year.

Every day should be Mother's Day.

The wilds have great addition to dinner table

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

One of the surest ways to appreciate the natural world that surrounds us is to make use of some part of it for food.

While we all know that at some distant time in the prehistoric past we must have obtained all our food from the natural world, today it is much easier to conclude that food comes from the supermarket or possibly the garden. It is not necessary to kill an animal and carry its bleeding carcass home to reinforce our connection to the wild world.

While the wild food plants in our world will probably never be a large part of our nutrition, they can help remind us that almost every living thing — plant and animal — in the world, is food for some creature and that we are a part of that great web.

This time of year we have a special opportunity to savor a wild plant or two. You should be appropriately concerned that some, maybe even most, of the world's plants are more or less poisonous. After all, plants cannot run away from whatever might want to eat them and they have had to protect themselves or they would not have survived.

However, some plants are so distinctive and easily recognized that we can confidently collect them from the wild and use them for food. In early spring, the woods of northern Michigan have an obvious plant candidate for our tables that cannot be confused with any other plant and that can provide both nutrition and flavor.

Wild leeks, sometimes called wild onions or ramps, push up 6 to 8 inch tall, oval, glossy green leaves as early as late April. Most plants have only two leaves. The leaves are soft and have that unmistakable onion-garlic odor. Between 3 and 4 inches into the soil, attached to the leaves is a small, white, little, finger-sized bulb.

The bulbs are sweet and delicious raw or cooked, although they do have that odorous characteristic that reminds everyone you have just eaten them.

On behalf of the Charlevoix Elementary Parent-Teacher Organization, we would like to thank all the wonderful volunteers who helped make the annual spring carnival a great success.

Thank you to our set-up crew whose muscle we could not have done without: the parents and teachers who worked games and concession machines — obviously without our workers there would be no carnival! Thank you, Mr. Swenor, Sue Gengle and Jill Baier for answering questions and seeing to it that our requests were fulfilled promptly. Thanks to the school board members who worked our raffle table and the great bunch of people behind our ticket sales. Thank you to all who worked in the kitchen serving

Thanks to all of you who contributed baked goods for the cake walk — it was a huge success, as always. Also, a big thank you to our group of face painters who decorated numerous cheeks with crafty designs. Many thanks to those of you who stayed late to clean up the remains of this fun-filled night.

The money raised makes it possible to do many great things for our kids and the school.

There are so many elements that must be met to put on such a large-scale event — even if it is simply making phone calls or making copies — it cannot be done without the help of our volunteers. We feel it is espcecially important to recognize the following people who contributed countless hours of their time: Sharon Smith, Julie Voci, Sherry McCary, Heather Kage and John Young. We genuinely thank you for your dedication and hard work.

Don't smoke

Editor:

Smoking is bad for you, so right now, I want those who smoke to make a decision if they want a long or short life.

My grandma died of cancer from smoking yesterday. It was sad. Right when she got it she stopped smoking.

So, PLEASE STOP SMOKING. It is so bad for your lungs; this was just a warning. After you take one cigarette, it makes your lungs like a wood color. So, those that got this, please stop.

Fix the parking problem

Editor:

I am a sixth grade student attending Charlevoix Middle School. I am writing on behalf of the city parking.

Parking downtown is very crowded. It is usually the worst in the summer. We do not have enough parking. Sometimes there is no parking left for residents. Also, there are not very many lots. There are two behind the shops. We have very little parallel parking.

Next, you can't park in the Oleson's lot because it's "shoppers only," which only leaves us with two lots and the parallel parking.

One other thing we need to look at is Venetian Festival; there is always one less parking lot. That is because of the carnival. They take up one of the two lots. Then to add to that, that's when all the tourists come to town.

Another place we could have another lot is at the middle school. They can't do anything to it anyway.

We definitely need more parking. I hope this letter will make you feel the way I do.

Wild leeks can be a treat

The whole plant can be washed, blanched and roasted. A few of the bulbs will make the most wonderful leek and potato soup you have ever eaten and in almost any recipe that includes onions or leeks, they can be substituted.

Ed Voss, who wrote the book Michigan Flora, even suggests putting a few of the mildly flavored leaves into a sandwich as a perked up substitute for lettuce. The bulbs are somewhat stronger in flavor than their cultivated relatives, so using less of the wild leeks would be a good idea.

And avoid overdosing. Too much of even a nutritionally valuable plant can be problematic. It might also be a good idea to lay in a substantial supply of breath freshener.

Get out there and reconnect to the natural world by using some of it to keep body and soul together. And let your neighbors know what you have done.

For those of you needing any further encouragement, leeks have been considered a mild aphrodisiac for centuries.

Margaret was a mother of 18 children, devoting her life to her family as a loving mother and grandmother.

Dorothy Rose McCann: Died Dec. 26, 2002

A Mass of the Resurrection will be at 3 p.m.. Saturday, May 11 at Holy Cross Church on Beaver Island. Burial will follow at Holy Cross Cemetery, Beaver Island.

The family is being served by the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

Wylie VanLoo: Aug. 19, 1935 - April 26, 2002

Wylie VanLoo died on the morning of April 26, 2002.

Adrian and Mary (McKenzie) VanLoo produced six sons. Wylie was number five, born Aug. 19, 1935. A husband to Janie; a father to Bradley; a grandfather to Ashley and Nathan; Wylie was a loved and loving man who made friends wherever he went, demanding nothing from anyone yet generously giving of himself to others.

Wylie became the third brother to pass on and join his mother and father; beloved mother-in-law, June Herrin; father-in-law James "Pat" Herrin; granddaughter, Heather; brothers, Jack and Adrian, in what must be one of the greatest reunions of loved ones of all time.

On June 11, 1955, Wylie married the love of his life, Janie Herrin, in Pontiac and they spent most of their married life living in Warren.

Wylie became a valued employee and friend to the Durst family of Berkeley and while employed at Durst Lumber made a host of friends, including all of the Durst family, especially Don and Barhara, who were like a brother and sister to him.

To attempt to list his closest friends would be impossihle, since the space in this paper could not begin to contain the people who called Wylie their friend.

Left to remember this man who meant so much to many are his wife, Janie; son, Brad; granddaughter, Ashley of Port Charlotte, Fla.; grandson, Nathan of Detroit; brothers, Bill (MaryLou). Roxy (Laurie) and Jim (Judy) of Charlevoix; brother-in-law, Jimmy Herrin of Detroit; sisters-in-law Dorothy VanLoo and Fay VanLoo, of Charlevoix; beloved auntie, Nell Forgie, 100 years old, Harrison; along with many nieces, nephews and cousins as well as "all the gang" from the Royal Oak Elks Club.

We will miss you Wylie; your laughter, joy and way of making people feel good about themselves. Thank you for the memories we carry with us to remember you. For your love, your jokes that never stopped and for your concern for family that knew no hounds. We are saddened by your leaving but oh, so much better, for having had you with us. Thanks for being the hest Wylie you could have possibly been. We love you.

Mayor's race to be contested this November

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The upcoming Charlevoix City Council election will be a contested race for incumbent Mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell who has held the seat since November of 1998.

The election for the mayor's seat, which will take place this fall on Nov. 5, will be a battle of friends. Current, second ward, city councilman Gabe Campbell has filed to face off with his friend, Russell.

Russell was a city councilman for 11 years prior to being elected mayor and has ran unopposed for the mayor's seat twice.

But the opposition this time around isn't a problem for him.

"It doesn't bother me," he said. And added that there will be no problem maintaining his friendship with Campbell.

The friendship issue almost kept Campbell out of the race.

"I had to think about it (running for mayor). Butch is a friend and I was happy on council, but I decided I would run for mayor. I'm hoping to get more done. And I think it's time we take another look at the way we're spending money. I have had a lot of people encouraging me from all three wards and thought I would give it a try," Campbell said.

Campbell filed April 29, over two weeks before the filing deadline. Along with his filing information he included 40 signatures from second ward residents supporting his candidacy, the maximum number of signatures allowed for submission.

However, Campbell's filing doesn't seal the deal for the final say in who the election candidates will be.

Other city residents can file for the election by picking up a form from city clerk Liz Gooch, at city hall and officially filing by 4 p.m., May 14. To register you must get between 25 and 40 signatures from residents in the ward in which you live.

If the number of candidates grows beyond Campbell and Russell, a primary election, tentatively scheduled for Aug. 6, will take place to narrow the field to two.

Even though Campbell won't be a councilman anymore, the Campbell family may still directly represent the second ward. Gabe's wife Karen has filed for his open second ward seat.

As of April 30 she was running unopposed.

"She said if I run for mayor she'll run for my seat on council; I said, 'Good for you,'" he said.

Bill Haggard's first ward seat is also opening up. Haggard replaced former council member Valerie Barnes in 2001 when she stepped down.

Alvin Russell

He does plan to run for re-election, but as of April 30 had not officially filed with the city clerk.

Gabe Campbell

Third ward councilman Sherm Chamberlain also plans to run for re-election. Chamberlain, who was appointed to his seat in 2000, is currently running unopposed.

Bill Haggard

Those planning to run for seats on council must also have 25 to 40 signed petitions from residents in the city ward where they live.

Police using education, enforcement to stop crime

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix Police Department is beefing up enforcement and using education in its efforts to keep alcohol out of the hands of minors and lower the number of alcohol-related arrests in the area.

The police department received funding for this project through the Office of Highway, Safety and Planning with a $5,000 Spotlight Grant.

According to Chief Dennis Halverson, the grant enables the department to have training programs for local liquor license holders and conduct undercover stings and other types of enforcement.

"This is geared at trying to make a positive impact on enforcement and people on the inside who are sensitive to the issues," he said.

The department had the first of its training sessions May 1 at Charlevoix City Hall with businesses that have liquor licenses in Charlevoix. The session focused on spotting fake identification cards, how to identify an intoxicated person and what are the legal ramifications for business owners when it comes to alcohol issues.

According to Halverson, the class went great.

"They asked a lot of questions. It was the first time we have ever had a room of liquor license holders in any kind of education endeavor," he said.

Gary and Mary Ramsey, owners of Andy's Party Store in Charlevoix, agreed that it was a beneficial session and said they learned some great new tips for spotting fake identification cards.

"I would be interested in other seminars. I think it would be helpful," Gary said. "I don't want to sell to kids. That is not what I am in business for."

Mary added the session was also helpful because it "built a bridge" between the business owners and the police.

Halverson said there will be an additional session for wait staff and bartenders in the near future.

In addition to the training sessions, the Charlevoix Police will also be conducting undercover sting operations in the near future.

"We have never had endeavors in that area," Halverson said. These undercover operations will include police posing as staff at businesses and the use of minors for underage purchase stings.

"We are being real up front with our intentions," Halverson said. "The goal is to reduce access of alcohol to underage people."

Charlevoix Area Hospital honors volunteers

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

It's the little things that mean so much to hospital patients during their stay, and the 111 active volunteers at Charlevoix Area Hospital work hard to make sure the patients' experience is one they fondly remember.

The contributions made by this huge task force were recognized by the hospital's administration and staff at a volunteer luncheon April 24 at the Argonne Supper Club in Charlevoix.

According to Charlevoix Area Hospital's volunteer coordinator, Rebecca Parker, the volunteers saved the hospital $144,450 last year. Parker based this estimate on information provided by the federal government that rates the worth of volunteer help to be $16.15 per hour.

However, Parker said saving money isn't the primary reason the hospital values volunteer help.

"The staff is grateful for volunteers who help ease the workload for everyone and add extra care and enthusiasm helping each patient to have a hospital experience that is as pleasant as possible," she said.

The volunteer workers interact with patients in almost every department at the hospital. From the time a patient is admitted, or when they need help finding their way, to when it's time to make dietary decisions and get started with physical therapy, the volunteers are right there.

Those who are not patients, but visit loved ones in the hospital, are also involved with volunteers who help with mailings and clerical work, are the smiling faces behind the counter at the gift shop or are their personal tour guides around the hospital.

When Eleanor Sutliff, one of the volunteers who was recently recognized for her 15 years of volunteer work, was asked why she has stuck with the position, she said, "I love it, I'm a people person."

Sutliff works mainly on floor duty, bringing the extras to patients when needed, like water and clean linens.

Sutliff was one of six women recognized at the luncheon for their long-term volunteer help. Margaret Landman, also received special recognition for her 15 years of dedicated work. Landman is currently president of the hospital guild, works in the gift shop and helps coordinate special events.

Nancy Wood, who was also recognized, has worked at the hospital for 35 years and is currently a guild member, tour chairman and information desk helper.

Landman, Wood and Sutliff were joined by fellow longtime volunteers, Esther Carey, who has volunteered for 35 years, Mariann Otmanowski, who has 30 years under her belt and Karen Bowman, who has been with the hospital for 25 years.

Parker said the volunteers continue serving Charlevoix Area Hospital staff and patients because of the satisfaction they get by serving others.

"They set an example for us all," she added.

Charlevoix Area Hospital has served the local community since 1919 and started an expansion in 2001 that will bring an updated, larger emergency department, an expanded obstetrics department and a technologically advanced cardiac care unit.

As the hospital continues to grow, so too does its need for volunteer help. Those interested in serving the hospital and its patients can contact Parker at (231) 547-8651.

Charlevoix students return from tour of Spain

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

From bull fights to museum visits, a group of 19 Charlevoix High School students and three chaperones who recently returned from Spain, did it all.

"Really the only way students can get a grasp of the language is by being immersed in the culture. With the two week immersion I saw a major improvement in their speaking skills and confidence," Jennifer Peters, Charlevoix High School Spanish three and four instructor and a trip chaperone, said.

This was Peters' third trip to Spain with students. Her first was with Ionia students, where she used to teach, and the second and third were with Charlevoix students. She has taught at Charlevoix High School for three years.

The French and Spanish classes rotate trips abroad both aiming to accomplish the same goal.

Peters explained that foreign language teachers expose their students to cultural realities in the countries where the language is spoken, but it's hard for students to envision and understand what that reality really is like.

According to accounts of the recent trip to Spain, offered by three students who had never traveled abroad — Peter Gorkiewicz, 17, Melissa Lopez, 17, and Marcy Bennett — they definitely got a taste of Spanish reality.

The students were in Spain for two weeks, starting their trip off March 22 and returning April 5. During their first week they checked out sites in Madrid and during the second, they spent time with host families in Barcelona.

While in Madrid, they toured Toledo, a mini steel factory, Segovia, El Prado, El Placia Real, La Casa de El Greco, attended a live bull fight and went to a Flamenco dance.

"We got in as much culture and as many tourist sites as we could. Our schedule was extremely busy. This wasn't a spring break to rest and relax," Peters said.

Even though the students were exposed to a ton of new places, everyone seemed to come away with a personal favorite visit.

For Lopez, the bull fight was her favorite.

"At first I was like, 'no way,' but by the last fight (there are six) I was cheering for the bull," she said.

Bennett reacted a little differently and during the first bull/conquistador encounter, but she shed some tears when the bull went down. She, like Lopez, was cheering "olé" by the end.

She really enjoyed their trip to Segovia, a destination famous for its freestanding aqueduct system; she described is as quaint, but amazing.

In their second week abroad, the group stuck together for the first two days, visiting Museo Picasso, participating in a walking tour of Barcelona and taking off on an excursion to Montserrat.

Gorkiewicz said the trip to Montserrat was awe-inspiring. The group climbed to the top of the mountain and looked out over Barcelona.

On the third day, it came time to split up and each student went to stay with a Barcelona family.

"This (the family stay) was definitely a great part of the trip. I had an awesome time. It was different than anything I had ever done before," Gorkiewicz said.

While Lopez found the bull fight exciting, she wasn't in for any cuisine thrills with her host family. Their refrigeration tactics were a little too off the beaten path for her — the food was hung in the windows of the home. So, she told them she was both vegetarian and lactose intolerant.

Bennett, whose family owns a Charlevoix Bed and Breakfast, said she couldn't get used to the shoes on in the house concept. She eventually said enough is enough and slipped hers off, but her host family were concerned her feet were cold.

All three of the students interviewed gave a thumbs up to Spain and said if given the chance, they would go hack.

And aside from all the fun they had each also hailed the trip to be a real asset to their Spanish studies.

"I really beefed up my speaking and understanding skills," Gorkiewicz said.

He's been rattling off Spanish slang at home out of habit.

Lopez said her speaking skills also improved and when she was back in northern Michigan she still found herself translating conversations in her head.

Bennett described her Spanish speaking skills going into the trip as "incompetent," but said when she stepped off the plane in Madrid, she quickly transformed into "Spanish speaking Marcy."

Peters said the friendships that were forged between students and the knowledge they took away was phenomenal.

"We had a really good group that really clicked," she said.

St. Mary students to perform play

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Over 60 students in first through fifth grades at St. Mary School will perform in the upcoming musical, "O Me, O My, O Nehemiah."

The musical will be presented at 7 p.m., May 9 in the St. Mary Family Center located at 1005 Bridge Street in Charlevoix, under the direction of Jodi Thompson, musical instructor at St. Mary School.

Thompson said she and the students chose this piece because of its message.

"It has a really nice message, especially after the events that occurred Sept. 11," she said.

The musical is an account of the life of Nehemiah based on the Old Testament book of Nehemiah.

The story begins with the Israelites singing about the problems they are facing following their defeat by the Babylonians. During the battle the walls of Jerusalem were torn down. And according to Thompson, the defeat left them weak, defenseless and discouraged.

"Nehemiah, the main character of the musical, is determined to do something about all their problems, by turning to God and by working to rebuild the wall. The 'Chorus of Worriers' have their doubts throughout the play, but with Nehemiah leading them on, and by putting their trust in God, they are able to complete the wall and protect themselves from their enemies," she explained.

Thompson has directed this musical in other parishes where she and her husband, the Rev. Tod Thompson, minister at the United Methodist Church in Charlevoix, worked and worshipped.

She said the message the musical sends is applicable to today as the problems we face in our lives do not have to defeat us.

"We can be victorious just as Nehemiah was," Thompson said.

The musical itself will be a half hour presentation and prior to the show, sixth grade students who take music lessons at Northwest Academy, Charlevoix's Charter School, and attend school at St. Mary, will do a few numbers.

The sixth grade show will be followed by a short string program and a few kindergarten and pre-kindergarten song selections.

For more information call the school at (231) 547-9441.

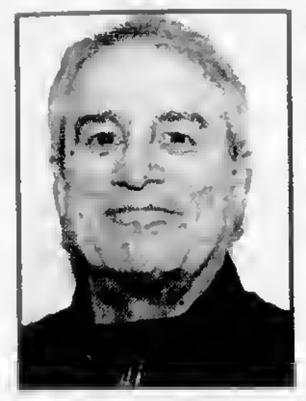
CHAMBER HAS NEW STAFF MEMBER.



Tom Welch

President Jacqueline Merta has informed the Chamber Board of Directors, the Downtown Development Authority and the Convention and Visitors Bureau of the appointment of Thomas R. Welch to the position of "Marketing and Events Manager."

This position was previously called the Downtown Coordinator. President Merta said that it had become apparant to many of her members and the city manager that there was an urgent need to fill a vacant staff position. The position has been altered to provide a more coordinated marketing effort to promote chamber and community events, bring more group business, meetings, tours, conferences, to the area and help with efforts to attract new service businesses and quality retailers to the central city area.

Merta said that Mr. Welch has the background and experience to be helpful in these efforts immediately. He served as the CEO of the Flint Area Chamber of Commerce and established Flint's Convention and Visitors Bureau. He was instrumental in the writing and passage of the state legislation that allowed communities to enact a local room tax for visitor promotion. Welch was also the CEO of the Kalamazoo County Chamber of Commerce and served on the boards of the Convention and Visitors Bureau, the Economic Expansion Corporation, and the Kalamazoo County Chamber of Commerce and served on the boards of the Convention and Visitors Bureau, the Economic Expansion Corporation, and the Kalamazoo County Economic Development Corp. He will be resigning his current role as Chairman of the KCEDC.

Merta pointed out that Welch also has a store of business and sales experience. After leaving the Chamber, he spent 10 years as a Senior Account Manager with a regional sign company. Among his many accounts, the two most significant that he secured and managed were First of America Bank during its expansive growth, and the Marriott Hotel Group. He also managed the firm's outdoor advertising division, which owned 29 billboard structures. He was in the travel and tour business for a number of years and owned several local travel agencies. He sold the travel business one year ago.

Business After Hours

On May 16th, a joint Business After Hours with Charlevoix and Petoskey will take place at the Charlevoix Country Club. lars for the waterfront property.

This figure includes $1,150,000 purchase price, an $80,000 relocation fee for businesses located in the building and incidentals.

The building's demolition marks the final step in a public property purchasing project the city has pursued for over 100 years.

In a previous interview, Charlevoix city manager Mike Wiesner explained that in 1896 Charlevoix's city administrators recognized there was no publicly owned land between Bridge Street and Round Lake. So, rather than letting private development persist, the city's forefathers started buying land.

In the early 1990s the Parkside building was purchased and demolished by the city, another step toward opening up the lakeside of Bridge Street.

The land that has been bought by the city includes East Park, Veteran's Park, Coast Guard Park, Bridge Park and Chamber Park.

Sewer cost rises, due to salesman's mistake

wastewater construction permit that has been contested by the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association, an environmental group whose membership includes the five plaintiffs in the lawsuit.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Dr. John Sturock, offered council an extensive list of negative ramifications that could come to the district if further sewer extension delays are realized. These include problems in each of the school's three facilities.

Young advised council at the special meeting about the permit.

"The permit became effective when it was signed by DEQ staff. There is no law which states that the mere filing of a contested case petition voids the permit. The DEQ obviously believes that its staff acted correctly and has not sought revocation of the permit. Thus, it is my opinion that the permit is still valid," he stated.

And secondly, the school accepted a change order that raises the price of the $500,000 project by $16,509.50 and extends the completion date.

According to city manager Mike Wiesner, even though council had given city administrators the go ahead to award the contract to Corvette Construction of Grawn, it had been holding out until the change order was approved. The bulk of the added cost in the change order, which was approved at the May 2 meeting, accounts for the $11,837 to fund an additional four inch force main run for 1,050 feet.

The addition of the force main came after the MDEQ reviewed project plans and found the gravity line would not adequately move waste through the system in this area and may cause odor and leakage.

In a memo authored by Wiesner to council and Mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell, he states the remaining $4,672.50 accounts for additional pipe purchase costs.

In a memo written by John Adams, of John Adams & Associates, the city's engineering firm for the sewer line design, he informs Wiesner that Corvette encountered a price increase for the 18 inch gravity sewer.

"The salesman had made a mistake on the original pricing and now wants his mistake and price increase back," Adams wrote.

The change order also extended the final completion date 60 days to Aug. 15, 2002. But the work on the Belvedere Club, which will be the first area under construction, will be done by June 15 the date previously agreed to.

Adams told Wiesner Corvette expects to have the pipe drilled through the club during the week of May 20.

According to Charlevoix Street Superintendent John Martin, there will be a construction meeting some time in the next week but as of May 7 the city had not moved at the site.

The change order drafted by Adams said the reason for the change in time is a result of the five month delay the project has realized. Delays have come from the contested permit and a lengthy process getting contracts approved in Charlevoix and Marion townships and with the school district.

In the meantime, doors at the new high school are scheduled to open Sept. 3, 2002 for the first day of classes in the 2002-2003 school year.

Martin said the project can still be completed from now to Aug. 15, the completion date listed on the contract.

LaBlance teaches students more than music

Well-liked teacher to be this year's graduation speaker

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Marina LaBlance has taught Charlevoix children the joys of music for 30 years. She will be giving the commencement address to seniors this year. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

Every child in Charlevoix Public Schools has at least one thing in common: they have all learned the joy of music from Marina LaBlance.

And LaBlance, who has been a music teacher at Charlevoix Elementary School since 1972, has used the teaching of music to help make Charlevoix children "whole" and have a better appreciation of the art in sound.

"I teach music, but I am also teaching how to be a good human being and an upstanding citizen," she said.

Her work with the children of Charlevoix has not gone unnoticed by her most important group....the children themselves. LaBlance has been asked to be this year's Charlevoix High School commencement speaker by the graduating class.

Taryn Drost, president of the class of 2002, said of LaBlance, "I think she is such an inspiration. She was there while we were young. She is a good role model, plus I thought it would make it (graduation) more personal.

"It is good to have advice from someone that means a lot to us all."

LaBlance said she was very honored to be asked.

LaBlance, a native of the Saginaw area, came to Charlevoix Elementary School fresh out of Western Michigan University as a music teacher in the early 1970s.

She said she found the Charlevoix position on a job placement board at the college and had to borrow a little Volkswagen to drive to the interview. While her mother wanted her to teach closer to Saginaw, LaBlance still accepted the job.

"I thought maybe I would stay two to three years and then move on. The rest is history," she said.

Once she accepted the job in Charlevoix, LaBlance had some work on her hands. The school did not have a music program and only an old dilapidated piano for her to use.

"I had to develop a full curriculum for K-4. I started from scratch, but started with what I knew and learned," she said. "I built up a strong curriculum through the years. Some things worked and some things didn't.".

But, LaBlance had some help from the community in creating the music program. She said she has never been afraid that her budget would be cut during times of economic difficulty, because the community cared about their children learning music.

"I don't try to make musicians out of the students, but give them a well rounded appreciation of music. I give them a little of everything," she said. "The community has always been very respectful and kind to me."

In her music classes, LaBlance said students use reading, math, science, social studies and geography. And over 30 years, she said while she sees changes in the students and increasing demands on teaching styles, the value of music education remains the same.

"I try not to get too wrapped-up in the demands coming down. The kids come first," she said. "I love teaching. I still love teaching. I like working with kids."

And to show off the skills of her students, LaBlance has an annual spring musical that has become very popular over the past 30 years with the community. She said the musical has turned into a community event, with the most recent one bringing in over 500 children, their parents, teachers and community leaders.

"It brings people together. It establishes memories for families," she said. "People who are 30 years old and 35 years old remember what musical they were in, if they had a partner and what their name was."

At the musical, LaBlance said every child is equal and every child has something to offer the audience.

LaBlance said she will keep doing this program "until I retire."

And as LaBlance looks back on her 30 plus year career in Charlevoix, she is thankful and looks forward to the many years to come.

"This is where I belong. The Lord had a plan for me. Out of everywhere that I applied, this is where he wanted me to be," she said. "I am so grateful that I ended up in this community, so grateful that this is where I am, not only professionally, but personally."

Teachers honored

In recognition of National Teacher Appreciation Week, students at Charlevoix Middle School compiled information about their favorite teachers. The comments students made were put in a folder and presented to teachers during the morning seminar May 7. Chamber hires Welch to newly expanded position

Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce President Jacqueline Merta recently announced the appointment of Thomas R. Welch to the position of marketing and events manager.

This position was previously called the downtown coordinator.

Merta said it had become apparent to many of her members and the city manager that there was an urgent need to fill the vacant staff position. The position has been altered to provide a more coordinated marketing effort to promote chamber and community events, bring more group business, meetings, tours and conferences to the area. And to help with efforts to attract new service businesses and quality retailers to the central city area.

Merta said Welch has the background and experience to be helpful in these efforts immediately. He served as the CEO of the Flint Area Chamber of Commerce and established Flint's Convention and Visitors Bureau. He was instrumental in the writing and passage of the state legislation that allowed communities to enact a local room tax for visitor promotion.

Welch was also the CEO of the Kalamazoo County Chamber of Commerce and served on the boards of the Convention and Visitors Bureau, the Economic Expansion Corporation and the Kalamazoo County Economic Development Corp. He will be resigning his current role as chairman of the county chamber.

Merta added Welch also has business and sales experience.

After leaving the Kalamazoo chamber, he spent 10 years as a senior account manager with a regional sign company.

Among his many accounts, the two most significant that he secured and managed were First of America Bank, during its expansive growth, and Marriott Hotel Group. He also managed the firm's outdoor advertising division, which owned 29 billboard structures.

He was in the travel and tour business for a number of years and owned several local travel agencies. He sold the travel business one year ago.

Rayders open conference beating East Jordan twice

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders opened Lake Michigan Conference play in impressive fashion, whitewashing East Jordan 6-0 and 7-0, April 25.

The Rayders (6-4 overall, 2-0 conference) allowed only five hits in both games combined. Last week's scheduled games were canceled, due to rain.

In the opener, Chris Loper and Kreg Wager combined on a two-hitter. Wager struck out five of the six batters he faced.

Loper who hit a solo homer led the hitting. Dennis Avery, Nate Teuscher, Rob Boss, Wager, Matt Kochanny, Nick Schwein and Neil Friske all collected hits as well. Teuscher scored two runs.

Coach Brian Certa lauded the pitching of Wager and said, "We played very disciplined and error free which is always a coach's delight."

In the nightcap, the Rayders scored in all five innings en route to the victory. Teuscher threw four innings, giving up only three hits and not walking a batter for the win. Wager finished in relief, striking out two in his inning of work.

Boss was 2 for 3 with a homer and two RBI. Teuscher was 1 for 2, walked twice and scored two runs. Avery, Matt Kilkenny, Loper and Kochanny all collected hits. Ben Speigl scored two runs.

"Matt Kilkenny was outstanding behind the plate," Certa said. "I was pleased on the day to see good pitching performances with great ball control (only one walk in each game)."

Soccer team racks up two more conference wins

The Rayder girls' soccer team improved their record to 6-3-1 overall and 4-1-1 in their conference with two conference wins last week.

On May 2, the Rayders took the victory over East Jordan by a score of 7 to 0.

Charlevoix goals were scored by Shayna Drost, Kate Madison, with a pair; Danielle Vogelheim who racked up three and Elissa Wood. Three assists went to Drost, Madison, who both took one and Jayme Murray, who assisted on a corner kick.

Freshman Madison McKenzie earned the shutout over East Jordan, in her first start in goal, making eight saves.

"This was another good opportunity to rely on our bench and let our injured players rest. It was a great learning experience for some of the younger players. Our freshman are really coming around nicely," Carol Madison, varsity head coach, said.

The next night, May 3, the Rayders were back in conference play when they faced Houghton Lake.

The Rayders dominated early and then held on for the conference win at home against Houghton Lake. Senior co-captain, Vogelheim, tallied both scores in the first half, assisted by freshman Jaime Pettis on one and scoring her second on a direct kick from 25 yards out.

Senior Kate Madison came through for the team and earned the victory in goal, filling in for injured starter Brooke Blanchard with 10 saves.

Charlevoix led throughout the game and missed several early chances to put it away. Houghton Lake scored with 9 minutes left on a breakaway and come to life with fresh pressure for the last few minutes.

Defensively, senior Jayme Murray again dominated the play with help from her freshman defensive mates, Sarah Cross, Brittni Whittaker and Madison McKenzie. Freshman Jaime Pettis and sophomore Shayna Drost also played well in the midfield.

Charlevoix hosted Suttons Bay in a key conference match May 7. Scores from this match were not available by press time.

SCRAPBOOK

Charlevoix folks source of many funny stories

Marilyn Boss

'Days gone by'

After a long, cold winter, I thought you might enjoy reading some of the stories that we laugh about when our family gets together on a daily basis to go over the most recent town scuttlebutt.

I had to promise to reveal no names, and my son suggested we label these stories "Marilyn's Believe it or not." However, they really are true.

My oldest grandson, when he was 3 years old, had seen all the ads for the latest craze, Teddy Ruxpin, the talking bear. He called his other grandmother and asked if she would buy him one for Christmas. When she told him that it really was too much money, $75, he quick as a wink replied, "Grandma, let me talk to grandpa." He got Teddy.

Now, a certain boy was in class one day and he was bored and was daydreaming. With his arms stretched skyward, his imagination in full swing, he raised his imaginary rifle and began shooting at enemy planes. Then, everything went still and the teacher said, "Did you get him Boss?"

An unnamed woman and her son were in Petoskey and on the way home, her son told her he was hungry, so they stopped at a gas station along the way to Charlevoix. When they went to get in their locked car, the keyless remote door opener wouldn't work, because the battery had died. In a panic, she went back into the station because the owner knew her and he told her not to worry. It was no big thing as she could take his car and go across town to get a new battery for the key chain. After a good 45 minutes of chasing to Kmart and getting the correct battery, she went back to the station and thanked the owner for his generosity. She told her son to take the opener and unlock the car.

When she came back to the car, he realized what had actually happened and said, "Mom why didn't you use the key on the chain?" Which was there the entire time. She was so embarrassed, they took off in record time without additional explanation to the owner of the station, who had been so understanding.

Now, there was a fellow who always ironed his own clothes and was most proficient in being sure they were done to perfection. He had pressed a dress shirt and put it on when he realized there was a wrinkle in the middle of the front of the shirt. In a hurry, he took the iron, pressed the steam button. Put it to the front of the shirt and proceeded to mark the front of his chest with the imprint of the steam jets, which remained there for two weeks.

There was the time when two women went to an art show in another town and the driver locked her car as she left it. Upon coming out of the show, she discovered the key was locked in the car. What to do? Call the police. An officer came, and after some time, opened the door.

They thanked him profusely and he left. They began to put their purchases in the car, when they realized that the car was not hers, but a look alike. They were so embarrassed, but called the cop for help the second time, thinking he would consider them two dizzy blondes in a parking lot.

He was most obliging, but they heard him on the radio telling the story to the rest of the police in the area.

My youngest sister had learned to crochet and she was so proud of her accomplishment. She crocheted a lovely doily for my mother and was taking it to show her. It was about 14 inches in circumference and the thread was attached to her needles, which she didn't realize. By the time she presented it to my mother, the doily, much to her chagrin, had become the size of a quarter.

One little boy, interested in geodes, was on the school playground. He found a very interesting black "stone" by the curb and put it in his pants pocket. His mother, in a hurry, overlooked the pocket and the "stone" was washed and dried in the drier. It turned out to be a hard piece of tar and melted all over the dryer tub and all the clothes in it. His dad spent many hours scrubbing the tub and finally got all the tar off.

Three fellows were enjoying a ride in a Volkswagen, when they became stuck in some mud. Two of them got out to push, instructing the driver to step on it as they pushed forward as hard as they could. After a couple of minutes of very hard work, covered with mud from head to toe, they checked things out and discovered why they weren't going anywhere. The driver had the car in reverse.

In the beginning of the car raffle for the petunia project, Keep Charlevoix Beautiful was in charge, with the Chamber of Commerce selling tickets. The price for a ticket was $100.

One day, a man and his wife came in after admiring the nice car outside and asked the person at the desk for a ticket. She obliged, stating that it would be $100. The man stepped back, shocked and said to his wife, "See, I told you this was a high priced town."

As expected, the ticket wasn't sold.

Wells may be banned by city

By JULIE WITTHOEFT

Charlevoix City Council will consider passing another ordinance prohibiting the use of personal wells in a large area of the city where groundwater has been found to be contaminated, as a result of a cleaning solvent used by Harbor Industries.

The ordinance will be discussed at a public hearing May 20 during the city council meeting which begins at 7 p.m. at city hall, 210 State Street in Charlevoix.

On May 19, 1997 city council passed the first city ordinance prohibiting the use of wells in the area around the city street department, located off Stover Road, where diesel fuel contamination was found.

The city then did some excavation of the contaminated soil and installed test wells to monitor the situation.

Recently, Harbor Industries encountered a similar problem.

In the early 1980s the industrial facility, which produces retail product display cases and fixtures at 107 Airport Drive in Charlevoix, discovered rinse water containing tetrachlorethene — also known as PCE, a cleaning solvent used to clean forklifts — had been discharged in open

Charlevoix residents were out Saturday raising money for various causes. (Left) Walkers took part in the Judy Edger/Sue DeYoung Memorial Breast Cancer Walk near East Park. The walk raised money for breast cancer research. Todd and Holly Edger walked in memory of their mother, Judy, during the fund-raiser, along with Todd's wife, Mary Edger. New school to be closed at lunch

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Different rules will govern campus at the new Charlevoix High School, located off Marion Center Road, which is scheduled to open in the fall of 2002.

The Charlevoix School Board voted unanimously May 13 to close the high school campus after several years of allowing its students to leave campus during their lunch period.

"A closed campus gives our students the safest environment possible," Charlevoix High School Principal Gary Grundman, said.

The board based its decision on three factors Grundman offered, that aren't issues the Charlevoix Public School District faces at the current site off Garfield Street in the city.

First, Grundman said, the school's new location, two miles from Charlevoix's central business district, does not lend itself well to students walking in for lunch.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Dr. John Sturock, told the board that the new cafeteria will offer students more options in a food court style to adhere to tastes the students once satisfied by traveling off campus.

The commons area, where students will eat lunch, will be equipped with new tables and other amenities. Grundman described the new facility as "fabulous."

He estimated that over 50 percent of students currently buy lunch in the cafeteria and eat in the building every day.

However, some of the remaining 50 percent of students head to downtown Charlevoix. And after talking with local restaurant managers it seems fast food providers,

Company with Wal-Mart ties land shopping in Charlevoix

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

A downstate real estate company, with ties to large industrial and retail companies such as Wal-Mart, has been looking for property in Charlevoix for the past year.

Dennis McGee, real estate specialist for Engelhart Realty and Investments, Inc. located in Bingham Farms, said he has been looking at property in Charlevoix for his company for the past year. He added the company has not bought any property at this point.

"It takes a long time," he said. "Nothing is gelled at all."

He would not say exactly which properties he has been looking at, but McGee said he has been looking at land on both the south side and north side of Charlevoix.

However, while many land owners on the south side chose not to comment on this issue, Mike Manial of Mike's Glass — located on Stover Road near the intersection of Marion Center Road and US-31 — confirmed that he has been approached by McGee.

Manial said McGee made him an offer on his land about two or three months ago. Manial made a counter-offer and has not heard from the real estate company since.

Manial said McGee is looking for 20 acres of land and has approached his neighbors on US-31 about their land.

According to McGee, his company works to find land for several different large retailers and some industry. Engelhart Realty and Investments has been linked to large mall-type developers such as the Great Lakes Crossing and Walm-Mart.

He would not say which retailer or industrial company the land would be for.

"Our job is to locate sites and prepare them for users," he said.

Petunia planting brings people out

Petunia planting Charlevoix residents will be out in force for another Operation Petunia at 5 p.m., May 23.

During the annual community event, residents from the community help line both sides of Bridge Street with the colorful little flowers. Operation Petunia, sponsored by Keep Charlevoix Beautiful, has been a tradition in Charlevoix since 1982.

This year, there will be 60,000 petunias that need planting, a total cost of $11,000 to the organization. Flats containing the flowers will be placed along Bridge Street before the event.

Everyone from Charlevoix is invited to take part in this event. There will be 26 block captains, dressed in orange vests, available to direct planters and answer any questions.

All planters will be given tickets by the block captains that they can use for the picnic starting at 6 p.m. in East Park. The tickets will enable participants to get some treats in the park provided by local businesses.

While enjoying the food and camaraderie, participants will also be entertained by the Charlevoix High School and Northwest Academy school bands.

Charlevoix's famous petunias will be watered throughout the summer by residents Dale and Marilyn Boss with the Keep Charlevoix Beautiful watering truck.

For more information, call Keep Charlevoix Beautiful president Judy Corley at (231) 547-1945.

Students should stay at school for lunch

EDITORIAL

A recent decision by the Charlevoix School Board that closes the campus of the new Charlevoix High School next year gets our full support.

This year, as in the past, the current Charlevoix High School has an open campus policy during lunch. This allows students the option of leaving school grounds during their lunch period.

But, next year, all students must stay at the school during the lunch periods. Reasons for this were the distance the school is to downtown businesses, safety and the fact the cafeteria will have everything the students need.

This is great, but what took the school board so long to make this policy?

There have always been safety concerns over allowing students to leave campus during lunch, regardless of how far the campus is from town.

During the school's lunch hours in the past, students basically were able to roam Charlevoix unsupervised in their vehicles or on foot. This means students could do whatever they felt like without parents or school officials watching them.

It was an accident waiting to happen.

In fact, it has been witnessed by employees of the Charlevoix Courier, on more than one occasion, students darting out into traffic on foot or bicycle during their lunch period, narrowly being missed by a vehicle on Bridge Street.

Plus, there were times in the past when students would use this period to engage in illegal activities, such as smoking, drinking or taking drugs.

While there are many law-abiding and safety conscious students in the schools, it takes just one student to create a tragedy.

Not only do we agree that the new school should have a closed campus next year, but we think every school in Charlevoix should have the same policy before it is too late.

Writer takes a ride on the Traverse City Dinner Train

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

I finally did it! Many people have recommended that I take a ride on the Dinner Train stationed in Traverse City, and it turned out to be a most enjoyable, "All Aboard!" experience.

I went with a group of members of the Association of Bridal Consultants and Hotel Association of Catering Executives.

It was a great finale for our joint Northern Michigan Conference.

Those of us who host visitors and house guests all summer will be delighted to have another option to suggest to friends and relatives besides a buggy ride on Mackinac Island or fishing trip down the Jordan River. We may now suggest the three hour luncheon or dinner ride aboard the Grand Traverse Dinner Train! The train operates year-round, providing weekend departures during the off-season, and 6 days a week service during the peak months of July through October.

We boarded the Dinner Train at 6 p.m. and returned exactly three hours later. Our classic Pullman-style dining coach seated 56 passengers at tables for four, but the Dinner Train can comfortably handle up to a total of 224 guests.

While seated at a table with fresh flowers in a bud vase and a white tablecloth, we were served a five course meal, that was cooked on board. We were offered a choice of wines from the Leelanau Peninsula, California, Australia, France, Italy and Portugal.

Our appetizer consisted of a Caramelized Onion Tart with Blue Cheese, our Potato and Leek soup was served with freshly baked dinner rolls. A fresh Arugula Salad with Grape Tomatoes, Red Onion and Feta Cheese was served with Balsamic Vinaigrette. Then we had a choice of Sesame Crusted Atlantic Salmon served with Ginger Soy Sauce that everyone enjoyed or Beef Wellington, Breast of Chicken or Center Cut Pork Chops served with Pineapple Mint Chutney. Our dessert was Creme Brulée. Dinner ended with a choice of Starbucks coffee or Tazo tea.

Conversation flowed easily as we slowly chugged through dense Michigan woods, dotted with a variety of pine, birch and cedars. We passed along rolling farms, red barns, stables and hay fields. The scenic backdrop ambled leisurely over 45 miles of track.

It is even more fun when a group of train buffs books the train for a birthday, an anniversary or a wedding. Believe it or not, one may even arrange for the wedding ceremony to be performed aboard the train, because the Grand Event Catering team is well versed in planning and executing a wide range of customized dining experiences. They will include a dance floor and music upon request.

Prices vary according to season and range between $69 and $75 per person. Children under 9 are given a 50 percent discount and groups of 20 or more are offered a group discount. For further information, please contact www.dinnertrain.com or for group proposals, call Susan Cooper at (231) 933-3768.

Turbines needed

Editor:

Months ago the Eveline Township Board carefully and meticulously considered an ordinance to allow wind turbine generators. Discussion was about sound, security, need, height, noise, color, fencing, isolation, density — one per 30 acres — lighting and setbacks. The board did a great job of drafting an ordinance that it can be proud of. It leads the state and other townships with this forethought and environmental process in electric generation. It is to be complimented and proud. That action was done void of emotion, but full of careful thought and planning.

Now then, something has happened!

Since an application for a permit has been presented, a few people are trying to discredit the board's work and judgment. An emotional jamboree has taken place, many half truths and distortions are said, in effort to dissuade the ordinance from working.

The board should not be deceived by all the tactics the naysayers are using. Scare tactics they are.

Everyone is in favor of wind turbine generators, but NIMBY (Not In My Backyard) is taking place of sound judgment.

Our environment needs wind turbine generators.

Our area needs the current. With the closing of generating facilities, such as local diesel generating plants, Big Rock Point and Advance Power Plant, we are totally dependent on down state power plants for our current needs. It is good planning for our area to have some back up power provided locally by wind turbine generators.

It is said we are a residential area. The road frontage on our property is three miles with 10 houses that are 1,500 feet apart, averaging each house. That's sure not residential, it's remote sparse rural housing.

Granted, wind turbine generators are visible. So are many things we need. Smoke stacks, silos, billboards, warehouses, communication towers, even houses and barns. But all are necessary and we all use them, just like we will all use wind turbine generated green power.

Just because of some emotional pressure applied, the board cannot sweep away wind turbine generators to some remote area of the township, by changing our ordinance and denying the application.

The court and legislative bodies in this state will not allow that to happen.

We all need green power and it must start someplace. Eveline Township adopted a good, sound ordinance. Please let this township be a leader in this cause and do not cave in to needless emotional pressure.

Musical was a great event

Editor:

On Wednesday, March 20, over 1,000 people attended a long-anticipated and beautifully produced program at Charlevoix High School.

Family members as well as many Charlevoix citizens for whom the annual event is a tradition, thronged to the gymnasium to see Marina LaBlance's thirtieth annual musical. It is important for the students at Charlevoix Elementary School to have this opportunity in the spring of each year to all come together, each first through fifth grader, to sing and dance for our community. Each child will carry happy memories of the performances through life.

This year's musical, "America: The Dream Goes On," was entertaining, amazing and patriotic.

We are certain that the Charlevoix Courier readers would all agree that coverage of this annual event is, indeed, a shining example of local news. We hope to see coverage of this outstanding and uplifting celebration of our young people next March in the Charlevoix Courier.

Sewer, school questions

Editor:

I had the opportunity on Thursday evening, May 2, to see the city and school in action at a special city council meeting. That is, once I found out about the meeting and once the published agenda was changed at the last minute in an attempt to preclude my lawyer from speaking. It appears that three strikes and you're out, is not a concept known to this august body.

In spite of pending legal review by the Attorney General, the Administrative Law Branch of the Department of Environmental Quality and the State Court of Appeals, the city seems intent to go full speed ahead toward a very questionable, expensive and potentially hazardous sewer construction. I wonder if anyone ever bothered to ask the Noirot or Bedoe families, who formerly lived at the construction site how their septic systems functioned?

In contrast, the school board in Harbor Springs spent many hours in deliberation with the public to formulate a common plan for the future. The result, through moderation, conservation and common sense seems to be lauded by all parties concerned. Looking at the meetings I have attended throughout the Charlevoix community, it is odd that many people who do not live in Marion Township are in favor of building a school here. I guess that I would feel good about building something on the other side of town too; as long as the dirt didn't actually end up in my backyard.

There are still many lagging questions about the school that is my neighbor. It was actually a school official who voiced concern about traffic problems that the high school population will cause to Marion Center Road; or is that being caused by Marion Center Road? Two lanes are not very much for all those extra buses and cars. Then, there is the question of the old foundations which are still standing. Unless the school is adding Junior ROTC and that is to be part of an obstacle course it still looks like a plain, old safety hazard to me. Speaking of hazards, no one has seen fit to come forward with the answers to my questions about the potential of soil contamination. Old farm land is documented as having vastly greater levels of carcinogens than other land. Since it is floating by my house on a regular basis, I would really like to know. I have lost two family members to cancer. I would hate to pass that legacy on to my new neighbor.

By the way, the question came up at the council meeting about the lay of the land and the law of gravity. Although many unusual things seemed to have happened here in the last few years, I believe the law of gravity still holds true and water will only flow downhill. I live downhill from the school site, therefore my land is wet because water from the school flows toward it. I guess that if the question was asked, then the powers that be know even less about this area than they profess.

Need rides to games

Editor:

I am a sixth grader at the Charlevoix Middle School. In my years here in Charlevoix, I have found that a lot of my friends don't go to the away sports games because they can't get rides.

Some parents are too busy to give their kids rides. I think they should have a bus to take the kids to the games. This bus would take the kids to the game and then drop them off at the high school after the game.

It is a good opportunity for kids to see what is going on in the school sports. Also, it would get the kids involved with sports.

Parents don't have to worry about kids coming home late because the bus would leave right after the game. Parents also don't have to worry about getting them to the bus stop because the bus leaves right after school.

That is why I think there should be a bus to the away sports games.

Belvedere, Michigan Avenue work to finish

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

After almost eight months under construction, projects along Michigan and Belvedere avenues in the city of Charlevoix are expected to be finished by Memorial Day, the city's targeted completion date.

"We're still looking at that date (May 27). We have to get some better weather though. We were late getting started and had to wait for load limits to go off," City Street Department Superintendent John Martin said.

He explained that since last fall, when the projects started, a lot of underground work, like water main installation and sanitary sewer repairs, has been done. But in the next couple weeks, more visible work like curbing will start.

The cost of both projects combined is $1.4 million.

If the projects aren't done by May 27, Martin said the final date will be close.

He said CCMS Associates, Inc. of Sault Ste. Marie, the project's general contractor, has some finishing touches to do at locations along both streets before they'll be ready to move out.

The entirety of the Michigan Avenue project includes changes to the area between Petoskey Avenue and Division Street up to Mount McSauba Road.

Workers have completed the new storm sewer and water main which were run the length of the project area. They have also completed repairs to the sanitary sewer system.

Curb and gutter and a new street surface were constructed in the entire project area including additional curb and gutter at the intersection of Division Street and Mount McSauba Road.

Along with the new road came new sidewalk from 431 Michigan Avenue, running along the west side of the street to Division Street and north to the Division and McSauba street intersection.

On Michigan Avenue, final details to be added include spreading black dirt and grass seed along areas where construction removed it. Michigan Avenue motorists can also expect a smoother ride as road surface concrete repair work is completed.

Martin added there are places in the project area where the sidewalk and curbing needs further work.

Just under a mile away, on Belvedere Avenue, CCMS is working toward completing another major project. The area under construction runs from Bridge Street to 100 feet east of the club's gates.

The project includes construction of storm sewer and new sanitary sewer with some areas of repair being done to the existing sanitary system. Also underway is the addition of curb and gutter and construction of a sidewalk on the north side of the road from May Street to where the project ends. As the project nears completion the work crew will begin street reconstruction.

Both projects will also include new street lighting.

City council recently approved the lighting purchase bid to be awarded to Robert C. Shaver, of Grand Rapids, for $42,525.

The purchase price was lower than the $50,000 the city budgeted.

Martin said the lights will be installed in the fall of 2002.

Roloff memorial fund-raiser this Sunday

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

This weekend, Charlevoix residents and visitors will have the opportunity to assist the Charlevoix Emergency Medical Service while enjoying entertainment courtesy of six area bands.

The Eighth Annual Bryan Roloff Memorial Rock Benefit will take place from 2 to 10 p.m., May 19 at the Flight Deck Bar & Paul Bunyan Lanes in Charlevoix.

The benefit is a once-a-year opportunity to break out your dancing shoes and celebrate the life of Bryan Roloff, a well-known, longtime Charlevoix resident. And while soaking up the entertainment, revelers will be supporting Charlevoix's emergency medical technicians, the community's behind the scenes heroes.

The afternoon event will feature Mojo and the Boogieman, Miss Conduct, Name Us, Naked Twister, Cyclone 66 and Virus.

Refreshments and raffles will also be on site with all the proceeds benefiting the Charlevoix Ambulance Fund.

Bryan's brother, Bob Roloff, is a shift commander with the emergency medical service. He said the department is currently in the process of preparing to buy a new rig. Estimates for a new ambulance are in the $90,000 range and the memorial money will likely go toward new equipment for the vehicle.

Raffle tickets are currently circulating through town and three winners will walk away with Upper Peninsula casino packages showcasing a weekend hotel stay, dinner and $100 cash. Other 50/50 raffles and promotions will make their way around the Flight Deck the day of the event.

Bryan Roloff, the man behind the gathering, was a talented guitarist and opened up for Foghat/Nazareth May 2, 1994 in Traverse City, just months before he suffered a brain tumor and died. He was only 30 years old.

His mother, Charlevoix resident Shirley Roloff, said the memorial concert is just the type of event Bryan would have enjoyed and is a way for the Roloff family to keep his music and spirit alive while benefiting the community.

Proceeds from last year's show totaled $3,600 and were donated to the Beaver Island Medical Center.

So, mark your calendars and pull out your dancing shoes because Shirley said this weekend's benefit bash will be "a great time" and it supports the men and women who work every day to provide fast, effective emergency care to the city of Charlevoix.

For more information about the event contact Shirley at (231) 547-6169.

Garden Club plants trees at new school site

The Charlevoix Area Garden Club donated and planted 580 seedling trees at the new Charlevoix High School May 7.

Joined by other community minded supporters, the members spread out and planted the 500 white pines and 80 spruce in record time — just over 30 minutes.

The grounds were moist from the previous night's rain and with the rains which followed on Thursday, club members hope for a good survival rate on the trees. The trees were purchased and planted by the club as part of National Garden Clubs, Inc. project to plant 2,000,000 trees between May of 2001 and April of 2003. Charlevoix Area Garden Club members will plant more than 1,000 trees during the two year period.

The trees were purchased with funds from the contributions committee and raised during the club's plant sale, garden walk and bulb sale that took place in 2001.

Conservation committee chair Barbara MacArthur said, "We are so pleased to be part of this national project and very appreciative of all those in the community who either came out on Tuesday to help plant or who supported us in raising the funds to purchase the trees. These trees will benefit the entire community."

The club will have its annual plant sale from 8:30 a.m. until noon, May 25 at 807 East Dixon Avenue. These funds and those raised during the July 17 Garden Walk and the fall bulb sale that takes place during Applefest will benefit the club's seven Charlevoix gardens, the Bergmann Center gardens, youth education and other community beautification projects in 2003.

The Charlevoix Area Garden Club is a member of the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan and National Garden Clubs, Inc.

For more information about the club, or to inquire about membership, contact membership chair, Joan Nowak at (231) 547-1388.

Curves strives for healthy women

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The staff of Curves wants to help Charlevoix women reach their fitness goals. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

Sharon Ruge wants to help Charlevoix women get healthier.

The former Alaskan resident has opened up Curves for Women on May 6 to do just this. Curves for Women focuses on sessions designed to promote physical fitness and weight-loss for women.

The sessions are based on techniques created by Cary Haven, founder of the Curves corporation. Haven has trained women for many years.

Sessions are taught by the Curves staff, who are trained by the Curves Corporation. According to Ruge, the staff will help encourage the women at Curves to become fit in a caring and fun way. While staff members are not certified in nutrition or personal training, their training with the Curves Corporation gives them plenty of advice and tips to pass on to Curves customers.

This is done through strength training and aerobics classes for 30 minutes, three times a week.

Ruge said she has also been trying to lose weight for many years and therefore knows what some of her clients are feeling. With her help, she hopes her Charlevoix clients will be healthier, happier and more involved in the community.

Ruge and her husband Gregory Ruge, came to Michigan to help her daughter move to the state. They were trying to find a town that would be perfect for a Curves and, thanks to an accidental miss of a turn, they ended up in Charlevoix.

"Both of us loved it," Ruge said.

Curves for Women is located at 05951 M-66, Suite G — by the Secretary of State's Office. It is open throughout the year from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. to 7 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Curves can be contacted by calling (231) 237-0699.

Church has its annual rock-a-thon

Northwoods Baptist Youth, a ministry of Bible Baptist Church of Charlevoix, held their second annual rock-a-thon from 2 to 5 p.m., April 27.

Fourteen young members rocked in rocking chairs for a consecutive 180 minutes.

Lavona Sundclius, a seventh grade student, raised the most money.

"Some of my donations were for 5 cents or ten cents a minute. One was for fifty cents per minute. Others were single donations of $5 or $10," she said.

Russell Morgan, assistant to the pastor, said, "During the rock-a-thon, the young people played board games, sang songs and ate a lot."

The students raised over $1,400 to help support the athletic and music programs of the teen group and also extracurricular activities.

Joshua Eisenmann, an active member of the youth group, said, "It was a lot of fun and it felt good to contribute to our soccer team. It was great how everyone sponsored us."

Wind monitoring tower has another delay

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Steve Smiley and his company, Bay Windpower of Suttons Bay, have experienced another delay in their request for a special use permit to construct a wind monitoring tower in Eveline Township.

Last night, the request was the first topic of discussion at the Eveline Township Board meeting.

The board has the final say in special use permit requests.

When supervisor Dan Skrzeczkoski opened the matter for public comment, township attorney Kevin Elsenheimer asked the board if the planning commission had approved the minutes from its meeting on May 8, when it voted unanimously to recommend the township board approve the request.

The board told Elsenheimer the commission had not approved the minutes. Therefore, he recommended the minutes be approved before the board makes the final vote in the special use permit request.

The wind monitoring tower application was submitted by Smiley, president of Suttons Bay's Bay Windpower, in November of 2001. Bay Windpower specializes in commercial wind turbine electricity generation.

The application included an outline of a plan that would locate seven wind turbine generators, five on the Way property and two on that of his neighbor, Ralph Richardson, if adequate wind velocities are detected by the tower.

But since the application was submitted, over 200 residents opposed to wind turbine generators being located on the properties of Way and Richardson, have come forward and the commission has decided to make changes to the ordinance.

Way urged the commission not to allow the opposition to discredit the work they have already done on the zoning ordinance which was completed in October of 2001.

"Not everyone is in favor of wind turbine generators, but NIMBY (Not in my back yard) is taking the place of your sound judgment," he wrote.

At the township planning commission's May 1 zoning ordinance work session, the central topic of discussion was changing the ordinance, which currently allows wind turbine generators in the farm and forest zone of the township with a special use permit, to allowing wind turbines in township designated districts.

Eric Beishlag, planning commission chairman, said the allowed districts probably won't include the Way and Richardson properties. Beishlag and township supervisor Dan Skrzeczkoski drove around the township May 9 to locate optimal locations for the districts.

Skrzeczkoski said designated areas will likely be on both sides of the lake.

However, the action the commission took at the May 8 public hearing was done in spite of district planning.

Beishlag said Smiley's request has to be considered under the zoning ordinance, currently in effect, and the probable upcoming changes to the ordinance are likely going to drastically change the direction of the wind turbine project.

But Smiley opted to push forward with the special use permit request.

"We're aware of that (the township's plan to pursue district zoning) and we're interested in measuring the wind at this site. It will give us an indication for the general region. And we have an easement with these property owners and an obligation we need to abide by," Smiley told the commission.

But Beishlag was apprehensive to approve the monitoring tower during the May 8 meeting and asked the township's attorney, Kevin Elsenheimer, whether the decision it made binds the township to revisit the possibility of locating wind turbines at the Way/Richardson site.

Elsenheimer assured him this wasn't the case.

"The issue of the windmill is a separate request. You are not bound to this proposal to construct a windmill. Just because you allowed the anemometer tower, it doesn't follow that you must then approve the other use," he said.

Beishlag's concern was the same rationale the residents who attended the commission meeting used in urging members to deny permit approval.

"By letting them put up the anemometer tower you're letting the fox into the hen house," John Cisne, an Eveline Township resident, said.

This was the second time Smiley's request for a special use permit went before a public hearing and the planning commission gave its consent for the project. It was previously before the commission in late winter.

However, when it came time for the township board to review the commission's recommendation, findings of fact weren't listed in the meeting minutes, which raised questions as to whether their decision would be legally binding.

This time around, at the May 8 meeting, the commission tried to cover all its bases and dissected the zoning ordinance and the project description to make sure the two don't conflict.

When considering each of the 10 findings, the commission kept returning to the reality that an anemometer tower is a use allowed as a special use in the farm, forest zone of the township zoning ordinance.

Another major contributor to its decision is the temporary nature of the project.

"It's a relatively simple procedure, it takes two to three days to lift the tower and one to 1.5 days to remove it. Everything can be removed and taken off site in a day," Smiley told the commission.

The application asked for seven months to construct, collect data and remove the tower. The commission suggested a time extension, so Bay Windpower doesn't need to resubmit its request in the near future.

Other issues it reviewed included safety concerns, setbacks, impact on the view corridor and whether or not the proposal is harmonious with the project area's character.

There is no view corridor currently outlined in the township's master plan. However, Beishlag said the township is in the process of revising its master plan and will include a section on view corridors.

The tower, consisting of a six inch pipe extending 164 feet into the air with a three foot lighting rod reaching up from the top of the pipe, will sit approximately 1,000 feet from the closest residence if approved. There will be monitors at two locations on the pipe, one at 132 feet and one at 164 feet, to determine how the winds vary by height.

Guide wires reach out from the pipe at six locations from top to bottom, pulling in three directions to support the pipe.

Bay Windpower representatives will visit the site one to two times a month to collect data.

The Federal Aviation Administration does not require structures under 200 feet to be lit, so the tower does not need lighting.

If eventually approved, it will be marked with a small sign, less than four square feet in size, listing emergency numbers.

Conditions applied to the board's approval that were suggested by the commission require Bay Windpower to provide a letter of credit or some other form of security showing the company will tear down the tower at its own expense. It also stipulated that the company provide information gathered by the tower to the township and it show proof of general liability insurance.

Zoning changes will be considered at the next planning commission meeting scheduled to take place at 7 p.m., June 10 at the Eveline Township Hall, 08525 Ferry Road.

Track team brings home two first place finishes

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix track team has been busy lately.

On May 11, part of the team took fifth place out of 13 teams at a meet in Houghton Lake. On May 9, the team took first at East Jordan out of 10 teams and on May 3, the team won another meet at Traverse City.

On May 11, 15 members of the boys' team — out of 40 — participated in the Houghton Lake meet. According to coach Ken Plude, the team was short due to the high school prom.

Still, the Rayders were impressive on the field.

Josh Carter won the shot put with a distance of 51 feet, 6 inches.

According to Plude, the junior varsity relay team also had a good day, taking fourth place out of 13 teams in the two mile relay with a time of 8 minutes, 48 seconds. They are: John Billington, Brian Christiansen, Ryan Seelye and Josh Popenhagan.

On May 9, the team won the meet with a score of 126. Harbor Springs came in second.

Gordie Selph won in the 1600 meter run with a time of 4 minutes, 38 seconds. Tim Daining also won in the 800 meter run with a time of 2 minutes, 8 seconds.

Also winning in the meet were the three relay teams.

The 3200 meter relay team won with a time of 8 minutes, 24.5 seconds. They are: Selph, Daining, Todd Carey and Peter Gorkiewicz.

The 400 meter relay team won with a time of 47.7 seconds. They are: Rusty Walters, Jeff Urban, Spencer Bryan and Kyle Kramer.

The 1600 meter relay team won with a time of 3 minutes, 40 seconds. They are: Selph, Scott Parrish, Carey and John Wilkinson.

According to Plude, another notable moment came when Carter took second in the shot put with a distance of 50 feet, 7 inches. This beat his personal best record by two feet and he threw even further on May 11.

"He is really coming on," Plude said.

On May 3, Charlevoix took first with a score of 62. Suttons Bay came in second with a score of 48.

First place finishes were won by Selph in the 800 meter and Carter in the shot put. Selph ran a time of 1 minute, 57.52 seconds. Carter had a distance of 48 feet, 2.5 inches.

Another highlight of the meet was Andy Gels, who beat his personal record in the 3200 with a time of 11 minutes, 58 seconds.

Junior golf scholarships

Several lucky youngsters that participated in the Charlevoix County Junior Golf Association's 2001 summer program will be awarded scholarships to attend the golf camp at Ferris State University this summer.

Dean Davenport, executive director of the summer program, announced the association's board members recently approved renewing the scholarship program with FSU. Up to six golfers will be selected to received the full scholarships for a week at the campus.

Applicants must have participated in more than half of the past summer's sessions and be at least 12 years of age to be eligible. Application packets were mailed recently to nearly 60 youngsters that qualified for consideration.

Local PGA professional from the Belvedere Golf Course, Steve Braun, added greatly to the camp by raising over $9,000, by playing 100 holes in a single day and receiving pledges from local Junior Gold supporters.

Sam Supernaw, board treasurer, said, "Our major fund-raiser, the Supe Classic Golf Tournament, has helped fund this project through the years and last year we again sent several area youngsters to a week's golf camp. It's been a great experience for them to learn more about the game and do so at a great setting like a college campus."

More information regarding this year's program and the June 13 registration procedures will be announced soon.

Soccer team has up-and-down week

The Rayders Varsity Girls Soccer Team fell by a score of 2 to 1 to Suttons Bay May 7 in overtime, a match at Kipke Field.

Suttons Bay got on the board early in the first half when its left wing capitalized on a Charlevoix misplayed ball in the box.

The play stayed even throughout the rest of the half and into the second when a handball in the penalty area enabled Charlevoix's senior co-captain, Danielle Vogelheim, to send home the resulting penalty shot.

The Rayders were unable to score on a second penalty kick resulting from a trip on a breakaway by Shayna Drost and the conference match went into overtime. And 8 minutes into the period, Suttons Bay sent home a nice shot past Charlevoix's defense to gain the win and second place in the conference.

Charlevoix got off 11 shots to Suttons Bay's 21, with keeper Brooke Blanchard saving 15. The Rayders all-state candidate sweeper Jayme Murray had another "routine" dominating game and there was much defensive help from freshman Madison McKenzie. Another freshman, Jaime Pettis, gave the team a great effort in midfield and senior Kate Madison came on strong in the second half to spark Charlevoix's effort.

"This was a tough loss, but we'll learn from it and move on to Harbor on Friday," head coach Carol Madison said.

The long awaited match against Harbor Springs, May 10, proved a disappointment for the Rayder players, who lost in a 3 point shutout.

Charlevoix managed five shots on goal while Blanchard recorded 13 saves for the Rayders.

The Rayders were down by one goal at the half and started the second half with wind and sloping field conditions and were foiled by Harbor's consistent pressure.

The Rams had over 20 corner kick opportunities to Charlevoix's one. All three Harbor goals were scored because the Rayders were unable to clear balls in their defensive zone.

The Charlevoix High School tennis team took third place in the Lake Michigan Tennis Tournament Friday.

"We did very well. We had a good day," said coach Eric Lundteigen.

The big winner for the day was Jason Haas, who was the number one singles champion for the event. To get this honor, Haas beat a Boyne City player 6-2, 6-0 and then went on to finals to beat a Harbor Springs player 5-7, 6-2 and 6-4.

Other individual results were:

- At number two singles, Allen Brooks beat Traverse City St. Francis 6-3 and 6-1. However he lost to Elk Rapids, 6-3, 6-4.
- At number four singles, Roscoe Serrels beat a Traverse City St. Francis player 6-2, 5-7 and 6-3. He lost in the finals to Elk Rapids, 4-6, 6-0.

The team did not have any doubles winners.

Lundteigen said the Rayders will be gearing up for the regional tournament this Friday.

"We are hoping to continue with good singles results and score form points with doubles," he said.

Rayders' baseball team has rough week

By ALLAN TELGENHOF
Sports Writer

The Charlevoix Rayder's baseball squad (6-8 overall, 2-4 conference) had a tough time last week, beginning with a sweep at the hands of Kalkaska, 10-1 and 8-3, and concluding with two heartbreaking late inning losses to Traverse City St. Francis, 10-8 and 10-7.

"We made costly errors," said coach Brian Certa. "And against Kalkaska, we didn't hit the ball solid."

The Blazers outhit the Rayders 9-3 enroute to the game one victory. Neil Friske was one for three and drove in the lone Charlevoix run, which was scored by Bo Moore. Gordie Lake and Nick Schwein had the other two hits. Kreg Wager took the loss on the mound.

In the nightcap, the Blazers scored in four of the five innings they batted, including three in the bottom of the fifth after the Rayders had closed to 5-3 in the top half of the stanza.

Nate Teuscher was two for three, scored a run and had two RBI. He took the pitching loss as well, hut was a victim of non-support, as Charlevoix yielded four unearned runs. Chris Loper, Rob Boss, Jake Teuscher and Lake also had hits for the Rayders.

St. Francis staged two comebacks to sweep a doubleheader at Charlevoix last Friday, May 10.

In the opener, the Gladiators jumped out to a quick 2-0 lead in the first, but the Rayders answered with six in the home half of the inning. St. Francis chipped away, cutting the lead to 6-5 in the top of the fourth but a two-run rally in the bottom half put Charlevoix ahead, 8-5.

The Glads cut the lead to 8-6 in the fifth and plated four in the sixth and final inning and held on for the 10-8 win.

The Rayders committed six costly errors that led to seven unearned runs, including all four scored in the decisive sixth inning.

Loper led the hitting attack with two hits, including a home run, as well as two runs scored and two RBI. Dennis Avery also had two hits.

Patrick Gowell, returning to action after a finger injury suffered earlier in the season, doubled in two runs and scored one. Matt Kilkenny was one for three with a run scored and two RBI.

Rob Boss, Ben Speigl and Neil Friske all had hits. Friske was the hard-luck loser on the hill, yielding only three hits and one earned run while striking out six in his over three innings of work.

St. Francis repeated their late inning heroics in the second game, rallying from an early 6-1 deficit with six fifth inning runs for a 10-7 victory.

Lake had two hits, a run scored and one driven in to pace the hitters. Nate Teuscher doubled, scored two runs and drove in two. Gowell doubled and scored two runs.

Avery, Boss and Friske had one hit apiece. Errors again haunted the Rayders as their three miscues led to four Gladiator runs. Wager suffered the loss in relief.

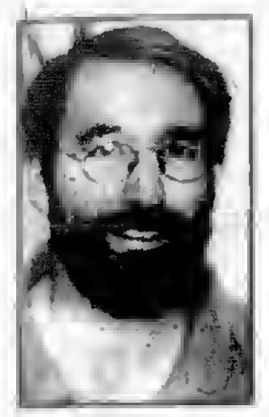
HEALTH

Writer dispells the many myths about warts



Roderic Tinney, M.D. F.A.A.P
'Your health'

There probably are not too many disorders surrounded by more myth and mysticism than warts. Even today, with our current knowledge, warts are not entirely understood.

A wart is a tumor or overgrowth of skin cells which can appear anywhere on the body's skin or mucous membrane surfaces, including lips and genitals.

Warts are one of the most common skin disorders in children and younger adults. Warts appear to be caused by a group of viruses known as Human Papilloma Virus or HPV.

There are different strains of HPV causing different types of warts. For example, genital or venereal warts are usually caused by a different strain than causes plantar warts.

Warts can be classified in different ways. Sometimes they are described by location such as plantar warts, those on the bottom or plantar surface of the foot; peri-ungal, beside the nail or genital warts.

They may also be classified by their appearance such as: flat warts, filiform or thread like and verruciformis which are the ugly, raised warts on the fingers.

The course of most warts is benign, with the exception of genital warts, which may be associated with other genealogical problems, a topic I will leave for my obstetrical colleagues. Rarely warts may grow on or near the vocal cords in infants and small children and cause breathing difficulties.

The wart causing virus, HPV, is believed to be "caught" by close contact with another, infected person, although plantar warts may also be acquired at public pools and locker rooms.

The virus is likely introduced through tiny cuts in the skin from minor trauma. There appears to be a very long incubation period, of months to years after a person is infected before the actual warty growth appears.

While the prevalence rate of warts in school age children may be as high as 50 percent for a few warts, some unfortunate children may have innumerahle warts.

Sometimes this is explained by an immune problem such as cancer chemotherapy or by another skin disorder such as eczema. But, often it is a mystery why some children may have so many warts when they are otherwise in good health.

Most of the non-genital warts eventually disappear as the body's immune system does its "magic." This however may take several months or years and some people do not want to wait that long to get rid of their warts.

There are several different treatment options for warts. Most current over the counter treatments consist of a mild acid that destroys the wart gradually. These do require repeated applications and can take several days.

There is also a high recurrence of the wart and the treatment can be uncomfortable, especially for children.

There are a number of homeopathic or natural treatments which appear to work. Banana peel, applied to plantar warts has a similar effect to the over the counter products but again, it requires repeated applications and scraping. Soaking in hot water may actually kill the virus and, believe it or not, some warts respond to hypnosis — maybe you can wish them away.

Warts are not caused by toads, witches

There are a number of other "destructive" treatments available such as cryotherapy, which is very cold using nitrogen or electrocoutery, burning the wart. For someone with only a few warts these methods may be preferred, but because they are painful and may cause other problems, they are not usually appropriate for multiple warts and for use on frightened children.

There is also a significant recurrence rate with these therapies and the wart may actually grow back, larger than before.

There are some newer medications and older medications used in different ways that instead of destroying the actual warty growth, appear to work by inducing the body's immune system to destroy the wart causing virus. This includes both topical cream and sometimes an oral medication either alone or in combination with the cream. I have found this newer approach successful and also better tolerated than the more painful treatments.

Warts are probably pretty difficult to prevent as the virus is so widespread. As in preventing any infections, hand washing can't hurt. Also, trying to limit trauma, especially to the fingers, by discouraging nail biting, may also help prevent the development of the difficult to treat warts.

Plantar warts might be prevented by wearing a shower shoe in locker rooms and public pool showers.

Please remember warts are a normal part of childhood. It is OK not to treat them and especially important not to make the treatment worse than the disease.

Dr. Roderic Tinney can be contacted at the Pine River Medical building — located near the Charlevoix Area Hospital — by calling (231) 547-6554.

Soccer team has busy week

Charlevoix received outstanding defensive play from Murray and Pettis, who took on the assignment of marking Alicia Grambeau. Kelly Zimmerman and freshman Sarah Cross and McKenzie also played strong defensively.

Midfielder Madison and forward Drost had strong games.

"Harbor has a lot of talent and aggressively goes to every ball. Our young players learned a lot from this game — namely the effort it takes to play at this level," coach Madison said.

On May 11, the Rayder soccer players played their third game of the week and tallied a win against non-conference Division II team, Big Rapids by a score of 3 to 2 bringing their overall standing to 7-5-1.

The Cardinals scored early when the Rayders failed to rotate defensively and left the offside wing open in front of the net. They followed with another score off a free kick to take a 2 to 0 lead.

Zimmerman, playing her strongest game of the season, then switched a nice, long ball to right wing Drost who converted on the play.

Vogelheim tied the game before the half on a penalty kick resulting from a take down in the box.

The game was even in the second half until Murray went down with an ankle injury forcing Zimmerman to step in as sweeper.

After some adjustment time, the Rayders defense of Cross and McKenzie along with sophomore Alyssia McDonough, returning from injury, settled in and gained control.

Vogelheim also returned to her all-star form after injury and put the Rayders up with an excellent move in front of the net off a feed from Drost.

Blanchard made 12 saves in the net.

Elissa Wood, Pettis and Madison had strong games in the midfield.

like Burger King and McDonald's, will feel the loss of lunch business from high schoolers the most.

Managers at both Subway and Village Inn Pizza said the majority of their lunch crowd does not come from the high school. But, managers at Burger King, Pizza Hut and McDonald's all agreed the loss will likely hurt business.

The second factor Grundman highlighted is the time limitation set on students during their lunch period. At the new high school two lunchs periods will be offered, one at 11 a.m. and the next at 12:15 p.m., with each lasting 35 minutes.

"There will not be ample time for students to drive anywhere safely during our 35 minute lunch," he said.

The third factor, security, the board also felt lends itself to the need for a closed campus. Grundman explained that the new building is designed around security. It is equipped with one entrance/exit.

In considering each of the three factors, board members and school administrators said students' safety is its focus and the factor that brought it to the final vote to close the Marion Center Road campus for grades nine through 12.

Scholarships given by historical society

Due to the outstanding quality of the historical essays submitted by consideration to the Charlevoix Historical Society, two Benona J. Kohler Scholarships, each worth $500, will be awarded for 2002.

One of 20 essays, Betsy Tebeau's "Operatic Days of Charlevoix" and Amy Kurtz's "The Dixon Family" were judged best.

Both girls are graduating seniors at Charlevoix High School and both will attend the University of Michigan in the fall.

Kurtz is a member of the National Honor Society and participates in track and performing arts. She is the daughter of Elaine and John Kurtz. Her focus in college may be geriatric care or psychology.

Tebeau, daughter of Sue and Pram Acharya, will pursue studies in art. She has been active in Girl Scouts, runs track and cross country for Charlevoix High School and is a member of the National Honor Society.

Sheriff conducts sting

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office, in cooperation with the Northwest Community Health Agency, recently did an undercover tobacco sting at 26 businesses in Charlevoix County.

The businesses were all checked in two days and the office is happy to report only two of them sold tobacco to a minor.

The operation was set up with one undercover deputy and one high school student. The student was instructed to ask for cigarettes, front money was given to them in case of a sale and the undercover deputy was already in the store to witness the sale.

Students were not allowed to lie. If asked how old they were, they told the truth and if asked for identification they produced their identification showing they were underage.

If no sale occurred, both parties left the business without the clerk being aware they were just checked.

If a sale was made, both parties left the store and the deputy returned to identify the clerk and deliver the bad news.

Both clerks that sold looked at the student's identification, but only took note of the year of birth, without looking at the month and day.

The sheriff's office would like to congratulate those businesses that did not sell, and also warn all businesses similar stings will occur in the future.

NETTLETON EXHIBIT IS EXTENDED UNTIL FRIDAY

Carvings and Paintings Being Shown by Mrs. Rosa Nettleton

Those Charlevoixans who have not seen the wonderful exhibit of carvings and painting exhibits by Mrs. Rosa Nettleton at her home, still have an opportunity this week.

Mrs. Nettleton has announced the exhibit will be continued through Friday evening. Hours established are between 3 and 5 o'clock, afternoons, and between 7 and 9 o'clock evenings.

During the past week, over 60 people have seen the exhibit which includes a collection of 120 carved figures representing a period of 5,000 years. One group consists of the ancient period, another from Eve to the present age. Numerous paintings are also on exhibit.

Only by personal observation can one realize the work, study and talent which has been required. The exhibit should not be missed by anyone, old or young.

Mrs. R. Nettleton, Artist — Historian, Died Thursday

Mrs. Rosa Nettleton, 91, pioneer, resident, artist and historian, died Thursday afternoon at her home at 202 Burns Street, following an extended illness.

Funeral services were held Saturday at the Winchester Funeral Home with the Reverend James Sherman officiating. Burial was in Brookside Cemetery.

Born in London, England March 6, 1868, the former Rosa Saunders came to Toronto, Ontario, as a child and to Charlevoix in 1891. On Oct. 29, 1892 she was married to David C. Nettleton, pioneer settler, abstractor and civil engineer who had surveyed a large section of the city of Charlevoix and for whom a street is named. From records kept by her husband and information she had gathered after coming to northern Michigan, Mrs. Nettleton compiled an early history of Charlevoix which she presented to the Charlevoix Public Library. She also wrote poetry but was best known for her oil paintings.

She was a member of the Charlevoix Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, the First Congregational Church and the Tuesday Study Club.

Surviving are one son, Arthur, of Charlevoix; two sisters, Miss Ellen Saunders and Mrs. Minnie Craig and two brothers, Fred and Alfred Saunders, all of Toronto.

Mrs. Rosa Nettleton Presents Exhibition

Mrs. Rosa Nettleton, well-known local artist, will give an exhibit of her work at the community room of city hall July 23 to July 27 inclusive.

The exhibit will include 60 paintings, carvings and pen and ink drawings and will feature 140 figurines showing some of the historical costumes of the past 4,000 years.

Descriptive talks on art and costume will be given by Mrs. Nettleton each day at 4 o'clock. A tableau or guest speaker will be presented each evening at 8 p.m.

Hours of the exhibit will be from 2 to 5 p.m. and 7:30 to 9 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and from 10:30 a.m. until 12 p.m. and from 2 until 5 p.m. Saturday.

In a recent interview, relating to her study of the history of the dress, Mrs. Nettleton said, "The psychology of the dress is a broad subject and a lifetime of study is not sufficient to cover it.

"All through the ages, dress shows the character of the people and the conditions under which they lived. In our time, much has been added to our knowledge of ancient peoples by the work of archaeologists,

"In excavations at the site of ancient Sumerian cities, near the banks of the Euphrates River, little statuettes were found of people who lived nearly 5,000 years ago. These statuettes are now in the Chicago Museum of Art.

"On the island of Crete, in the Mediterranean Sea, have been uncovered in the ruins of their ancient civilization, statuettes of these wonderfully gifted people of that island, who lived 2,500 years before Christ.

"We are vastly indebted to the ancient Egyptian artists for their custom of depicting not only their own people, but all peoples of surrounding countries they came in contact with, in painting, statuary and descriptive hieroglyphics; and so bringing to us through the ages a knowledge of the dress and appearance of the men and women of those far off times, who lived, loved, married and raised families, just as we do today.

"During the Middle Ages, the wonderful tapestries wrought by the ladies of that time show us the dames with their towering head dresses and voluminous trailing skirts.

"The 19th century, from the year 1800 to its close, has throughout its space many varied and remarkable styles of dress and our own 20th century is not without its oddities, as witness the hobble skirt and flapper styles for women and the peg-top trousers for men.

"So it is that after years of studying, costume one can tell almost the exact period that a certain costume may have been the fashion of the time.

"I have been asked how I came to take up the study of costume. I think this study is a matter of interest to all who have the incentive to do Art Work, but one must have time to give to intensive research required to make authentic representations of costumes of past ages. It has, therefore been only during the past 10 to 12 years that I have been able to give this work all the study needed.

"I have also been asked to speak of the process of making little figurines. Well, first one must spend very much time in research to make sure their sketches are accurate. Then, get a board (if you can) basswood or white pine are good and transfer the drawing on to the board and cut out around the outline. A little carving on the figure helps to make it more realistic. Lastly, paint the figurine, making sure the colors are correct — and there you are.

"The mechanical part of the work being not nearly so important as the preliminary study."

Sheriff arrests former Beaver Island deputy

Sheriff George T. Lasater advised that after an eight month investigation by detectives from the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office and Michigan State Police, Ronald Lee Hammer, 58, of Battle Creek, was arrested for embezzlement of $20,000 or more.

The embezzlement allegedly took place between February of 1998 and November of 2000 while Hammer was employed with Chip Counseling Center, located on US-31 in Charlevoix, and case manager for community corrections.

The arrest was made for one count of embezzlement, $20,000 or more, on a warrant authorized by the Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney's Office.

The offense carries a penalty of 10 years in prison or $15,000 or three times the amount embezzled, whichever is greater.

Hammer was a retired police officer from southern Michigan who was hired by the sheriff's office as a part-time, summer deputy sheriff for the Beaver Island Substation.

He worked in that position for approximately three years.

Scouts make toys, blankets

It's a flurry of thread, needles, cloth and stuffing at Senior Girl Scout Troop 267's work tables, but these girls aren't taking sewing class.

These Senior Girl Scouts are taking these materials and turning them into toys and blankets for local homeless shelters.

With the help from the community churches and service clubs in the area, toys and blankets will be made and donated to the Nehemiah Project Hospital House in Petoskey, the Ezra House in Charlevoix and the Women's Resource Center Safe House in Petoskey. In addition to toys and blankets, "care kits" will be assembled and donated, containing basic need items, such as soap, shampoo, toothbrush/paste and first aid supplies.

The Charlevoix scouts chose this project to fulfill requirements for the Girl Scout Gold Award, the highest recognition given to senior level Girl Scouts.

Each girl must complete 50 hours toward this endeavor and must individually contribute a specific task to the overall project.

Adrienne Winchester is the contact person for the churches and service organization, while Betsy Tebeau secures supplies and donations. Lesley Pollard is putting together an audiovisual presentation of the entire project, Jennifer Mosoryak is coordinating the presentation of the supplies to the shelters and Jennifer Rowe is project coordinator outside of Charlevoix. Jackie Riley is organizing younger troops to help with the project. The seniors hope to keep the project going after they graduate this June.

"The girls are very enthusiastic about the project," troop leader, Mel Morrison, said. "They feel that awareness and assistance to the growing number of homeless families in this area is an important issue. They hope this project helps increase support of the shelters, both with material aids and necessary funding. It's a great opportunity to reach out to others in need."

Anyone interested in donating or helping the scouts with this project may call 547-6143.

Pollution causes concern over city water wells

WATER

bottom catch basins and had seeped into the soil.

Further investigation found the on-site soil and groundwater was contaminated.

In 1995, Harbor Industries responded to the contamination by digging out 1,866 tons of contaminated soil and cleaning it, using a thermal treatment process.

According to Harbor Industries' consultant, Donald Conway with Gosling Czubak of Traverse City, practices have since been changed to prevent future contamination.

But since the initial contamination was discovered, further investigation has shown the contamination is moving. The contaminant has been detected at lower levels, in ground water northeast of Harbor Industries, toward Round Lake.

Conway told city council a study has been performed and its results show the contaminated water is not discharging into Round Lake at a concentration above the maximum state allowance.

According to Andy Stempky, an environmental quality analyst with the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ), the regulatory body found the level of PCE concentration in Round Lake, "is safe for aquatic and public use."

While the contaminant concentrations are below clean-up criteria established by the state of Michigan, they do pose a threat to people drinking the contaminated water.

According to Christine Flaga, a toxicologist with the Environmental Response Division of the MDEQ, human effects depend on how much of the contaminated water someone drinks and what concentration level the water is at.

She said human effects from drinking water contaminated at low levels are not known, but in animal studies, where the animal was exposed to high levels of the contaminant, liver and kidney damage and liver and kidney cancers were found.

"We do regulate PCE as a probable human carcinogen, because it has been shown to cause cancer in animals. I would not expect cancer to be seen from environmental exposure (as is the case with Harbor Industries' contamination region)," she said. "Unless concentrations in the environmental media (water) are very high, and people are routinely exposed over many years, would experience the same kind of results."

In order to avoid contaminating people who live in the impacted area, Harbor Industries has requested the city create another area like the street department zone, where water wells are prohibited unless approved by the MDEQ.

Conway said this would avoid the possible interface of people and contamination, because the city's water supply isn't contaminated.

However, Stempky said the alternative for Harbor Industries is expensive. He said if the city chooses not to pass the ordinance, they have to clean up the contaminated area.

"The law requires Harbor Industries to clean it up or provide for an ordinance or something of that nature prohibiting anyone from accessing the water," Stempky said.

In a copy of the proposed city ordinance prohibiting the use of wells in the impacted area, the language used indicates the city's aim is to protect its citizens.

But on May 6, when city council was setting the date for the public hearing, members highlighted some possible administrative and enforcement problems the city could face if it passes the ordinance.

The ordinance requires the city to identify any existing wells within the impacted area and then to follow through and make sure the wells are properly abandoned.

The wording in the proposed ordinance indicates owners being serviced by private wells, in the impacted area, will be required to disable the well and connect to city water within 30 days of the ordinance going into effect.

At the meeting, second ward councilman Bill Bellows asked, "How do we know there aren't people around town using old wells to water their lawn or something?"

Fellow second ward representative Gabe Campbell responded to Bellows, saying, "We have good city water; I don't see why anyone would want a well."

City treasurer Rick Brandi said he hopes those with wells will come forward.

"If people do have them, we'll probably hear from them.... hopefully," he said.

Larry Levengood with the Charlevoix County Health Department told council he is unaware of any wells in the affected area and any future wells that could be drilled in the area would have to be permitted by the health department.

Aside from the city possibly passing the ordinance, Harbor Industries also plans to follow through with a remedial action plan, which will include the installation of more ground water monitoring wells between their site and Round Lake.

Conway said he foresees the ordinance being repealed once the level of contamination in the impacted area has dropped below drinking water criteria.

What happened to spring?

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff Writer

Inconsistent weather has plagued northern Michigan with a lasting winter, a delayed summer and a confused spring.

"This is definitely not normal, but certainly not unheard of," said Patrick Bak, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service about the currently cool temperatures plaguing Charlevoix.

According to Bak, these swings in temperature stem from the transition between seasons such as winter and spring.

Jeff Zoltowski, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service, said this spring is abnormal because the temperatures haven't been as up and down as years past.

> "As of now, it looks like the summer will be pretty close to normal."

Bak said current temperatures have been 10 to 20 degrees below normal.

Normal temperatures are used to judge deviation in the weather and, according to Bak, are an aver-

Council votes to change sewer size

By JULIE WITTHOEFT

Charlevoix City Council agreed to a sewer line design change request made by the Charlevoix Public School District, but project opponents still aren't satisfied.

At its meeting May 20 council voted 4-2 in favor of changing the sewer line design for 1,050 feet, from the top of the hill, located south of Clark Road, to the new high school being built off Marion Center Road in Marion Township. The line is being constructed to service the school.

"We're going to go with what the DEQ (Department of Environmental Quality) recommended and drop the 8 inch for 1,000 feet," Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Dr. John Sturock, said.

Sturock explained that the school made the design change request after reviewing the contract and design and concluding that the change would not negatively impact the city or the school.

"It will cost less money and will serve everybody's needs," he said.

Sturock and city administrators are unsure at this time of the amount the district will save.

The DEQ recommendation he referred to came from David Porter, an environmental engineer with the DEQ.

WATCH presents its own marina plan

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The city of Charlevoix has tentatively scheduled the first public input meeting to plan renovations to the municipal marina for 8 p.m., July 22 in council chambers at city hall.

In preparation for the upcoming changes, former city mayor Josh Barnes and Water and Air Team for Charlevoix (WATCH), a local environmental group, are drafting proposals.

Barnes is in the process of revising his proposal and WATCH sent its suggestion to city administrators and the East Park planning firm, Pollack Design Associates of Ann Arbor, on April 25.

"We feel it's a compromise between what the city proposed and what currently exists," Bill Henne, president of WATCH, said of the plan.

The city's consulting engineer for the marina project, United Design Associates, Inc. of Cheboygan, drafted two possible marina design options in June of 2000, one depicting floating docks that stretched 400 feet into Round Lake.

The size of the project enraged some residents and sparked WATCH to draft its own proposal.

"This (the WATCH proposal) was a proactive idea. We were concerned when we saw the original plan extending out 400 feet into most of Round Lake and thought it was a disgrace for the aesthetic beauty of Round Lake and would cause boat congestion," Henne said. "We've had a lot of support for that point of view."

While WATCH members understand the United Design rendering of the marina is not the city plan, Henne said the group hopes the city will use its proposal as a guide to be used during its planning process.

Charlevoix resident Gary Forbrig, owner of Interface Permit Consulting, is not a member of the group and was hired by WATCH to draft the proposal. Forbrig said he commonly does permit work, design and consulting.

In the case of the marina design, he presented the WATCH selection committee, made up of three members of the group, with four concepts he drafted using input from the group. Forbrig started the project just after the East Park renovation public input meeting that took place Dec. 6, 2001. The selection committee and the WATCH board of directors, which includes 16 members, made its decision in March.

The proposal increases the marinas capacity by 15 boats. Henne said the marina currently holds 34 boats and the WATCH proposal would accommodate 49. The WATCH docks extend out 150 feet at the greatest length, where the shoreline dips in, and average 85 feet in length.

WATCH presented its possible marina plan to the city in April.

Henne said since then, the group has received an inquiry from third ward council member Shirley Gibson.

After reviewing the plan, Gibson said, "I like the layout; the way they straightened the bulkhead and the way docks are situated. There may still be too many docks for my taste, but they compromised."

Gibson added she's most interested in seeing an increase in the number of shoppers' docks offered. She said these docks are more likely to bring revenue to downtown businesses.

The WATCH plan does not include information about renovations to East Park.

"We support what the city is doing as far as upgrading the facilities," Henne said.

WATCH plans to have representatives at the July input meeting.

The city's tentative marina planning timeline shows city council selecting the final plan on Sept. 16, 2002.

Do we really need political parties anymore?

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

What ever happened to finding the best man or woman for the job?

I have asked myself this question a lot in the past few weeks. You see, it is campaign season once again and the newspapers and airwaves are filled with political mumbo-jumbo from the left and right.

But, I am already getting a little disgruntled.

Let me tell you about a press conference I watched recently by a politico on television. I will not say who the politician was or what party he was from, it is not really needed.

The politician stood before a group of reporters and explained to them how his party was the choice of smart patriotic people and his opponent's party could only be the choice of people who want to destroy America. He droned on and on about the virtues of his political party and said what sides of the issue his party is on, never what he personally thought about the issues.

When any subject came up about a failed policy his party pushed for, the politician would say that mistakes were probably made, but they were only made because the opposing party was unwilling to compromise.

After the press conference, I found myself staring at the television in bewilderment. This man actually stood in front of a bunch of reporters and told them nothing about himself.

All he spoke about was how great his political party is. It was as if he was no longer an individual, but a conglomeration of many people from his political party.

A little later on that day there was another press conference by a politician, this time from the opposing party. Again, it was the same thing about how his party was great, the other bad.

To top off the day, I picked up the local daily newspaper, The Petoskey News-Review, and read a story about a local politician who switched parties from Republican to Democrat.

Everyone was so concerned about her, because they think she will never win as a Democrat in this area of the state.

So what if she is a good politician? THE WOMAN IS A DEMOCRAT! DEAR GOD, WON'T SOMEONE PLEASE HELP HER!

I ended the day feeling a little ill and very concerned about the political future of our country.

Political parties have always baffled me. The only reason for a political party seems to be to give those who do not have time to find out about the individual candidates a way to make a quick and uninformed choice on election day.

Call me silly, but I like to learn a little about the person who wants to represent me. From that, I pick the one I think will do the best job, regardless of political party.

I generally find myself being very cautious about anyone that pushes one political party as if it is a religion. Too many times, these people try to convince me that a poor politician is great, just because of his party affiliation.

To me, that is a disservice to the public by the person pushing the party. A poor politician should not get praise, just because of his party. A poor politician should not be in office.

But, every year and in every race across the land, it seems to get more party oriented. We hear the virtues of one party over the other, never the virtues of the man or woman running.

However, if you really listen to what they are saying, you find they are all saying the same things. It seems both Democrats and Republicans have the same high qualities and really the same positions on the big issues. And they both blame the other for the same failures of government.

Could it be these two parties are generally the same and they just don't realize it? Could it be that the problems of government can be blamed on the both of them now?

Maybe because both parties are actually saying the same thing, voters will soon be forced to actually start learning about the candidates and pick the best man or woman for the job.

Maybe the day is coming when politicians can not be grouped into political parties if they want to get the facts about themselves out to the voters.

Maybe the death of the traditional political party is at hand.

What a wonderful day it will be for our country to have the true best men or women running it.

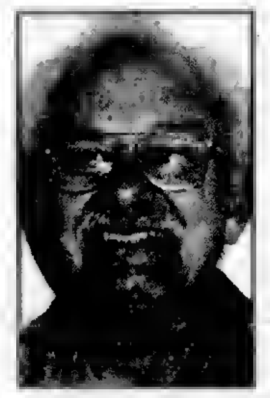
Injured fighter pilots help find modern cataract cure



Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

If you are younger than about 50 years, you may not need to read this. If you are older than 60, you probably should.

Back in the 1700s, when reading glasses, which merely magnified, were invented, it became possible for aging folks to keep up with the written word. But, until about 50 years ago, the gradual dimming of the vision due to cataracts was a normal and unavoidable part of the aging process for many people.

Glasses cannot be of much help for the problem of cataracts. The lens in the interior of the eyeball gradually becomes clouded or discolored and vision fades.

Most often exposure to ultraviolet light found in direct sunlight is at least a partial cause. If you spent much of a summer childhood on the beach, your cataracts might develop at a younger age.

But, wars sometimes have unexpected benefits.

During World War II, the transparent canopies and windshields of airplanes were made of new plastics. As an accident of war, the occasionally shattering of such windows resulted in pieces of plastic being embedded in the eyeballs of wounded fliers. Surgery to remove them was sometimes impossible.

To the surprise of almost everyone, many of the small pieces of plastic left in the eyes caused no long term problems. The plastic was not rejected by the body, as most foreign materials are, like slivers of wood or metal.

Some surgeon, whose name I have been unable to find, appears to have thought that if plastic in the eye caused no problems, maybe it would be possible to replace the aging, cataract-ridden lenses of people with new, permanent, transparent lenses of plastic.

The normal eye lens is about three-eighths of an inch in diameter and is encased in a tight covering called the capsule. When lens replacement surgery was first attempted, a significant incision in the front of the eyeball was necessary to remove the lens. The first patients had to be patient indeed, for recovery often took weeks and required the patient to be horizontal, face-up and head unmoved for the entire recovery period.

Letter response

Editor:

In a recent letter to the editor, Barney Way seems to think it's good for Barney Way, Eveline Township, the state of Michigan and the United States for him to lease his land for giant electricity generating windmills. I can agree with him only about the first item.

The detrimental impact on the neighbors' cherished environment, the reason many chose to live where they do, is not outweighed by Mr. Way's relatively modest financial gain. On top of this present unbalanced gain for a few, to the detriment of many, I think of the numbers of people who will be moving to Eveline Township and the other parts of Charlevoix County, in the next 20 years. This growth is projected to be 1 percent each year. With good land use planning,

Eye surgery improves with time, technology

KNUTSON

I recall hearing of such operations as a child and knowing that I would never be able to remain stationary for that long.

Science, as they say, marches on.

The incisions for cataract surgery became smaller, the operations simpler and recovery faster. Until about 10 years ago it was still necessary to make an incision large enough to remove the whole lens.

The operation now is done through an incision barely more than one-sixteenth of an inch long, the lens is broken up by ultrasound and removed in small pieces. The new lens is rolled up and inserted in the capsule where it expands to full size immediately.

All this takes about 15 to 20 minutes and is done on an outpatient basis. After the operation, you drink a small glass of juice, get up and walk away. Eye drops a few times a day for a couple of weeks are the only further requirement. There are no limitations on normal activity.

All of the above has more than passing interest to me.

A cataract had severely limited my vision in my right eye until last week. On Thursday, a new lens was put in at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey. By Saturday, I could read comfortably without the glasses I have worn for years and distant objects took on a clarity they had not had for decades.

If your vision is limited by developing cataracts, find out how simple and remarkable effective lens replacement surgery can be. It is totally painless. Renewed and improved vision for many, if not most, older people is part of the legacy of wounded World War II fighter pilots.

the newcomers and those already here can all have scenery, vistas and peace and quiet. Not so with farms of 400 foot tall windmills on the hill tops. Our scenery is one of our area's greatest assets. This is true now and has been true historically. I am even less in favor of Mr. Way selling our scenery for his private gain than I am in favor of him, or anyone, selling our Great Lakes water.

Consider the role of Mr. Way's windmills in the bigger picture of the nations energy needs. Maps of national wind strength show that Michigan has very modest wind resources. The only areas where there are even moderate winds are in the counties near the Great Lakes.

If these areas were fully developed in windmill farms, Michigan would contribute 0.3 percent of the nation's electricity needs. North Dakota, If fully developed in windmill farms, could provide 30 percent of the nation's needs.

Another way to gain perspective is to consider the capacity of windmill farms to supply power compared to conventional power plants. Many readers have seen the wind mills near Mackinaw City. Soon, I understand, there may be five such machines on about 100 acres. To equal the output of just one large conventional plant, there would need to be 20 Mackinaw size farms in Charlevoix County and in Emmet County and in every county of the state of Michigan!

The reason Eveline Township is a target for this wind exploitation is because of subsidies paid by tax payers — first to the windmill companies in the form of exaggeratedly rapid depreciation; second to the power companies in the form of a tax break if they have green power (could be hydro) in their product mix. On top of these subsidies, the consumer of power pays a premium above the regular rate.

As Mr. Way says in his letter to the editor, most people are in favor of wind power. I am too. However, I think it does matter where they are placed. If Mackinaw City has empty land with no developable or recreational uses and no neighbors, then they can go for it! The same for North Dakota.

Neither of these places is like Eveline Township, where people have been coming to visit or settle for over 100 years, to gain respite from the "windmill farms" of their generation.

Comments on commissioners

Editor:

As I will not be able to attend the next Charlevoix County Commissioners meeting on May 22, 2002 and make a public comment, I comment with this letter instead.

Firstly, I would like to compliment Commissioner Carl Price for his excellent job in chairing the last meeting on April 24. Commissioner Vic Patrick's comments and actions were very appropriate and seemed like a genuine effort to place the Open Meeting Act incident into its proper place.

I was very pleased that the motion to hire lawyer Peter Patterson, to represent the commission, was defeated and I thought the idea of the commissioners meeting with the prosecutor to discuss the Open Meeting Act incident directly on May 8 seemed reasonable.

However, I was dismayed to read in the Petoskey News-Review that that meeting had been canceled with no reason given.

I was amazed to see that Commissioner Don Smith still has such contempt for this whole incident that he would use it as an excuse to publicly ridicule fellow county officials and make ridiculous suggestions of resolving it with peace negotiations at the Villager Pub.

This issue of conducting the peoples' business in an open and respectful way is of more importance to all the residents of the county than any other single issue, in that it addresses whether our elected officials are committed to following the American ideals of representing the best interests of the people they serve or whether they have their own agenda to follow and are willing to use back room party politics to achieve it.

I suggest that all the commissioners think hard about the oath of office that they took.

I was also dismayed to learn that Mr. Patterson has submitted a bill for over $12,000 of county money regarding his providing advice to some commissioners and his issuing of a press release on their behalf. This money could be better spent. Most of the services purchased were unnecessary at the time.

At this junction, I guess we the people have little recourse but to pay the bill, but I think that as the advice was untimely, poor, in part unnecessary and not in the best interest of the whole Board of Commissioners that the commissioners who used the lawyer's services reimburse the county for a portion of the costs. I think that rules limiting the ability of commissioners to incur legal expenses without commission approval need to be instituted.

If nothing else, I hope that this incident serves as a learning experience for not only the Charlevoix County Commissioners, but for all residents of Charlevoix County.

Think about your local government and vote appropriately in August and November.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Pace joins Courier staff as summer intern

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Courtney Pace, 21, of Charlevoix, has joined the staff of the Charlevoix Courier as a summer intern.

Courtney Pace

Pace is a junior at Western Michigan University, where she has a double major in journalism and creative writing. She came to Charlevoix three years ago with her mother, Diane, and sister, Lindsey. Lindsey is a senior at Charlevoix High School.

She previously lived in Dallas, Texas.

Pace is quick to point out, while she has only lived in Charlevoix for three years, she is not new to the area. Her mother is from Charlevoix, and the family came up every summer to visit.

Now that she is a resident of Charlevoix, Pace said she finds the place "magical."

"It is so pretty. The bridge is my favorite part," she said. "I've never actually lived near water and in the summer it is not so hot."

Pace said beauty — especially the campus pond and its swans — was one of the reasons she picked Western Michigan University as a place to go to college. She also liked how the school was "not too big and not too small."

While at the school, Pace picked a creative writing major because she likes writing stories. However, she wanted something a little more "realistic" and added the journalism major.

She soon discovered how much fun journalism is.

"It's fun to do the reporting aspect. I like to find out the details. It fits my personality," she said.

Pace also joined the campus newspaper, The Western Herald, last year and is writing for its arts and entertainment section.

"It surprises me how much goes into the stories you read in the newspaper. There are so many different angles you have to take, just to look at one subject. Plus, you never know what will happen next," she said.

Pace added journalism gives her a chance to experience new things and meet people she would normally not meet.

While at the Charlevoix Courier, Pace will cover a variety of topics, thus allowing her to try many new things and meet many new interesting people.

She will also be working at the Weathervane Restaurant in Charlevoix this summer.

Art is more than just a hobby for Staffel

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff writer

Playing with clay is professional for 80-year-old Bonnie Staffel.

Staffel has been "throwing" clay for the past 53 years, providing art for the Charlevoix community throughout that period. Throwing is a term Staffel uses to describe the process of making clay into various "functional" artistic items, such as pots, bowls and dishes.

"I want to be an inspiration to other artists that may think their careers are over at age 65," she said.

Throwing clay, according to Staffel, involves centering clay on a rotating wheel and then pulling the clay so it forms walls.

"I use an ancient Korean method of making big pots," she said. This method involves the use of clay ropes called coils, which are added to the rotating clay to build the growing structure.

Staffel, who calls herself a classic potter, follows the techniques of Englishman Bernard Leach, who studied in Japan.

"He wrote the book that integrated his English methods with the Japanese methods," Staffel said.

Leach, according to Staffel, died in the late 1980s.

The more abstract forms, which Staffel avoids, was started by Peter Voulkas. Staffel calls abstract forms too "wild" for her style. Voulkas died two months ago before a workshop he was scheduled to give in Bowling Green, Ohio, Staffel said.

Staffel's inspiration is famous potter, Beatrice Wood. Staffel said Wood lived to be 105 years old and continued to work until a month before she died.

Staffel's artistic career began with painting, but changed to pottery when she touched clay for the first time in 1948 at age 27. She was taking hand building classes at the Toledo Museum of Art School in Toledo, Ohio.

"I practiced for a year at home then went back for a second time and learned the (potter's) wheel with Harvey Littleton," Staffel said.

Littleton, according to Staffel, is a famous glass blower and potter.

In 1951, Staffel was awarded a scholarship to study at the Cranbrook Academy of Art in Bloomfield Hills.

Due to the birth of her daughter, Marell, in 1952, Staffel only finished a semester, but continued to shape her craft at home. Staffel said her daughter has done artwork in the past, but now exerts her creative flair through Charlevoix Camera. Staffel said Marell has owned the store for over 10 years.

Staffel's career led to becoming first resident potter at the John C. Campbell Folk School in Brasstown, N.C. Later on, she became involved with the administrative office and helped adapt the studios to the art of pottery.

"I worked with the director quite a bit to improve the classes and select the teachers," she said.

A connection between the folk school and a Danish folk school, gave Staffel the opportunity to teach art in Denmark for three winters. The winter sessions ran from January through March. In 1987, Staffel went to Denmark for the first time and visited five schools during her three-month stay.

She returned to Denmark in 1988 and again in 1990 and stayed at the County's legal bill over $12,000

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix County has received a bill in excess of $12,000 from Grand Rapids Attorney Peter Patterson for his work with some county commissioners in regard to an alleged violation of the Michigan Open Meetings Act.

Members of the Charlevoix County Commission contacted Patterson after Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur reported a possible violation of the meetings act by the commission's Personnel Committee — made up of Commissioners Don Smith, Jim Behling and Carl Price — when it had an unposted meeting on March 6. Patterson has worked for the county on labor matters since the 1970s.

In mid-April, the county commission voted against formally hiring Patterson to represent it for this matter. However, some commissioners had already been speaking with him.

Over a period of 46 days, commissioners spoke with Patterson on the Open Meetings Act matter and racked up a $12,474.90 bill at $225 an hour. As of Monday, no charges had been filed against any of the commissioners by the state.

According to Charlevoix County Clerk Jane Brannon, this bill will be submitted to the county commission.

Jarema files lawsuit against Kur, county

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Former Charlevoix County Chief Assistant Prosecutor John Jarema filed a lawsuit against Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur and Charlevoix County last week.

In the lawsuit, Jarema makes charges Kur and the county violated the Whistleblowers Act and caused defamation and invasion of privacy.

Jarema and his lawyer, Grant Parsons of Traverse City, declined the comment until after everyone listed in the lawsuit has been served. Kur said it is inappropriate for her to comment at this time.

Jarema was fired by Kur on Feb. 27, 2002. He is currently working for the Charlevoix law office of Joseph, Corcoran, Telgenhof and Snyder.

In papers filed with the Charlevoix County Circuit Court, Jarema alleges Kur violated the Whistleblowers Act by firing him because he was voicing concerns about "mismanagement of county funds" by the prosecutor's office.

The lawsuit paperwork states Jarema expressed concerns about the mismanagement to Kur and later to Charlevoix County Commissioner Don Smith at a Christmas Party last December. Jarema was going to give Smith a calendar of alleged abuses.

However, the paperwork states, Kur found out and took Jarema's notes and accessed his work computer and took files before he could give them to Smith. The paperwork also states Kur ordered Jarema to resign or be terminated.

Due to this, the paperwork states, Jarema sustained economic and non-economic damages, loss of earnings, loss of career opportunities, mental and emotional distress, loss of reputation and esteem in county and loss of ordinary pleasures of life.

For this, Jarema wants compensatory damages, exemplary damages, judgment for lost wages, lost fringe and pension benefits, interest and costs, an order reinstating him to the position he would have had and an injunction prohibiting further acts of retaliation or discrimination.

In the second count of defamation, Jarema claims Kur made disparaging remarks about him in a March 13 Charlevoix County Commissioners meeting.

This related to an alleged Open Meetings Act violation Kur reported to the Michigan State Attorney General's Office by the commission's Personnel Committee. The committee — composed of Commissioners Smith, Jim Behling and Carl Price — met with Jarema in early March in an unposted meeting to discuss his termination by Kur.

Kur criticized the commission for this unposted meeting on March 13. She previously criticized the members of the Personnel Committee at its regularly posted March 7 meeting.

Firefighters, EMTs get some practice on a bus

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

What looked like a tragic school bus rollover accident the evening of May 14 at Russell's Auto Body Repair off Bell's Bay Road in Charlevoix, was a practice session for the city's fire and emergency medical crews.

Doug Carver, city of Charlevoix Fire Chief, explained the event was a school bus extrication drill. It included the efforts of 22 city firefighters, four emergency medical technicians and six children.

Starting at 6:30 p.m. emergency personnel tipped the bus over, stabilized it and inserted six, brave children, with designated injuries, who were later "saved."

City firefighters and emergency medical technicians (EMTs) engage in vehicle extrication training about four times every year and attend school bus extrication classes annually. But this was the first time the group practiced with a school bus, right here in Charlevoix.

Carver said this training session was not only unique because it happened in Charlevoix, but also because of the design of the vehicle itself.

"School buses are unique; they're built like tanks and they're much safer than something like a Greyhound bus, but they're also harder to get into," he explained.

Instruments the group used at the site to access the "injured" children included metal cutting devices — a sawzall, an air chisel, a chain saw and a rotary blade chain saw. Extrication work required them to use jaws cutters and jaws rams.

"We don't usually use all these instruments at once, but people need to practice with them and this was an excellent opportunity to do that," Carver said.

The instruments firefighters used to cut into the thick metal of the "tank" like bus created quite a ruckus.

"It's like a drum in there," Carver said.

The noise shook the kids inside up a little, but they all said they had a family member who is a firefighter and knew they were safe.

After safely removing the students, the department smoke bombed the bus. Carver said whenever a person is trapped in a vehicle the fire department runs a hose to the site in case it catches fire.

"In a drill we can't practice the intensity of a real incident, but when you add a time limit or smoke bomb it makes it more realistic," he explained.

Participants took away quality practice time with instruments the department doesn't use every day and saw some areas where the crew needed work.

"We can always improve," Carver said.

The drill started at 7 p.m. and was over by 8:30 p.m.

Carver lauded the efforts of both the fire fighting squad and the EMTs, who he said did an excellent job of triaging, that is, evaluating and prioritizing injured people.

"If there are multiple injuries and there is someone with a broken arm and someone bleeding to death, the person bleeding to death will be the priority," he said.

He added the department would definitely be interested in doing the bus extrication drill again.

City firefighter and emergency medical technician Jess Silva donated the bus.

Charlevoix firefighters and EMTs got to use their skills during a school bus drill last week. The bus was donated and they used volunteer children as fake victims. Most of the children had firefighters in their families. Above, the firefighters had to cut a hole in the roof of the school bus to get at its "trapped" passengers. Right, after accessing the inside of the bus, firefighters were able to get at the victims inside. (Photos by Julie Witthoeft)

Ferry spreads price increase

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix County Transportation Committee voted May 14 to rescind its earlier decision to increase Ironton Ferry coupon book prices $10 and voted instead to spread the weight of the increase around to single pass users too.

"By lowering the book by $5 and raising the individual ticket price by $.50, more revenue will be brought in than would have been by raising the book price $10," Bob Hermann, a frequent Ironton Ferry user said.

The committee includes: Jim Behling, Charlevoix County Commissioner for the first district; Doug Way, Chairman of the Charlevoix County Road Commission and Bob Winchester, a member of the public.

It decided to charge $30 for coupon pass books and $2.50 per single vehicle trip.

Hermann was angry when the committee voted April 2 to raise the cost of the 20 coupon pass book from $25 to $35. He said the increase brought his ferry season expenses up $200.

But, even though some residents are happy to see the change, Behling said he wanted to stick with the committee's original decision to increase the pass books $10.

"I think the user has to pay and that's where I think the price should be ($35 per coupon book), to keep the ferry running. If the users don't pay, the taxpayers have to subsidize it," he said.

He said 60 percent of the ferry's users are pass book holders and he disagrees with having single fare users pay $1 more than coupon book holders, who are paying $1.50 per trip.

However, Hermann and others feel the burden shouldn't fall only on locals, who generally buy the coupon books.

Dan Skrezczkoski, Eveline Township Supervisor, who attended the May 14 meeting to represent disgruntled residents, said, "I guess when I looked at the whole picture, and after listening to comments from residents, I felt the initial increase wasn't fair. There was a $10 increase (on coupon books) and single tickets saw no increase. Now, with new rates, I think people feel that was a more fair distribution of the increase."

Behling explained that the ferry currently breaks even and is self sustained.

However, its ability to remain a user fee supported service was threatened last summer when funds in its account plummeted. Changing water levels required the docks to be re-engineered to make the system adaptable at a cost of $125,000.

As of March the fund was at $33,476.52.

Behling said there could be more major costs to come this fall and he hopes the increase will be enough to keep the ferry self sustained.

"We're trying to stay above water," he said.

In the fall, the Coast Guard will conduct its five-year ferry inspection. The boat has to be pulled out of the water for the inspection and the cost of removal and any repairs mandated by the Coast Guard will fall on the ferry budget.

This concerned Skrezczkoski too.

"I'm still concerned with the five-year pull out. The transportation authority spent a lot of money last year redoing ramps and I'm still wondering if it will have enough money. But at least they're headed in the right direction," he said.

Behling explained that the last time taxpayers had to fund ferry repairs was 12 to 14 years ago when the Charlevoix County Road Commission and the Charlevoix County General Fund each paid $50,000 to cover the cost.

While Behling is skeptical as to whether or not lowering the book price from $35 to $30 was the right decision for the ferry budget, Hermann and Skrezczkoski feel it was a fair decision.

Garden Club to have its annual plant sale

The annual Charlevoix Area Garden Club plant sale will be given on May 25 at 807 E. Dixon Avenue in Charlevoix.

The sale will open promptly at 8:30 a.m. and last until noon.

Plant Sale chair Margaret Heath said, "We changed the closing time to noon, because our plants are usually gone by that time. Our supporters arrive early to get the best selection and many items are sold out by 10 a.m."

Items available at each year's sale include: annuals, perennials, herbs, garden gloves, trowels, and container gardens. Two special items available this year will include fresh "worms" and container gardens with "teacup" bird feeders.

"Worms are a great addition to anyone's garden," said Heath.

"The worm castings will provide a natural soil conditioner encouraging vigorous plant growth, improving aeration and the water retention of soil."

Most plants sold at the annual sale come from member gardens and are then shared with the community through the club's annual sale. Anyone with disease free, quality plants that would like to share their plants with the club may donate them by calling Heath at 547-1978.

Proceeds from the club's annual plant sale, the garden walk being given on July 17 and the bulb sale held annually during Applefest, go to benefit the club's seven Charlevoix gardens, the Bergman Center gardens, youth education and other community beautification projects.

The Charlevoix Area Garden Club is a member of the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan and National Garden Clubs, Inc.

For more information about the club or to inquire about membership, contact membership chair Joan Nowak at 547-1388.

Primary election to cut city mayoral race to two

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A three way race for the position of Charlevoix city mayor solidifies the need for a Aug. 6 primary election which will narrow the field to two.

The primary will be a competition between three second ward residents, incumbent Alvin "Butch" Russell, second ward councilman Gabe Campbell and city resident, Steve Smith.

Russell, who was a city councilman for 11 years prior to being elected mayor, is vying for his third term in the mayor's seat. He went into his second term in November of 2000 when he ran unopposed. But this time around, the competition has heated up.

Russell faces veteran councilman Campbell, who first secured his second ward seat in November of 1994, and Smith. Both Campbell and Smith are trying to unseat him for their first time in the mayor's slot and neither have run for mayor before.

Campbell filed April 29, over two weeks before the filing deadline and Smith filed May 14, the last day to file — landing a spot on the primary ballot.

Smith wasn't the only candidate who took the last minute opportunity to file. D.J. Way also filed May 14 to run for Campbell's open second ward seat on city council.

Way will face Karen Campbell, Gabe Campbell's wife in the Nov. 5 election. This is the second time he has run for a second ward seat. He lost to incumbent Bill Bellows in November of 2000.

The first ward seat, currently held by Bill Haggard, and the third ward seat, held by Sherm Chamberlain, are uncontested at this time. The fall election will be Haggard's first, since he was appointed by council following the 2001 resignation of Bernie De-Vries.

The names on the November ballot won't necessarily reflect who will be mayor, or first, second and third ward council members. Write-in candidates can file their intention to run with the city clerk, Liz Gooch, until 4 p.m., Nov. 1.

The city mayor and city council members are elected to two year terms and there are no council term limits.

For more information contact Gooch at (231) 547-3250 or stop by Charlevoix City Hall where write-in candidates can file, 210 State Street, Charlevoix.

Letter carriers, Boy Scouts unite

Charlevoix postal patrons gave generously during the National Association of Letter Carriers food drive May 11. Many left full grocery bags of food at their mailboxes for the carriers, some left full cases. Carriers estimated between 10-12 truckloads of food were donated. To help them pick up the food and sort it, Boy Scouts from around Charlevoix joined the carriers on their routes and helped take it to the Charlevoix Community Food Pantry. (Courtesy photo)

Residents file lawsuit over turbine ordinance

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

John and Nancy Cisne, residents of Eveline Township, have filed a lawsuit against the Eveline Township Board and Planning Commission over the townships work on a wind turbine ordinance.

As of May 21 township administrators had not been officially served with the lawsuit but according to John Cisne, last week, the papers were sent to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department to be served.

Dan Skrzeczkoski, township supervisor, said the township administrators felt all along this lawsuit would probably happen. He said he is just disappointed disgruntled residents did this before the board could make the changes to the zoning ordinance.

The Cisnes claim their constitutional rights have been violated and the two township administrative bodies have acted on an invalid zoning ordinance.

"Taxation without representation, that's what we have here. They're not representing us at all, they're only listening to a couple people that are part of a special interest group, who are going to make money off the rest of us," Cisne said.

The Cisnes are asking Charlevoix County Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas to declare the township zoning ordinance invalid and to grant them injunctive relief, which would prevent the township from conducting hearings and other proceedings under the ordinance.

The ordinance amendment they are refuting was adopted on Oct. 9, 2001 by the township board. It allows wind turbine electricity generators to be constructed in certain zoning districts of the township, with a special use permit.

But the Cisnes and others have since come forward with claims that notification of public hearings, which took place prior to the adoption of the ordinance, were "ambiguous and misleading." They further claim the board and commission didn't follow proper protocol in amending the ordinance.

The amendment procedure outlined in the zoning ordinance requires the public hearing notice be published twice prior to the hearing in a newspaper of general circulation in the township.

In making the wind turbine amendment, township clerk, Don Hayden, published the notice on July 31, 2001 and Aug. 21, 2001 in the Petoskey News-Review, but did not include required information about the place and time the text and any map corresponding to the amendment could be viewed.

"If he had done it right, we would have all known about this," John Cisne said.

The Cisne brief, drafted by attorney Jack Turner of Bay Harbor, is currently on file at the Charlevoix County Clerk's office, 203 Antrim Street, in Charlevoix.

The brief argues that because the public hearing notice did not indicate the hearing would be conducted by the planning commission and that zoning district information was not included, it was "misleading and ambiguous and did not provide proper notice to plaintiffs that a public hearing would be held for the purpose of amending the zoning ordinance."

In February 2002, residents urged the township board to rule the ordinance as invalid due to improper notification. Cisne claimed their request was denied by the board in April of 2002.

"The refusal by the township board to affirm the request of plaintiffs that Eveline Township Ordinance 23 is invalid is arbitrary and capricious and provides unequal treatment to plaintiffs compared to other property owners in Eveline Township," the brief explains.

> "That's why I'm here, the natural beauty. There's a time and place for everything and this is not the place."
> John Cisne,
> on wind turbine generators

However, Skrzeczkoski said that township attorney Bryan Graham of Bellaire told the board it could re-notice the ordinance and have another public hearing, but it wouldn't change anything because the township ordinance is valid.

"We thought, 'Let's make changes to the ordinance and have a hearing on the changes instead of spinning our wheels,'" Skrzeczkoski explained.

The brief also explores the claim that allowing wind turbine generators in agricultural zones is in direct conflict with the township's master plan. It states the wind turbines are commercial and industrial uses and are allowed by the ordinance in many areas outside those identified in the master plan as desired commercial and industrial areas.

Cisne said he moved to Charlevoix from the Detroit area because of its natural beauty.

"That's why I'm here, the natural beauty. There's a time and place for everything and this is not the place (for wind turbine generators)," Cisne said.

Cisne said about 50 other township residents have agreed to join in the lawsuit. Their names were not listed on the brief.

In the meantime, at 7 p.m., June 11 at the Eveline Township Hall, 08525 Ferry Road, the township board will review a request for a special use permit, issued by Steve Smiley, president of Bay Windpower of Suttons Bay, to build a wind monitoring tower on the property of Dawson Way.

The planning commission will vote at 7 p.m., June 5 to approve its May 8 meeting minutes when it unanimously recommended that the township board approve Smiley's special use permit request. Then, the commission will meet at 7 p.m., June 12 to review the township master plan.

Wells officially banned in city of Charlevoix

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix City Council unanimously passed an expansion of its ordinance prohibiting the use of personal wells in a large area of the city, where groundwater is contaminated as a result of a cleaning solvent used at the Harbor Industries site.

The ordinance was passed following a public hearing at the May 20 council meeting.

In 1997, council passed the first city ordinance prohibiting the use of wells in the area around the city street department, located off Stover Road, where diesel fuel contamination was found.

The city excavated the contaminated soil and installed test wells to monitor the situation.

According to Tim Parker, vice-president of northern operations with Harbor Industries, the company encountered a similar problem just after moving to its current Charlevoix location at 107 Airport Drive.

In the early 1980s the industrial facility, which produces retail product display cases and fixtures, discovered rinse water containing tetrachlorethene, also known as PCE, a cleaning solvent used to clean forklifts, had been discharged to open bottom catch basins and had seeped into the soil.

Further investigation found the on-site soil and groundwater was contaminated.

In 1995, Harbor Industries responded to the contamination, by removing and treating almost 2,000 tons of soil.

According to Harbor Industries' consultant, Donald Conway with Gosling Czubak of Traverse City, practices have since been changed to prevent future contamination.

Parker told council the industrial facility has spent $.5 million working to correct the problem. He added that since Harbor's clean up program started, in the early 1980s, contamination levels have decreased by 50 percent and he feels that over time the contamination will continue to diminish.

"This is too large to address by any other clean-up method," he said.

In a previous interview, Andy Stempky, an environmental quality analyst with the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ), said the alternative for Harbor Industries is expensive and without the expanded city ordinance, the company would have to clean up the contaminated area.

The ordinance is an effort to avoid contaminating people who live in the impacted area. Now, in that area water wells are prohibited, unless approved by the MDEQ.

Some possible permitted uses that were discussed at the meeting included heat pumps, where there is no human contact with the water.

Conway said this would avoid the possible interface of people and PCE, a regulated carcinogen, because the city's water supply isn't contaminated.

The ordinance requires the city to identify existing wells within the impacted area and to follow through and make sure the wells are properly abandoned. Sam Cresswell, city water and wastewater superintendent, said the city is not aware of any wells in the impacted area.

The ordinance wording requires owners being serviced by private wells in the impacted area, to disable the well and connect to city water by June 19, at their own expense.

Aside from the city ordinance, Harbor Industries also plans to follow through with a remedial action plan which will include the installation of more ground water monitoring wells between their site and Round Lake.

Conway said he foresees the ordinance being repealed once the level of contamination in the impacted area has dropped below drinking water criteria.

Sheriff's Office arrests two for breaking into vehicles

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office has arrested two area teens for Breaking and Entering vehicles in the Springbrook Hills Sub-division in Melrose Township on May 11.

A deputy sheriff began investigating the report of two vehicles which had been entered on May 11 during the early morning hours.

Deputy Sherry Sproul followed the suspect's footprints to a nearby residence where a party was being held by approximately six area youths. Recovery of a radar detector, CDs, tools, credit cards and the victim's wallet was made. The wallet was retrieved from a toilet where the suspects allegedly attempted to hide it.

Matthew A. Hanson and Robert P. Cunningham, both 18 years old, were arrested and have been charged by the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's Office with larceny from a motor vehicle, stealing/retaining credit cards and breaking and entering of a motor vehicle.

Bond has been set on Cunningham at $10,000 cash or surety and on Hansen at $20,000 cash or surety by a 90th District Court Magistrate.

Hansen had been released from jail on bond from an unrelated home invasion arrest.

The sheriff's office was assisted at the scene by the Michigan State Police Petoskey Post.

Soccer team finishes week with strong win

Charlevoix's varsity girls' soccer team went one for one last week beating Roseommon and falling to Elk Rapids — bringing their overall record to 8-6-1.

The Rayders hosted Roscommon May 16 and showed intensity with a 5 to 1 dominating victory.

Roscommon scored early on a defensive miscue by the Rayders to take a 1-0 lead. Then, Charlevoix fired up with three first half goals. Senior co-captain Danielle Vogelheim got the Rayders moving when she scored unassisted again on a corner. Madison made it 3-1 at the half with four seconds left when she sent a nice 20-yard shot into the back of the net off an assist by Shayna Drost.

Drost scored unassisted in the second half and Vogelheim made it 5-1 on a penalty shot granted when freshman Jaime Pettis was taken down in the box.

Blanchard made eight saves in goal for Charlevoix. Defensively, Charlevoix received excellent play from freshman Madison MeKenzie and Britini Whittaker, as well as junior Kelly Zimmerman, filling in for Murray at sweeper. Senior Ellissa Wood had her strongest game of the season at midfield.

The Rayders dropped a conference match May 14 at Elk Rapids 4 to 1.

"We came out flat against a motivated Elk Rapids team and paid for it," head coach Carol Madison, said.

Elk Rapids scored twice early, on rebounds, when the Rayders were unable to clear crossing passes.

Charlevoix showed some life early in the first half when Kate Madison scored on a long shot off a feed from Libby Withrow.

The Rayders had several opportunities in the second half, including two, open net shots off the cross bar, but were unable to capitalize. The Elks scored late in the half on a corner directly in the net and a late goal on a breakaway called on side.

Charlevoix managed 10 shots to the Elks' 15. Brooke Blanchard made 11 saves in goal.

"We need to play with more intensity, consistently, especially with our co-captain and all-state candidate Jayme Murray on the sideline with an ankle sprain," Madison said.

The team played at Big Rapids May 18 and at Houghton Lake May 20. Scores from those games were not in by press time.

Rayder's baseball team goes over the 500 mark

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

With three straight wins in Lake Miehigan Conference play, the Charlevoix Rayders' baseball squad moved over .500 in the league.

Charlevoix beat Boyne City, 4-2 on a dramatic three-run homer by Neil Friske and swept Harbor Springs, 10-1 and 16-1 with Matt Burtt picking up both pitching victories.

In non-conference action, the Rayders lost three games in a Traverse City tournament, falling to Class A Traverse City Central 4-0, Grandville 5-1 and South Haven 10-3.

Charlevoix is now 9-11 overall and 5-4 in conference action.

Against Boyne City to begin the week, Dennis Avery returned from a layoff since opening day due to a sore arm and stymied Ramhler hitters en route to the win. Avery struck out 11 and yielded only three hits and one walk in his six innings of work.

Charlevoix trailed 2-1 heading into the bottom of the fifth when Chris Loper singled, Rob Boss walked and Friske followed with a game-winning three-run shot.

Matt Kilkenny and Matt Kochanny each had two hits for the Rayders. Avery, Loper and Friske each had one. Game two against Boyne was not played due to rain.

Burtt, just recalled from the junior varsity squad, pitched the Rayders to a doubleheader sweep over Harbor Springs. Burtt pitched three perfect innings in the opener and pitched a five-inning complete game in the nightcap, giving up only one hit and one walk.

Charlevoix bats were hot, pounding out 26 hits in the twinbill. In the opener, Kilkenny, Nate Teuseher, Kochanny and Friske had two hits apiece. Both of Kilkenny's were doubles. Boss homered and Loper was impressive in his three innings on the mound, striking out eight in only three innings.

In the nightcap, Avery had three hits and four RBI to key the attack. Friske was 2 for 4 with a double, a homer and four RBI. Patriek Gowell had two hits and three RBI. Nate Teuscher also had two hits.

"We continue to hit the ball well," coach Brian Certa said. "We are very aggressive at the plate, which I like to see."

In the weekend tournament, the Rayders played poor defensively wasting good pitching outings and leading to three losses.

"Overall, the guys played well with the exception of the number of errors," Certa said. "We were aggressive and outhit our three opponents 25-18. I was also pleased with our pitching, especially freshman Jake Teuseher (7 IP, 0 ER vs. Grandville)."

Friske held Traverse City Central to only four hits in a complete game loss. The Rayders couldn't convert hits to runs as they had nine hits but were held scoreless.

Avery had three hits and Gowell and Boss added two each.

Against Grandville, six Charlevoix errors led to five unearned runs, spelling defeat for the Rayders. Nate Teuscher had two hits to lead the hitting. Charlevoix outhit Grandville, 6-5.

In the tournament finale, Charlevoix again had trouble putting runs on the board despite 11 hits in the loss to South Haven. Kilkenny was 3 for 3 while Gowell, Avery and Nate Teuscher had two hits apiece.

Softball team loses to Harbor in close games

The Charlevoix Rayders' softball team came up just short in a bid for its first conference victory this season, losing twice to Harbor Springs, 5-3 and 4-3.

In the opener, Natashia Kleiber, Jessica Pettis and Candaee Boss pounded two hits apiece to lead the Rayder hitting attack. Amanda Boss had one hit.

Krista Swenor had two hits in the nightcap while Kleiher and Pettis added one hit apiece.

Krystal Meredith took both tough losses on the mound.

"We played much better ball than we have been," coach Liz Gruneh said. "We hit a lot better."

The Rayders host Elk Rapids in a conference twinbill on May 23.

School, council agree to the small line size of this year, to inform the city of complications that could arise with the aforementioned portion of the line. Porter stated that waste would move through the 8 inch gravity sewer line, at one fourth of the recommended cleansing velocity.

He added that the line would either need daily or "at least" routine cleaning, or sewage solids would accumulate, decay and release hydrogen sulfide, "which dissolves concrete and causes odor problems."

The city responded to Porter's concerns by changing the design to a 4 inch force main for this portion of the line with an 8 inch pipe alongside it to be hooked into when demand grew.

The design then recently reverted back to the 8 inch pipe, which Wiesner said met the DEQ's requirements.

However, council's latest decision to approve the district's request, means that a portion of the pipe will be a 4 inch force main with no 8 inch pipe at all at that location.

In the school district's request to council for the change, Sturock addresses not only the relevance of Porter's recommendation, but also discusses pending litigation against the district and a contested permit that was issued by the DEQ.

"In both cases, if the 1,000 feet of 8 inch pipe were dropped from the project, we (the school district) believe this modification may address some of the issues presented in those matters," Sturock stated.

A lawsuit, which is currently pending in the Michigan Court of Appeals, claims the district's use of money from an $18.8 million new school construction bond passed by voters, to extend the city's sewer line, is unconstitutional.

The appellate court sent the case back to Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas, who dismissed the case on Sept. 14, 2001, requesting further review. Oral arguments in the case are scheduled to be heard before Pajtas at 10 a.m. June 7, at 301 State Street, in Charlevoix.

Both third ward council member Shirley Gibson and second ward councilman Gabe Campbell said they believe council should wait until after June 7 to make decisions about the project.

Those opposed to the extension who spoke at the meeting including Marion Township resident, Joseph Seidel, and city resident, Richard Tunison, agreed with Campbell and Gibson.

In an interview, Seidel explained that while the change order responds to Porter's concerns, those involved in the lawsuit and contested case aren't satisfied.

Seidel is a plaintiff in the contested DEQ permit and is one of six plaintiffs in the lawsuit.

He said, "The city's permit is still subject to a contested case hearing. There has been no final decision from the DEQ. And furthermore, there is still the question of school bond money being used to construct the sewer."

He explained that this part of the line may have been reduced to a 4 inch pipe but the rest of it, which spans about 4,000 feet, still has 8 inch capacity.

He said an 8 inch line is "excessive and will lend to sprawl, and residential and industrial development."

According to Charlevoix City Treasurer Rick Brandi, the 4 inch pipe to run 1,000 feet, near the school, has already been ordered so work could start May 21.

The city's project engineer, John Adams of the Ypsilanti based engineering firm, John Adams and Associates, requested the 8 inch pipe order be canceled and the school agreed to cover any cost that can't be eliminated for pipe that has already been shipped.

Rod & Gun Club to have 'Ladies Day' at the range

On Sunday, June 9, Charlevoix Rod & Gun Club and "Women on Target" will host it's second-annual "Ladies Day at the Range!"

This event is already proving just as successful as last year, where only 40 of the 140 registered women were unable to take part.

The success of these "all-women" shoots seems to be "ladies teaching ladies" where they are not intimidated, but relaxed and allowed to make mistakes. And learn from them.

Getting the much needed experience and confidence to make the women come back again and again to enjoy the shooting sports, is what this program is all about. Where else but beautiful northern Michigan could one totally relax in the outdoors, drink in nature and do something they surely will find they like to do?

Women/girls customarily rely on their husbands, brothers, fathers, etc. to encourage and help them if they show interest, but today, women are more apt to venture out on their own.

"We're allowing women to learn about firearms and lose their fear in a non-threatening atmosphere and see what this 'shooting sport' is all about.

"It's also been proven that women make better shooters because they concentrate harder," said Shirley Crozier, chairman of the event.

There is nothing dangerous about shooting sports unless you treat it that way.

Safety is stressed and strictly adhered to. Both eye and ear protection are required and strictly adhered to.

No more that 50 ladies in order to insure enough range time.

Details of the Ladies Day at the Range include learning about and shooting shotgun, rifle and hand gun, as you participate in trap, skeet, riflery and marksmanship.

Special guest and instructor, former FBI handgun instructor at Quantico FBI Academy, Phil Krum, will be there.

Something new this year, will be an advanced shooting class for those of you who qualify.

Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club now provides certified instructors in all areas, both male and female.

The Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club is three miles north of Charlevoix on US-31. The cost is $20 per person. Bring eye and ear protection if you have it. Firearms are provided.

If you bring your own firearms, they must remain in your car or the club until after all classes are completed at which time you will have the opportunity to shoot your own.

This is a pre-registered event.

To reserve space for this event, mail your check along with name, address and telephone number to: Shirley Crozier, 720 W. Crozier Road, Boyne City, MI 49712 or call (231) 582-7654 for further information.

Or visit the club's web site at www.charlevoixrodandgun.org.

Boys nabbed for theft of yard statues

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office has apprehended two 17-year-old boys from Charlevoix for stealing a small statue from a yard off Pearl Street in Charlevoix Township.

The owner of the statue, Dale Boss, witnessed the act at approximately 8:20 p.m., May 13. He followed the suspects and obtained a vehicle description.

Charlevoix City Police located the vehicle a short time later and stopped it.

The occupants were confronted by police and turned over to the sheriff's deputy. The statue was located on a dirt section of Pine Ridge Drive of Charlevoix Township.

Both suspects were cited for "larceny from a yard" and turned over to their parents.

Past Venetian Queens invited to luncheon

Venetian planners are seeking past Venetian Queens in an effort to recognize them at the Second Annual Venetian Queen Candidate's noon luncheon, June 19 at the Charlevoix Country Club.

Venetian Board President Dan Barron issued the request for former queens to call Venetian headquarters at 547-9950 to receive the complementary invitation and to be recognized at the luncheon.

Local media, present queen candidates and the public will also learn of the plans for this year's week long festivities.

The public is invited and reservations may be made by calling the Charlevoix Country Club at 547-9796.

STAFFEL

Vrå Folk School.

Staffel's work was introduced to northern Michigan when fellow artist and friend for over 40 years, Ed Gray, brought her work into the area.

According to Staffel, Gray saw her work at Reid Gallery in East Port — which is no longer there — and began to call and order pots from her. He featured her work in his Four Seasons Gallery in Traverse City.

Staffel said Gray was a metal sculptor before he began to get into pottery.

In the past 10 years, Staffel has taught Gray hand building and how to throw large pots. This instruction was given through in-person sessions and over the phone.

Staffel said her introduction to large pots occurred through Gray, who wanted to learn how to throw big pots for an art show he was invited to be a part of.

"I knew how to do it, but had never done it," she said.

In Jan. 2002, Staffel went and stayed with Gray for two weeks at his studio in Fennville. Both artists, according to Staffel, produced 14 pots in a two-and-a-half week period.

Staffel featured her work in 1960 at the Third Annual Artists and Craftsmen Waterfront Art Fair in Charlevoix. While she took part in this annual event for many years, she doesn't feature her work at this show anymore.

"I can't make enough to satisfy the demand," she said.

While her work can be enjoyed at the Ray Bier Art Gallery on US-31 South, just outside of Charlevoix, plan on more of Staffel's clay-made art in the years to come.

Staffel said she doesn't plan to quit her beloved art any time in the near future.

"As potter's age, they don't want to think of a time when they can't work with clay any longer," she said.

Sheriff's Office increases road patrol this weekend

This Memorial Day weekend, whether people are heading North or staying close to home, one thing is certain: All roads lead to enforcement of the state's safety belt law.

Motorists can expect law enforcement on freeways, highways and surface streets to boost safety belt use and drive down fatalities as part of the nationwide "Click it or Ticket" mobilization.

New this holiday weekend, Michigan State Police troopers will dedicate nearly 2,552 hours of overtime patrols to Michigan's highly traveled corridors, an effort that more than doubles troopers usual commitment to holiday overtime enforcement.

More than 450 law enforcement agencies in Michigan are taking part. Michigan's goal is to reach 88.5 percent safety belt compliance by the end of 2002.

"Safety belts save lives. Our emphasis this weekend will be unbuckled motorists," said George T. Lasater, Charlevoix County Sheriff.

Along with the heightened enforcement, staff at Michigan's 13 Welcome Centers and holiday Operation CARE rest stop volunteers will be wearing "Click it or Ticket" shirts this weekend.

age of the highs and lows. He said normals are collected over the years and are "long term averages."

The normals for this time of year, according to Bak are highs of 65 to 66 degrees and lows of 42 to 43 degrees.

But, Bak assured warm weather is on its way and the summer forecast isn't cloudy.

In July and early August, temperatures will be in the 80s with lows in the 50s, which are the normals for that time of year, he said.

"As of now, it looks like the summer will be pretty close to normal," Bak said.

At this point, according to Zoltowski, an El Niño is developing, but it shouldn't affect the summer weather.

"El Niño is an abnormal warming of the waters of the tropical pacific," Zoltowski said.

The impact of El Niño is usually felt in the fall and winter months and this coming winter may be warmer than normal, Zoltowski said.

"It's hard to guess at this point," he said.

Commissioners rack up hefty bill in just 46 days

BILL

Commission Chair Phil Johnson said of the bill, "They (commissioners on the Personnel Committee) had a right to be defended. We still maintain we did nothing wrong. There are reputations on the line."

Commissioner Smith said he does not know if the bill will be paid at this time. Smith personally spoke with Patterson several times.

"I think we were accused of a criminal act and being turned in. We needed attorney representation," he said of the commissioners' reasoning for talking with Patterson.

Smith added, "It is unfortunate that this has happened."

Commissioner Behling said the bill will probably be paid for by the county, "unless you can get the prosecuting attorney (Kur) to pay it."

Behling blamed Kur for the cost to the county because she reported the possible Open Meeting's Act violation to the attorney general's office and did not just tell the commissioners they were doing something wrong on March 6. He added, because he is chair of the Personnel Committee, he will take full responsibility if there was a violation of the act.

Behling also spoke with Patterson several times.

In a previous interview, Kur said she did not know the commissioners were meeting in an unposted session on March 6, until after they were done.

When asked why they went to Patterson, Behling said there was no one else to go to. Because Kur turned the committee in, they could not get her help. Since Patterson had done work for the county with labor issues, they went to him.

"When it got turned over, I guess everyone thought we should defend ourselves," he said.

Behling added the county commission will probably look at hiring a civil counsel in the future to avoid this sort of situation. He pointed out several other governmental bodies have their own civil counsel now.

"The way things are going in the public, there are a lot of things where the commission ought to have an attorney look at more," he said.

Behling added, "I am sorry all of this happened. I did not know until afterwards that it (the March 6 Personnel Committee meeting) was not posted. No one on the committee knew."

Smith said Charlevoix County Commission Chair Phil Johnson was the first to contact Patterson on this matter after a March 13 commission meeting, when Kur criticized them for the Personnel Committee's unposted meeting.

However, Johnson said that is not the case. He said he was brought into this matter later, when Patterson called him to get information.

Paperwork submitted to the county indicated Smith was the first commissioner to speak with Patterson on March 10 "regarding the personnel matter."

Patterson's discussions with the county started on March 6 when he spoke with Kur during telephone conference.

Smith could not be contacted for comment on this additional matter.

In response to the bill racked up by the commission, Kur said, "This is the local version of NBC News. Instead of 'Fleecing of America,' it's the 'Fleecing of Charlevoix County.'"

Lawsuit filed against Kur, Charlevoix County

LAWSUIT

7 and March 13 meetings, Kur falsely disparaged him for being a part of the meeting allegedly in violation of the Open Meetings Act. He also states Kur invited a reporter from a local paper to listen to an audio tape of the March 7 meeting.

Audio tapes of government meetings can be listened to by any member of the public.

Jarema claims these actions resulted in emotional distress, humiliation, mortification, embarrassment, sleeplessness, anxiety and lost earnings capacity.

In the third count, Jarema claims Kur violated his privacy by taking some personal effects from his desk and work computer, namely the calendar he alleges contained the alleged mismanagement information.

Kur has previously said she did nothing wrong with her firing of Jarema. During a county commissioners' meeting, she said that she had good reasons for terminating Jarema.

Touring the new school

Charlevoix Rotary Club members gave donors to the club's Reach for the Star's fund-raiser a tour of the new Charlevoix High School on Marion Center Road Saturday. The club is raising money for the school's new auditorium. In addition to seeing the work on the auditorium, (below left), the donors saw the new gym floor that was recently finished (left). The gym is surrounded by an indoor track, giving the many spring sports' teams a dry place to practice in the future. While the auditorium is still being constructed, plans show a new lighting system and an orchestra pit that raises to be level with the stage. The school is expected to open this August for the new school year. (Photos by Jeremy McBain)

Street woes for city

As of last week, Belvedere Avenue was still under construction. It was not expected to be finished on schedule. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Just before Memorial Day weekend, one of the busiest times of the year in Charlevoix, the city of Charlevoix was faced with the reality that its $1.4 million project on Michigan and Belvedere avenues wouldn't be done in time.

This is causing some major problems for the businesses on that street.

"It's devastated our business. They hit the gas line last night (May 22) and I couldn't open. The city hasn't offered to do anything. I've been giving away free desserts just to get people in here," Gary Anderson, owner of Grey Gables Inn and Restaurant on Belvedere Avenue, said.

Those who do make it to the restaurant, don't necessarily make it out.

City Mayor, Alvin "Butch" Russell told council May 20 that he had towed over 70 cars off the street that were stuck in the dirt/mud surface on Belvedere.

Anderson said he "thanks his lucky stars" for his parking lot off Alice Street, adjacent to the inn and restaurant, which accommodates about 20 cars. But, if the slow project pace continues, he said it could put him out of business.

According to project foreman, Warren Gordon, of CCMS and Associates, Inc., of Sault Saint Marie, the general contractor for the project, work will continue on both Michigan and Belvedere avenues for at least two weeks, beyond May 24 which was the completion date CCMS and the city agreed to.

Tragedy averted by alert trucker

A quick thinking cargo truck driver may have averted a tragic accident around 8 a.m., May 23 on US-31 North near Martin Road, according to the Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater.

The driver, Terry Lee Esch, 60, of Midland, was traveling north on US-31 when he noticed a white van backing onto the highway with a very small child at the driver's wheel. Lasater said Esch feared the van would go completely across the road and down an embankment or be struck by other vehicles, so he slowed his truck down and placed it between the van and an embankment.

The van came to rest against the driver's side door of the truck.

According to Lasater, the Charlevoix students help restock salmon

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Last week, eighth grade students at Charlevoix Middle School said a final farewell to 217 finned friends they have cared for since November.

This was the third time Charlevoix's eighth grade students have bid adieu to big schools of Chinook salmon.

The project started three years ago when the Charlevoix Area Trout Tournament donated an aquarium and a chiller to the school for a fish rearing science project, The Department of Natural Resources (DNR) Fishery Station, located by Michigan Beach in Charlevoix, has since contributed Chinook salmon eggs to the project and students have successfully raised three schools of fish from eggs to fingerlings.

"They learn about the cycle, from hatching eggs to smelting size. Plus, they get to see where the fish come from for the fishery, which in Michigan is a $1 billion industry and they get to have a hand in some of that," Paul Gelderblom, Charlevoix Middle School eighth grade science instructor and former Charlevoix DNR fishery employee, said.

The eggs, which arrived this year just after Thanksgiving, hatched three days later. Students measured and weighed the fish as they grew — from egg, to sac fry, to fry, to fingerlings.

Then, last week the science project was complete and it was time for the 217 maturing fish to make their way out of the aquarium and into the open water of Lake Michigan.

While two students loaded 40 fish into a cooler secured on a cart, Gelderblom checked the radar online. His weather review wasn't for the benefit of the fish, he said they're resilient and thrive in cold water, he wanted to make sure the students would be comfortable.

The report showed rain wasn't in the forecast and temperatures were in the 60s — meaning the project was a go. The class of over 20 trekked to the pier that horders the Pine River Channel, wheeling the fish with them, climbed down the rocks and dumped them in, 10 at a time.

After the fish had swam out in the lake, several students explained the "cool" new knowledge the slippery little guys brought.

Andy Kantola was surprised to find, "They (the salmon) only live to spawn and die."

Kantola's classmate, Emily Wright, added, "They come back to the same place to have babies."

The students are looking forward to some day coming back to where they released the fish to see how many made it to their final quest, spawning.

Another student, Aaron Hagen, said the project doesn't stop now that the fish are swimming free in Lake Michigan. He said they were micro-tagged by the DNR and now, "We get to see how big they grow, what they eat and where they go."

While the students carefully nurtured each fish, Gelderblom said they'll be lucky if 30 or 40 of them grow to adulthood.

But his fingers are crossed, because this year the fish grew larger than in the past two years and their size increases their chance of survival.

According to Dave Juilleret, president of the Charlevoix Area Trout Tournament, proceeds from the June 7, 8 and 9 tournament help pay for the Charlevoix program. The tournament club has also started the same fish program in East Jordan, Boyne City and Petoskey middle schools. They are hoping to expand into Harhor Springs next year.

"We're trying to get kids interested in the environment as a whole," he said.

Operation Petunia is Charlevoix at its best

EDITORIAL

It's that time of year again when the flowers are planted along Bridge Street.

Starting at 5 p.m., Thursday, Charlevoix residents will gather to participate in the annual "Operation Petunia," an event sponsored by the group Keep Charlevoix Beautiful since 1982. Residents use this time to plant colorful little petunias along both sides of Bridge Street from one end of the city to the other.

This event helps Charlevoix live up to its nickname, "The Beautiful" as visitors to the city are greeted by flowers on both sides of the road, kind of like a rainbow colored runway to the downtown area from both the north and south.

This year, there will be 60,000 of the little plants beautifying the city, at a cost of $11,000 to Keep Charlevoix Beautiful. In addition, the plants will once again be watered throughout the summer by Dale and Marilyn Boss in the famous Keep Charlevoix Beautiful Watering Truck.

But, this event is more than just a way to make the city pretty. This event is a bonding experience for the residents of Charlevoix. For at least one day, if not a few hours, we all agree.

While Charlevoix has many controversial issues throughout the year that split people apart, Operation Petunia brings people together in a common cause. Neighbors who have argued all year — sometimes in very nasty tones — can be seen smiling as they kneel side-by-side to plant petunias along the street.

We would like to congratulate Keep Charlevoix Beautiful for creating such a successful event for the community. This group should be praised for helping to not only beautify the city, but also for building camaraderie among the residents.

If you would like to help out, just come on down to Bridge Street on Thursday. Block captains, dressed in orange vests, can answer all of your questions. Having fun will just come naturally.

Crooked Tree exhibit to feature work of Cole

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

Charlevoix residents and car buffs will have a genuine, warm interest in viewing the June exhibit at the Crooked Tree Arts Center titled, "The Illustrative Spirit of Fred Cole."

Of special appeal, along with Cole's watercolor, ink and charcoal drawings, viewers will find a portfolio of Fred Cole's early 1934 automobile advertisements for Packard, (ask the man who owns one) Jordan, Marmon, La Salle, Chrysler, up to the more recent popular Corvette.

Best known as an illustrator of automobile advertisements, Cole's "Somewhere West of Laramie," is arguably the most influential advertisement ever created! His scenes of the American west call to mind the work of Remington, another commercial/fine artist. When during the 1960s, advertising art became virtually all photographic, Cole decided it was time to retire in his Birmingham home.

The collection of 32 paintings of western and outdoor scenes, including early logging and seascapes, are now owned by daughter in-law, Betty Cole, who was born and raised in Charlevoix.

She graduated from Charlevoix High in 1937. Old-timers may remember her father, P.R. Ross, and her mother Phoebe, who ran the dining room at the Belvedere Golf Club for many years. Betty tells me that this current exhibit of her father-in-law's work is a dream come true!

Fred Cole was born in Chicago in 1893; he studied painting at the Chicago Art Institute during 1915-16. His anatomy class was given at Michael Reese Hospital and was so thorough that he never again had to use a model for his human illustrations.

During World War I, he enlisted in the army and was sent overseas with the 86th Division. When the Armistice was declared, he briefly stayed in Europe and taught commercial art in Bordeaux, France. Some of the work from this period, scenes of southern France and Spain, will be seen in the current show. These include paintings of whiskey distilleries and German wine and beer advertisements.

After returning to Chicago in 1920, Cole worked for an advertising agency that specialized in automobile ads. He was urged to move to Detroit in 1928 and set up his own studio on the seventh floor of the General Motors Building.

In conjunction with this reflective show of paintings, visitors will find another exhibit called "Northern Lights," contemporary work by professional, well-known Michigan glass blowers. A variety of hand blown glass sculptures and abstract neon lights examples will be seen in the varied works of these established artists, whose work is now in private and corporate collections.

Exhibitors include Lynn Dee Dinning, Rick Shapero, John Stevens, Harry Boyer and the team of Beth Cox-Chuck Pritchard.

Whether one is looking for something old or something new, the opening of both exhibits from 5 to 7 p.m. on May 31 at the Crooked Tree Arts Center in Petoskey, is bound to have special appeal for everyone. This dual show may be viewed the entire month of June.

Rainbow Shoppe anniversary

Editor:

Friday, June 7, will mark the nineteenth anniversary of the non-profit Rainbow Shoppe. And what a 19 years it has been. The first location was at 115 Antrim Street, but within two years the store was busting at its seams and moved to where it operates to this day at 1 Van Pelt Place.

It is true that you can find almost anything at the Rainbow Shoppe. If you are looking for clothes, this is the place to be. The kids will always find a toy or book that they can't live without and won't let you out of the store until they have it in hand. Furniture, sporting goods, and many other items are waiting for you to stop by and snatch up.

Over the years many people in the community have volunteered as a board member or at the Shoppe itself. They have grown from one paid employee and seven volunteers to over nine employees and close to 200 volunteers. The goal is to minister in the lives of others. For 19 years that goal has been reached in a way that honors those that work there. We thank them for their dedication.

But, they thank those of you who donate items and those of you who buy items. Because it is your generous contributions that have helped the Rainbow Shoppe make such an impact on the lives of our neighbors.

Thank you

Editor:

The 10th Annual Letter Carriers Food Drive was on May 11. The Charlevoix Community was most generous in contributing.

Under the direction of Kelly Morris, NALC (National Association of Letter Carriers) the Boy Scouts of Troop 6 with their leaders Carl Shuttler and Jeff Riley and Troop 11 with their leaders, Jim Smith and Tim May, helped collect the food and transported it to the Charlevoix Food Pantry. Dave Fowler and Woody Wilson received the food and the scouts helped sort and place on the shelves. Nearly 4 tons of food was received.

The 17 Boy Scouts were treated to pizza and a soft drink for their efforts. A good time was had by all and what a great way to help "stamp out hunger."

Many thanks to all who helped.

Clean up buildings

Editor:

How long do residents and visitors of Charlevoix have to look at burned-out buildings? The remains of a lumber yard and motel are unsightly as you enter the city from the south (US-31). Doesn't Charlevoix have a blight law? Maybe the "city fathers" are hiding behind their sign ordinance and blocking their view!

Richard L. Weidinger
Ellsworth

(Editor's note: The "lumber yard" in question was a manufacturing facility. It is located in Charlevoix Township, not the city of Charlevoix. The motel, Silverbirch Motel, is located in the city.)

Thank you

Editor:

Heartfelt thanks are extended to the Rod and Gun Club, the many supporters, sponsors and shooters for all you have given to make the "Jigs Memorial Shoot" possible. Our family is so appreciative to all of you. The time and effort Jigs once gave to the club has now come back to help us; and I know he would be so pleased! Special thanks to Kim Jones, whose grand efforts make all this possible. You are some lady! There were so many who gave so much! Thank you all!

Letter response

Editor:

I would like to respond to the recent letter by Barney and Dawson Way on the wind turbine generators.

They state, "...we are totally dependent on downstate power plants." We are not totally dependent on downstate power. There are generating facilities in Cadillac, Grayling, Gaylord, Hillman, McBain, Alpena, and Mackinaw City; and probably more. Furthermore, transmission systems instantly deliver power, whether it is produced in my backyard or some remote area. Northern Michigan is not short for electric power.

They state, "Everyone is in favor of wind turbine generators, but NIMBY is taking place of sound judgment." The studies I read show WTG's have one of the highest rates of "NIMBY-ism" (not in my back yard).

I am one of the back yard folks. A December 2001, Bay Winds proposal described these wind turbine generators as "mounted on an 80 meter (262 feet) high (tower)... The rotor blades will be approximately 80 meters (262 feet) in diameter and extend (the total height of the wind turbine generator) to 120 meters (392 feet) above ground level." One of the wind turbine generators would be 800 feet from my home. This is just too close. Such a tower will be struck by lightning sooner or later. Blade tips travel 100 to 200 miles per hour and they can throw ice several hundred feet. My house is within striking distance. Does a person with sound judgment want that in their back yard?

Because wind turbine generator's have this NIMBY problem, my property value will be affected. Fewer buyers would be willing to live near the turbines and this will reduce the competition and selling price for my home. Does a person with sound judgment want to lower their property values?

Consider this: The turbine blades alone are bigger than a jumbo jet. Big Rock's stack is 240 feet tall. Imagine a jumbo jet on top of Big Rock's stack rotating 15 times a minute. Put that 800 feet from your home. Does a person with sound judgment choose such a neighbor?

They state, "The road frontage on our property is three miles with 10 houses that are 1500 feet apart." Eight homes are located on Brock Road in the mile between Shaw and Ferry; home spacing here is closer to 700 feet. Regardless, road frontage has little bearing on turbine proximity to residential housing. The site guidelines I have read suggest a setback of 1/4 to 1/2 mile. I conclude the Brock Road site is not suitable for a wind turbine generator farm and current Eveline Township ordinance was neither carefully nor meticulously considered as you suggest. I thank our township board for reconsidering this ordinance.

Basketball town

Editor:

I attend Charlevoix Middle School. I want to convince you that basketball is our favorite town sport.

First, one of the biggest influences is the people. One reason is at almost every game the stands are full. When you're downtown and at school, people have their face painted and their hair in maroon and white ribbons.

Another reason is that the whole community tries to contribute to the team. For example, you see a lot more T-shirts and sweaters being made. People and businesses are putting up flags and painting their windows with creative sayings.

Most of all there are pictures and paragraphs in the newspaper about the basketball team.

Finally, people say many things or ask questions about the team. Some people say Charlevoix has the best team ever! Others say that Charlevoix is going all the way to the finals, again!

Sometimes, kids like to ask their friends, "Are you going to the game?" Also, they like to ask, "Do you think the team is going to win tonight." Most of the time people say "Yes."

I hope from these reasons I have convinced you that basketball is our favorite town sport.

Kids get own college courses

Do you know any second through eighth graders interested in archaeology? Or in learning how to draw cartoons? Or perhaps they're attracted to investigating the how's and why's of science and engineering?

If so, they should explore these fun classes and loads of others at the 2002 College for Kids June 18-26.

Sponsored by Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, College for Kids recognizes that talents exist in a variety of areas. The classes offered are designed to help students study a particular subject or field of interest in greater depth and at a faster pace than their regular classroom.

Registration deadline for the classes is June 3. A full brochure and registration form have been distributed to area schools or is available by calling Char-Em ISD at 547-9947. All classes take place from 1-4 p.m. at North Central Michigan College.

Lake levels expected to rise this summer

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff Writer

While Great Lakes water levels have been dropping for the past few years, causing some concern, relief may be on the way.

Jeffrey Oyler, Great Lakes manager of the National Ocean Service, said the water level of the Great Lakes are expected to rise this summer.

The water level for Lakes Michigan-Huron are 5 inches above the water level last month, according to information provided by Oyler.

Information from Oyler also shows the water levels are 9 inches above the water level last year at this time. Plus, the water level is predicted to rise 3 inches by June 24.

But this doesn't mean the depth issue is over, as boats are still having problems navigating through some shallow areas of the Great Lakes and its river systems, most notably near Detroit where the government is currently dredging.

Lakes Michigan-Huron are 42 inches below the highest level recorded for the month of May in 1986 and 19 inches above the lowest level recorded for May in 1964.

And, Oyler said, since this winter wasn't as harsh as years past, the lack of melting snow has caused less water to flow into the Great Lakes Basin. He also said "seasonal fluctuation" causes the water levels to rise and fall.

According to information provided by Oyler, the water levels of Lakes Michigan-Huron are 13 inches below the long-term average. The long-term average is the normal water level for this time of year and is calculated by using information from 1918 with the present according to Oyler.

Information from the National Oceanographic Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) in the United States is combined with information provided by the Canadian Hydrographic Service to produce the long-term average and other information, Oyler said.

Documents from Oyler indicated Lakes Michigan-Huron is 8 inches above Low Water Datum. Low Water Datum or Chart Datum is a depth that water levels can be referred to in order to determine if the water level has risen, lowered or stayed constant.

For more information about the water level of the Great Lakes visit www.glakesonline.nos.noaa.gov, which is designed to provide up to date information about the current water depth.

Local girl to tour with Blue Lake

> "I didn't want people to make a big deal out of it and fuss over me."
> Kristy Trudeau,
> On her reaction to being named to the Blue Lake Band

Kristy Trudeau, a sophomore at Northwest Academy in Charlevoix is one of nine young, Michigan flutists touring Europe this summer with the Blue Lake International Symphony Band.

The band, under the direction of Penny Daab, will depart for Europe June 16 and will perform in France, Germany, Luxembourg, Denmark and the Netherlands. Accompanying them and serving as chaperones will be counselors from Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp. The musicians will stay with host families in each country and, between performances, have time to sight-see and make new friends.

Trudeau said she was in shock when she learned she had been selected to perform with the band, because the competition had been stiff. From a total of 1,300 musicians ages 12 to 18 attending last summer's Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp, only a small fraction passed the audition process and were invited to join the camp's prestigious 89-member symphony band.

For her audition, Trudeau played a lyrical flute solo entitled, "Enchanted Isle" by McCaughey. In addition to playing very well, she displayed the required qualities of maturity and self-responsibility the Blue Lake Music Camp judges look for in students they select for the summer European tour.

Needless to see, Trudeau's parents, Art and Shawn Trudeau are very proud of their talented daughter.

Trudeau said at first she didn't tell anyone she would be performing in Europe this summer, because as she put it, "I didn't want people to make a big deal out of it and fuss over me."

However, with rehearsals underway and the departure date drawing near, the word is out and excitement is building in the Trudeau household.

After returning to Michigan on July 8, the Blue Lake International Symphony Band will leave town again, this time for a three day mini tour in Indiana starting July 22. The young musicians will complete their summer together with a final symphony concert at the Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp, located in Michigan's National Forest on July 24.

For more information about the Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp, call (800) 221-3796 or visit www.bluelake.org.

What happend to hovercraft in Charlevoix area ?

Q: What ever happened to the plan to create a hovercraft service from the Charlevoix area to Chicago that was started last summer?

A: According to Dave Smith, who is trying to start this new service with partner Dave Daly, the project is being held up by politics. Smith said he and his partner were told they could use Megg's Field in Chicago as a landing site for their passenger hovercraft last year by the city's mayor. However, the governor of Illinois overruled that decision. Therefore, Smith and Daly are still waiting to see what happens politically.

Smith added he is also having some problems securing financing for the project, due to the current economic situation of the country.

Why is that ?

Commission approves payment of bill

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix County Commission has agreed to pay the $12,474.90 bill it received from Grand Rapids Attorney Peter Patterson for his work with them regarding a alleged violation of the state Open Meeting's Act.

In a 5-1 decision, the commission voted to approve using taxpayer money to pay the bill at its regular meeting May 22. Commissioner Victor Patrick voted against the proposal.

Patrick said he did not support paying the bill, because the commissioners involved in the matter were seeking attorney representation when there are no charges against them.

"In the 40 years of (my) being a police officer, I only know of two times someone hired an attorney before being charged. And both of those were murders," he said.

Patrick added, "Other than that, the thing that bothers me is if some poor county employee cost the county 12,000 bucks for nothing, they would be out on the street."

Patterson billed the county for his work with three commissioners in regards to allegations they violated the Michigan Open Meetings Act with an unposted March 6 Personnel Committee meeting. Commissioners on that committee are: Don Smith, Jim Behling and Carl Price.

The committee members were meeting with John Jarema, who was recently terminated from his position as Chief Assistant County Prosecutor by County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur.

Kur reported the unposted meeting to the Michigan State Attorney General's Office.

Patterson mostly spoke with these commissioners about this matter and with Commission Chair Phil Johnson and Kur on the telephone. The county was charged $225 an hour for this service. Patterson has worked with the county on labor issues since the 1970s.

Patrick said, if it came down to the county needing to hire an attorney for this matter, there are many local attorneys who have more experience in Open Meeting Act law, rather than a downstate attorney the county uses for labor matters.

As for this whole issue of the unposted Personnel Committee meeting, Patrick said, "People got involved in other areas they had no business being in, that is what it amounts to."

Johnson said the commission's reason for paying the bill was because there was nothing else they could do.

"We had run it up, so it had to be paid," he said. "We did it and its over and done with."

Will treatment plant need expansion?

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The city of Charlevoix is studying the impact possible sewer extensions north of the city would have on the city's wastewater treatment plant, which may mean an expansion is on the horizon.

In a memo written by City Manager Mike Wiesner to Charlevoix City Council, he states, "Obviously, we have to move cautiously and have a plan in place on how we can serve this potential future additional flow into the city's sewer system."

On May 6, council unanimously approved engineering costs of $34,600 associated with studying three possible sewer extensions into Charlevoix and Hayes townships. They are: Pine Point in Charlevoix Township, the Lange development in Charlevoix and Hayes townships and other areas in Hayes Township

The decision extends the city's contract with John Adams and Associates, Inc., the Ypsilanti engineering firm that designed the Marion Center Road extension.

City Treasurer Rick Brandi explained the study is an effort by the city to make sure its wastewater treatment plant has the capacity to serve the potential large number of hook ups.

The city currently services an estimated 2,500 residential equivalent units (REUs). It has estimated the REU requirement for the three areas being studied to fall between 2,500 and 3,000 REUs, doubling its service size.

In 2001, the sewer plant brought in an average of 499,000 gallons of waste water each day. The facility's maximum capacity is 1 million gallons of water each day.

If doubling the REUs means the plant's intake will double, the plant will be just under capacity and on peak flow days, when the average intake is 681,000 gallons of waste water, it would be over capacity. This means the study may find that to service the three sites, the treatment plant will have to expand.

One of the studies will focus on the possibility of extending city sewer to a large development proposed by Dorian Lange, president of Lange Limited in Eaton Rapids, for the north side of Charlevoix Township and a portion of Hayes Township.

The Lange study will include a review and projection as to what the impact on the city sewer system would be if a line were used at the proposed Planned Unit Development.

Lange development plans, on file with Hayes Township clerk, Ethel Knepp, depict construction of several major facilities in the Boyne City/Charlevoix Road area and fronting part of US-31 North. The buildings include: a grocery store, retail outlets, a 54-unit hotel and a senior housing complex.

Each piece in the development plan must be individually approved by the township board where it will be constructed.

As of May 22, the only approval granted was by Hayes Township for the hotel and no other requests had been filed in either township.

In a separate study, Adams will review and give engineering direction concerning a city extension, to Lange. Brandi explained this review will answer questions such as: can the city serve the site and where the service will come from, either the C & O Club or the north side sewer that services the Charlevoix Country Club?

He added that the additional review will cost $9,000 and will be paid by the developer.

The Adams group will also study the future impact on the city sewer system that will result from a probable city extension to Pine Point, a Charlevoix Township subdivision with between 40 and 50 homes, located off Boyne City/Charlevoix Road.

Adams is currently reviewing engineering for the Pine Point line drafted by Gosling and Czubak of Traverse City. Brandi said the $5,000 review cost will be paid for by residents of Pine Point.

Also to be studied are areas defined by the Hayes Township Board as optimal locations for potential city sewer service in the township.

According to Tim Boyko, Hayes Township Supervisor, one year ago, the board discussed areas of future potential growth, pinpointing "main arteries" like Boyne City/Charlevoix Road and US-31 North.

The city approached Hayes Township and asked if it was interested in participating in its long range planning. Boyko described the board's conclusion to move ahead with the study, as a planning tool.

City manager Mike Wiesner stipulated to council in a memo, before it made a decision that the impact study, which will focus on the burden placed on the city's system if it extends the sewer to the Lange development along Hayes Township's "arteries" and to Pine Point, will be paid for by the city at a maximum cost of $34,600.

Brandi said this cost would come from the North Side Sewer Fund.

Charlevoix grad named Fulbright grantee

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

> "I know it will be a challenging and incredible experience, but I am not really afraid."
> Katie Golski,
> On her trip to South Korea

This spring, Katie Golski, 22, of Charlevoix was awarded a coveted Fulbright Scholarship by the United States Department of State Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs.

Golski is a 1998 graduate of Charlevoix High School and is no stranger to esteemed scholarships.

She was accepted to the University of Michigan, where she attended college and earned her Bachelor of Arts in Linguistics and graduated with honors on April 27. Her tuition for all four years was paid for by the Julius Gilbert Memorial Scholarship Fund through the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

But, while the Gilbert Scholarship kept her in the United States, on July 6, the Fulbright Scholarship will send her on a cultural journey to South Korea, where she'll teach English for 13 months.

"I know it will be challenging and an incredible experience, but I'm not really afraid, I'm looking forward to it. I'm honored to have been chosen to experience another culture and another part of the world and to learn another language," Golski said.

According to the scholarship's web site, www.exchanges.state.gov, the Fulbright program was established in 1946 under legislation introduced by former Senator J. William Fulbright of Arkansas. It is an international education program sponsored by the U.S. government which, since its inception, has provided more than 250,000 participants the opportunity to explore cultural realties of 140 surrounding countries.

Golski is one of only 4,500 people across the globe to be chosen for this esteemed honor.

The political situation that has resulted since the war on terrorism was mounted by the United States in September of 2001, hasn't swayed her drive to take advantage of the Fulbright opportunity. But, she realizes the entire region isn't hospitable.

"I couldn't go to North Korea right now," she said.

However, South Korea operates under a democratic government and is a U.S. ally.

She called home Sept. 9, 2001 to tell her parents, Charlevoix residents Harry and Anne Golski, she was applying for the scholarship.

"Then two days later the attacks happened and it was a definite no way. But I sent the application in anyway and I heard back this spring," she said. "I was so excited about it and they became excited for me."

Golski isn't afraid to immerse herself in a new culture or a new job. She prepped for the culture shock last year, when she spent her junior year studying at the University of Sevilla in Spain, through University of Michigan. There, she mastered Spanish and started her exploration of cultural immersion, language acquisition and foreign language instruction.

In fact, her European experiences made her crave more exploration.

When she returned from Spain in July of 2001 she attended a Fulbright meeting and initially thought she wanted to return to Spain. But education, the academic concentration she was looking to focus on, wasn't offered there.

Fulbright did however offer education in eight other countries including European des-

Warm dirt means it's play time

Golski to teach in South Korea

tinations like Turkey, France and Germany. But Golski decided she was ready to venture out of Europe and chose South Korea instead.

She currently speaks limited Korean and will spend her first six weeks in South Korea, with 31 other Fulbright honorees, at a university studying the language and culture.

Then she'll be off to stay with a South Korean family for a year, while she teaches at a middle or high school. She said there is a possibility her students will be experiencing English with her for the first time in their lives.

Golski is currently getting her feet wet in the world of instruction by substitute teaching at Charlevoix High School and Charlevoix Middle School. She is also picking up some part-time hours at Don's IGA on the north side of Charlevoix.

She has also been talking with Korean friends and professors from the University of Michigan who have let her in on all the interesting cultural differences like the South Korean custom of eating spicy food for breakfast and sleeping on floor mat beds.

The congressional appropriation for the Fulbright Program in the fiscal year 2002 is $119 million. Golski's plane ticket, university orientation, room, board and spending money are all provided through this funding.

Charlevoix's future artists show off their colorful work

County Humane Society on the internet

Homeless pets at Charlevoix County Humane Society in Boyne City now have more byte.

The animal welfare organization has joined others in the state as a member of Petfinder.com, the largest and oldest virtual animal shelter. The website represents about 65,000 homeless animals at any one time in more than 3,500 shelters and rescue groups nationwide and in Canada.

Potential adopters can extend their search beyond the local area by entering search criteria on the Petfinder home page. The computer generates a list of potential pets, ranked by proximity to the visitor's zip code.

All that's left to do is click on the animal's name for more information. Each shelter or rescue group handles its own adoptions. Petfinder.com facilitated over .5 million adoptions last year alone.

And now, Petfinder.com has taken some of the uncertainty out of adopting a pet. Every dog or cat adopted from a Petfinder.com member shelter or rescue group in the state is eligible for a gift of the first two months of ShelterCare pet health insurance, paid for by Petfinder.com. The ShelterCare program is owned by Pethealth, Inc., which also owns the Pet-Care Pet Insurance programs.

The ShelterCare program is the first of its kind. While pet insurance has been available privately, never before has a plan been developed to fit the specific needs of pets as they make the transition from homelessness to family.

"We hope that the gift will add to the rewards for adopting a shelter pet, the greatest of which, of course, is unconditional love," Betsy Paul, president and co-founder of Petfinder.com said.

Petfinder.com has partnered with the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (ASPCA) for shelter outreach. The ASPCA also provides an extensive library on the site, giving pet owners a one-stop resource for pet related issues.

Thanks to its sponsors, Petfinder.com is free to potential adopters and to shelters and rescue groups.

Coast Guard offers boating safety tips

Memorial Day weekend kicked off the boating season for many, so the United States Coast Guard would like to remind boaters to have fun and play it safe.

- Wear the proper life jacket for the water you are in. Drowning is the leading cause of death in boating accidents, but in cold water a regular lifejacket is not enough to save you. You need to be wearing an exposure suit if you want to survive falling overboard in cold water.

- Have a portable, waterproof marine band radio. The United States Coast Guard, other rescue agencies and other boaters monitor marine band radios, which increases the number of people who can respond. The radios are better than cellular phones because their signals can be of assistance in locating a person in distress.

- Check the weather on your TV, radio, internet or by calling the National Weather Service. Weather information is also available on marine band radios. Be aware of changes in the sky, wind and water and head to shore when the weather starts to turn bad.

- Don't drink and boat, alcohol contributes to more than 50 percent of boating accidents and 22 percent of boating fatalities.

- File a float plan before you go out by leaving information about your trip with a family member or friend who is staying on shore. Include all information that would help rescuers in case of an emergency. The information should include how many people are on board, where you are going, how long will you be out and a description of your boat. Do not file float plans with the Coast Guard.

Take a boater's safety course because almost 90 percent of deaths occur on boats where the operator had no formal boating safety instruction. The United States Coast Guard recommends that all boaters take a safety class and refresher every five years.

For more information about boater safety courses call (800) 336-2628.

Scholarships awarded to junior golfers

The Charlevoix Junior Golf Association recently approved six students for a scholarship at the week-long golf camp at Ferris State University.

Over 20 highly qualified young golfers applied for the scholarships, but approval was given to award the scholarships to: Scott McFalls, Kyle Smith, Ryan Graham, Connor Louiselle, Matthew Novotny and Emily Yager.

Each will attend one of the six sessions offered throughout the summer on the Ferris campus. The six brings the total to 46 area youngsters who have attended the prestigious golf camp.

In additional business, two items stood out.

The first was the need for the Junior Golf Association to support the creation of a varsity girls' golf team at Charlevoix High School. The board agreed to work toward having the junior golf fund-raiser, the Supe Classic, designate a portion of the revenue raised toward providing "seed money" for the school system to begin planning for a girls' team.

The second item was the need for the city of Charlevoix to expand and improve the golf teaching/practice stations at the Municipal Course. The board agrees to also designate Supe funds to be used for this.

The board also passed a resolution acknowledging the fundraising efforts of Belvedere teaching professional and longtime Junior Golf instructor, Steve Braun, for his efforts in playing 100 holes in a single day and again contributing the revenue raised to the Junior Golf program.

Registration for area golfers, 8-17 years of age, interested in being part of this year's program, will take place June 13 at the Charlevoix Municipal Course. Parents or guardians must attend this orientation session to sign documents and learn of program details. Children 12-17 years old will register at 1:15 p.m., while 8-11 year olds will register at 2 p.m.

For information, call the course at 547-3268.

Truck driver keeps children out of harm

ACCIDENT

owner of the van, Jennifer Oliver, 23 of Charlevoix, had left the vehicle running with four children inside as she took her daughter into the Headstart Building on US-31, near Martin Road.

One of the children, Prestyn Seese, who will be 2 years old in June, got into the driver's seat and put the vehicle in reverse. The other passengers in the van were: Austyn Oliver, 2, Brendyn Oliver, 8 months, Hayden Prevo, 8 months and Nicole Gibson, 3.

None of the children were hurt.

Jennifer said she usually does not leave her van unattended when it is running, but was not thinking of it when she ran her daughter into the Headstart Building that day.

She said when she ran over to the van after the accident, Seese, who is her nephew, was still sitting in the driver's seat with a "happy go lucky" look on his face.

Lasater and Jennifer would like to give recognition to the clear thinking and response made by Esch. The cargo truck driver recognized a problem and placed his vehicle in a position so that the least amount of damage and injury would occur, Lasater said.

Jennifer said she will be contacting Esch to send him a thank you card.

Lasater added he would like to remind parents and adults caring for children to not leave children unattended in vehicles that have the engine running or the keys in the vehicle.

Track team takes sixth in state final

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix High School boys' track team took sixth place in the state meet last weekend, using great efforts by every one of its players.

But, this finish only came after a questionable disqualification of Gordie Selph in the one mile run. According to judges, Selph ran on the inside white line of the track. However, there were cones on this line, making it difficult to do so.

"We don't know how it happened, but they disqualified him after he won the mile," coach Ken Plude said.

Overall, Plude said the meet was a great team effort.

"It was a lot of fun and good experience for the whole team, especially for the guys that aren't the paper stars. They got the opportunity to really help their team," he said.

Charlevoix's final score was 728. Williamston took first with a score of 978.

Individual results for the meet were:

- 3200 meter relay — Charlevoix took second place with a time of 8 minutes, 17.3 seconds. The team was composed of Peter Gorkiewicz, Todd Carey, Brian Christiansen and Tim Daining.

- 400 meter relay — Charlevoix took fifth place with a time of 46.4 seconds. The team was composed of Rusty Walters, Urban, Spencer Bryan and Kyle Kramer.
- 300 hurdles — Selph in fourth with a time of 41.8 seconds; Will Barrett in twenty-third with a time of 46.8 seconds; Bryan in twenty-ninth.
- 800 meter — Selph in second with a time of 1 minute, 59.7 seconds; Gorkiewicz in sixth with a time of 2 minutes, 5.4 seconds; Daining in seventh with a time of 2 minutes, 6.2 seconds.
- 200 meter — Urban in ninth with a time of 24.1 seconds; Kramer in sixteenth with a time of 24.5 seconds; Walters in twenty-first with a time of 25 seconds.
- 3200 meter — Selph in third with a time of 10 minutes, 8 seconds; Daining in seventh with a time of 10 minutes, 26 seconds; Popenhagen in twelfth with a time of 10 minutes, 37 seconds.

Soccer team shuts out Boyne, falls to Houghton

The varsity girls' Rayder soccer team shut out Boyne City in a 9-0 blowout and fell to Houghton Lake 3-2 last week.

In the Houghton Lake game, the Rayders dominated in every way but the most important, in dropping the conference match.

The Bobcats scored first on a breakaway three minutes into the game.

Charlevoix answered when senior co-captain Danielle Vogelheim sent a nice cross to Shayna Drost who scored on a breakaway.

The Rayders took a 2-0 lead on a direct corner by Kate Madison. Houghton answered on a misplayed ball in front of the Rayders net to keep the score 2-2 at the half.

Charlevoix dominated the second half play and managed a total of 25 shots to 13 for Houghton Lake for the game. With the play consistently in the Houghton Lake defensive end, Charlevoix was unable to find the net and the Houghton Lake keeper made some nice saves. With the Rayders pressed up to score, Houghton Lake cleared a long ball through with 20 seconds left in the game and scored on a breakaway.

The Rayders' freshman trio, Madison McKenzie, Sarah Cross and Jaime Pettis played strong games throughout.

Vogelheim led the Rayders against Boyne City, with four goals and an assist. Vogelheim achieved a milestone by setting a new career scoring record for Charlevoix girls soccer in her final game at Kipke Field.

With districts remaining, Vogelheim has 46 career goals and 10 assists. Four of Charlevoix's seniors got into the action as Madison scored two goals and an assist, Libby Withrow had a goal and Elissa Wood took two assists.

Senior co-captain, Jayme Murray rested her injured ankle to get ready for the playoffs. Sophomores Shayna Drost and Allysia McDonough each tallied a goal, while other assists were gained by Kelly Zimmerman, two from freshman Jaime Pettis and Drost.

Brooke Blanchard earned the shutout in goal with three saves. Freshman defenders Cross, Brittni Whittaker and Madison McKenzie also had strong games.

Charlevoix traveled to Harbor Springs to open district play against the heralded Rams May 28, ending the regular season at 9-8-1 overall and 5-5-1 in conference play. Results of that match were unavailable before press time.

MAY 2002

Belvedere Avenue will not be done in time

STREET

"I've been doing this for 18 years and have never quit on a job. I want to see this through. I'm putting the heat on. I was worried, believe me, but we've got it under control. I can see where the city and the people were unhappy," he said.

According to city street superintendent, John Martin, the delay is the fault of CCMS and the city has the right to charge the contractor $500 for every day the project runs over.

Martin said as of May 23, CCMS had not filed for an extension and he was unsure whether the city would levy the penalty. Gordon said the company did plan to ask the city for an extension.

Martin told Charlevoix City Council at its May 20 meeting he's ready to pull the rug out from under CCMS and start with a new general contractor. But his hands are tied.

"We could stop the project tomorrow, but if we did, it would probably be that way all summer long," he explained.

City Attorney Jim Young informed council the city has the right to terminate the contract and re-bid the project, but as Martin said, it would likely cause a delay.

Martin further explained to council that CCMS wasn't paying its subcontractors and material providers, so materials and workers weren't on schedule.

On May 23 concrete that was scheduled to arrive, didn't.

Other delays Gordon spoke of included unforeseen extras along Belvedere Avenue, including sewer leads and water service for residents.

Belvedere resident John Winn added the company has also caused itself extra work. He explained workers ripped out his electricity three times and his water and sewer service twice.

"I think the project is a disaster," Winn said.

Then, last week, the materials were there, but they weren't the right materials.

CCMS workers were ready to spread top soil in grassy areas along Michigan Avenue where it had been impacted by construction. But the soil was turned away by Martin because it wasn't screened and the city's contract specifications stipulated screened dirt, free of rocks, sod clumps and other debris.

New soil has since arrived and received approval by Martin on May 22. Gordon said it would take four days from the approval date to spread the top soil and then hydroseed the area.

He added the project extras, coupled with the weather and material and billing issues, have combined to tally the two week delay.

But, when asked whether he thought two weeks was a possibility, Martin said that was an optimistic goal.

"If they get at it, but there has to be more of a work force than that," he explained.

However, the company is determined to finish this project.

On Belvedere Avenue, CCMS is scrambling to finish construction that runs from Bridge Street to 100 feet east of the club's gates.

The project includes construction of storm sewer and new sanitary sewer with some areas of repair being done to the existing sanitary system. Also underway is the addition of curb and gutter and construction of a sidewalk on the north side of the road from May Street to where the project ends.

On May 22 Gordon's crew was building the curb along Belvedere preparing to spread gravel on the road, the first step before re-surfacing. He said their goal was to spread the gravel before the weekend got underway to alleviate business owners stress as they approached the typically busy Memorial Day weekend.

Before the street is surfaced, gravel has to be poured. Gordon said the gravel would be poured prior to May 24. Martin added that if CCMS's promise fell through, the city would find another way for the gravel to be there.

The Michigan Avenue project includes changes to the area between Petoskey Avenue and Division Street up to Mount MeSauba Road.

Workers have completed the new storm sewer and water main which ran the length of the project area. They have also completed repairs to the sanitary sewer system.

Curb and gutter and a new street surface were constructed in the entire project area including additional curb and gutter at the intersection of Division Street and Mount McSauba Road.

Along with the new road came new sidewalk from 431 Michigan Avenue, running along the west side of the street to Division Street and north to the Division and McSauba street intersection.

On Michigan Avenue, final details to be added include spreading black dirt and grass seed along areas where construction removed it and some repair work to the road's surface.

Martin added there are places in the project area where the sidewalk and curbing need further work.

Both projects will also include new street lighting which will be installed in the fall.

Martin would not comment as to whether he would hire CCMS again.

> "We could stop the project tomorrow, but if we did, it would probably be that way all summer long."

Charlevoix High valedictorians, salutatorian

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Maize and blue are the dominating collegiate colors perched atop the three highest rungs on the academic ladder for Charlevoix High School graduates this year.

Valedictorians Krista Swenor and Patrick Gowell and salutatorian Elissa Wood are all headed to Ann Arbor this fall where they'll attend the University of Michigan.

Swenor, Gowell and Wood leave behind not only an academic legacy, but were also premier athletes.

Gowell, 18, is a Rayder all-season athlete. He has been a key player on the successful Rayder boys' basketball and football teams and can be found this spring on the baseball diamond.

His athletic strength is matched by his academic brawn. Gowell said his family had the greatest influence on him maintaining academic excellence which is evident in his membership with the National Honor Society.

He has attended Charlevoix Public Schools since sixth grade and said his experiences in the school system over the past six years have taught him leadership skills and responsibility.

While he has enjoyed Charlevoix and will miss his friends and participation in sports, he's looking forward to being on his own.

But, Gowell's competitive edge on the court and field isn't showing through as he shared the top academic honor, valedictorian, with longtime classmate and friend, Swenor.

Swenor, 18, like Gowell, has hit the books hard in high school but also played hard. She was a member of the award-winning girls' basketball team, the volleyball team and is currently busy on the softball diamond.

Her academic excellence has also been recognized through her membership in the National Honor Society.

"My close friends and my family have had the greatest influence on me academically because they always pushed me to do my best," she said.

She's gone through the Charlevoix School System since kindergarten and has nothing but glowing remarks about her experiences. One of the experiences she highlighted is job shadowing opportunities, offered by the school, that gave her an early option to explore careers.

Wood, like Gowell and Swenor enjoys her time on the field. This year she has shined on the Rayder girls' soccer team. And when she's not dribbling down the field you can catch her sketching and painting or hanging out with friends.

While hanging out with friends in Charlevoix has been one of life's staples, both she and life-long classmate Swenor said they are looking forward to the independence of college life.

"I will miss the small town atmosphere where everyone knows everyone. I will also miss my friends and family but I'm looking forward to meeting new people, making new friends and moving to Ann Arbor and starting over," Wood said.

Northwest valedictorian, salutatorian

By Courtney Pace
Staff Writer

After four years of studying and writing papers, Northwest Academy seniors Jackie Riley, 18, and Jared Kyvik, 18, are gearing up to exit high school at the top of their class.

Riley is graduating as valedictorian and Kyvik as salutatorian and both have big plans after receiving their diplomas.

This fall, Riley, daughter of Jeff and Denise Riley of Charlevoix, is planning to attend Kirtland Community College in Roscommon and then transferring to Eastern Michigan University, or another university, where she plans on majoring in journalism and English.

"I've always liked writing. My English teacher told me I'm a very linguistic person. I'm also a very avid reader," Riley said.

Kyvik, on the other hand, plans on leaving Michigan behind as he ventures to Washington State to attend DigiPen Institute of Technology and major in computer programming.

"I've always enjoyed working with computers. It's fun and challenging," Kyvik said.

Kyvik attended a two-week workshop for high school students this past August at the institute. He said the workshop enabled him to see what the school had to offer and the type of technology used.

Both seniors said the part of high school they will miss most is the friends and relationships they've created.

Riley said she will miss the "closeness and being together" aspect of going to a small high school.

When asked what he will miss most about high school, Kyvik said, "Probably the friends I've made and the teachers I've worked with."

He added he will miss Eric Richardson, his math and science teacher for the past three years.

Riley and Kyvik were active participants in organizations at Northwest Academy.

Band has been a part of Riley's life since the sixth grade. She started out playing the French horn, but decided to play the clarinet. Riley has played the regular clarinet for four years and the bass clarinet for two.

Riley said the band received "perfect scores" at the district festival and the state festival.

Kyvik has been an active member of the school's soccer team, the Northwest Navigators, for two years. He has also been a part of the KEY (Kiwana's Educate Youth) Club for two years and served as the vice president this year.

"It's a community service group for students," he said.

The KEY Club participated in a Cystic Fibrosis Walk on May 25, which helped raise money for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

Riley and Kyvik both have summer plans before heading off to Academia.

Riley is going to be a counselor for the first time at Camp Sakakawea, a Girl Scout Camp in Traverse City. Last year she was a counselor-in-training.

"I'm really looking forward to it," she said.

Kyvik is going to spend his summer working in landscaping and saving money for school.

Avoiding "senioritis" was hard for both Riley and Kyvik.

Riley said it took hard work and discipline to keep herself focused.

Kyvik said Northern Studies Week, a program provided through the school, helped to inspire and motivate him to stay on track.

"It's a week where we take educational trips," he said.

According to Kyvik, students can choose to go on the trip, or if they want to save money, can choose to stay at the school and paint different things with murals.

Kyvik said he went with about 10 other students on a hiking trip and visited Fisherman's Island and Dead Man's Walk.

With the school year coming to an end, Riley and Kyvik are both excited about receiving their degree, but also feel strange about finally being done with high school.

"It's exciting, but kind of sad to see it come to an end," Kyvik said.

Beaver Island's twin top students

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Beaver Island's top two students are twins. They are: Brad and Drew McDonough. Brad is the valedictorian and Drew is the salutatorian. (Courtesy photo)

Identical twins, born five minutes apart in 1984, are graduating at the top of the Beaver Island Community School's graduating class, with grade point averages just decimal points apart.

Brad and Drew McDonough, 18, of Beaver Island, have secured the valedictorian and salutatorian positions, respectively, for the island's graduating class of 2002.

It came as no surprise to the boys that they ended up neck and neck in school. Brad finished with a 3.83 overall grade point average and Drew with a 3.78.

They said they've always followed similar paths and pursued similar interests. In fact, they're so alike that at first glance, it's hard to tell them apart.

They're both typical American teens — they enjoy playing soccer and basketball and hanging out with friends. And different logos on college sweatshirts won't even help new acquaintances tell them apart because graduation isn't splitting them up.

Brad and Drew both plan on attending Michigan State University in the fall, where they said they may even pursue the same major.

"We're leaning toward business and engineering, but we'll figure that out once we get there," Drew said.

While some competitive siblings may feel a sense of disappointment in falling just short of the top spot, Drew, Brad's older brother by 5 minutes, is happy for his brother and proud of his own accomplishments.

The dynamic duo even pointed to the same source of inspiration for maintaining their academic excellence throughout school, their parents, Denise and Tim McDonough, and their teachers.

"Our parents have always said academics is the key and pushed us," Drew said.

Drew added, and Brad later echoed, they wouldn't trade their Beaver Island education for anything.

Brad said, "Here, there's a one on one atmosphere with teachers. They have more time to deal with students individually."

At 1 p.m., June 8, outside the school they've attended since 1989, the brothers will join four other Beaver Island graduates, most of whom they've known for over 10 years, for graduation.

"I'll miss my family and friends and the quiet. It (the MSU campus) will be a big difference, but it's a new challenge to see how we stack up too. That's what attracted us to there — meeting new people and having new experiences that are totally different from here," Drew said.

Brad parroted Drew's excitement for the new campus and his apprehension about leaving friends, family and the island they both love.

"We have a close knit group of friends; we grew up in a small community and we really know each other well — we're always together. But, I'm looking forward to meeting new people and the challenges a big university will have," he said.

To congratulate the twins, Beaver Island residents and visitors can pop in at McDonough's Market in downtown St. James, where Brad and Drew are working this summer.

Council passes on township land deal

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix City Council decided to pass on a Marion Township property acquisition that would have brought affordable housing and an industrial park south of Veenstra Road, adjacent to the site of Charlevoix High School.

"There were just a lot of unknowns — the development cost was more than we could potentially market it for and there was a real unknown with zoning," City Manager Mike Wiesner said.

The outcome calls into question whether or not the city's search for industrial sites, which it has been conducting since 1995, will continue and Wiesner doesn't sound optimistic about the city locating a viable site.

"It's difficult. I'm concerned long term where we go with this; property isn't getting any cheaper," he said.

Wiesner estimated the city's development cost to be $65,000 an acre to develop and said the last piece of industrial property the city owned sold for between $10,000

'Laddie' just one of many gifts from the Schuilings

By JULIE WITTHOEFT

Charlevoix residents Bill and Ellen Schuiling have established a $2 million scholarship fund to further education opportunities of current and future Charlevoix High School graduates.

Charlevoix High School Counselor, John Prescott, said, "I think this is great. There was talk about it but now it's here and it's great to see."

At the 6th Annual Academic Honor's Convocation May 15 at the high school, 64 students each received $1,000 from the Laddie Educational Foundation Scholarship.

The student scholarship grantees join countless others who have been impacted by the Schuilings' generosity. Bill estimated that thus far, the couple has donated over $50 million to various organizations.

Since the Schuilings arrived in Charlevoix, eight years ago from Washington D.C., they've spent their time, energy and money improving the community without ever seeking recognition.

"I love people. People are the name of the game and my main goal is to help in any way that I can," Bill said.

The couple has donated to local veterans' organizations, the school district, the Charlevoix Community Pool, the Charlevoix County Humane Society, the Charlevoix City Police and Fire departments, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, the Charlevoix Food Pantry, the Charlevoix Senior Center and the local Red Cross.

- One Porter Cable brad nailer.
- One Paslode framing nailer.
- One Paslode finish nailer.
- One Paslode stapler.

Corrections

In the article, "Charlevoix High valedictorians, salutatorian," which ran in the May 29 graduation tab, Elissa Wood was incorrectly named salutatorian and Krista Swenor valedictorian. Wood was selected as class of 2002 co-valedictorian with Patrick Gowell and Swenor is the salutatorian.

Also, Dale Joseph Williams' name was inadvertently left out of the tab.

Spelling Bee competitor doesn't make third round

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Elyse Michrina, 14, a Charlevoix Middle School eighth grade student, made it through the first round at the Scripps Howard National Spelling Bee May 29 in Washington D.C. before falling in the second round written test.

The two day event took place at the Independence Ball Room at the Grand Hyatt Hotel, where Michrina joined 249 students from across the nation for the bee. They gathered in the ballroom and were numbered by state and split into two rounds. The first round was students 1-123 then students 124-250 headed to the podium.

When the caller let Michrina, speller 112, know it was her turn it took her a minute to orient, after all by the time she was given her first word, she had waited almost two hours.

"I was a little nervous, not bad," she said.

After successfully spelling "adustiosis," a word she recalled from her study guide, she proceeded to the next round, the dreaded written test.

Michrina had practiced the written test by working on samples offered by the bee. But, she said the samples were simple and had a more uniform level of difficulty in words to be spelled.

However, when it came time for the real thing, she said the test started out really easy, with words like "incinerate" and "grammar," and then moved on to words "hardly anyone got right."

"They didn't break it up well. There were no medium difficulty. I liked the idea of a written round, but they could make improvements," she said.

In the written round students were given 25 words to spell and anyone with higher than nine words misspelled was disqualified.

Michrina isn't sure of her exact score, but she didn't move to the third round.

The local spelling champ wasn't disappointed in the outcome; she took full advantage of her vacation to a new city with her mom and dad, Lori and Jerry Michrina.

The trio stayed at the Grand Hyatt and toured the Smithsonian, several memorials and the Library of Congress where Michrina, a violinist, was starry eyed as she gazed on some well crafted instruments.

While it sounded like she would definitely go for another trip to Washington D.C., whether or not she'll return to the spelling ring remains to be seen. Michrina will start high school next year and is no longer eligible for the Scripps Howard competition.

But, she walks away from her spelling career with some award winning knowledge of words that most people never encounter and some sweet parting gifts from her third place finish in the Feb. 8 Emmet County Bee and her first place wrap-up at the 21st Annual Grand Traverse Regional Spelling Bee March 10 in Traverse City.

By the end of her spelling bee win spree, she won $225 in regional and national wins, took advantage of the expenses paid trip to Washington D.C., won two electronic dictionaries, T-shirts for the whole family, a watch and a CD holder.

Schuilings give a little joy to area

EDITORIAL

Every day in this modern world a person can find the shining light of kindness.

That light can be in the form of many things: Someone helping a person find shelter during hard times, doctors traveling the world to provide health care in third world nations or clowns who visit children's wards of hospitals to bring joy.

In Charlevoix, there are many lights to see — each one an example of helping out and giving back to the community. But, there is one that has been unnoticed and is happy about that.

This light is the caring of two Charlevoix residents, Bill and Ellen Schuiling, who relish in giving.

The Schuilings are well known around town as people who are always happy and ready to help out. Every day they give and they never seek publicity for their actions. The smiles of those they have helped is thanks enough for this couple.

This couple has given to veterans' organizations, the school district, the police and fire departments, the sheriff's department, the food pantry, the senior center and the local Red Cross, just to name a few.

We are not talking spare change here — they give a lot of their money to these organizations. Bill estimates he has given over $50 million.

And now, they are giving even more. This year the Schuilings established a scholarship fund for Charlevoix High School graduates called the "Laddie Educational Foundation Scholarship" — named after their late beloved dog Laddie.

The Schuilings have awarded 64 graduates $1,000 under this scholarship.

While the Schuilings blush at the thought of publicity over their generous ways, we think they deserve great recognition for all they have given to Charlevoix.

Thank you Ellen and Bill Schuiling for being superb examples of giving. Thank you for what you have done for the youth of Charlevoix. Thank you for showing just how brightly people can shine in this world.

Trees connect to many other living organisms

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

Ecologists claim that in the biological world everything is connected to everything else. That's a lot of connections.

While there is only one possible connection between two things — a straight line connecting two dots — by the time we get to 10 things, the possible connections number 45. Considering that any small patch of the earth most likely contains many thousands of creatures of all sizes, the number of possible connections is mind-numbing. My first ecology professor said that ecology is not only more complicated than we think, it is more complicated than we CAN think.

Consider the maple trees that surround us here in Charlevoix.

There are at least five different kinds living along our streets and in our yards. They are connected to us by their shade, their air-cleansing capacity, their beauty and their financial value to property. We are also annually made aware of them when they shed bushels of leaves each fall. How are they connected to the rest of the biological world? Many of those potentially millions of connections are about the giving and receiving of food. Do the maples feed those living things around them? Most certainly.

When maple buds first open in early spring, the waterproof scales that protected them from winter's blasts drop from the trees. You may have noticed them on your sidewalk or driveway and wondered where they came from. Just after the buds open most of the maples reveal an uncountable number of small flowers on filamentous stalks.

The Sugar Maples drop almost all of their flowers in late May. You have surely seen them sprinkled over everything anywhere near a sugar maple. Only about one in a hundred of the flowers go on to develop the winged seeds that the maples shed later.

The bud-covering scales, the dead flowers and the majority of the maple seeds provide an abundance of food for those smaller organisms connected to the maples. Mostly the small falling parts feed beneficial insects, bacteria and molds, many of which would not survive if the maples were absent.

All that biological decomposition assists in the growth of any plants near the maples. Your lawn is enriched by the activities centered around the spring and early summer food falling from your maple trees. It's not just a nuisance, it's food.

A line from a song by Tom Lehrer proclaimed, "Properly construed, everything is lewd." The ecological equivalent goes, "Properly construed, everything is food."

Those Norway Maples that show what most consider ugly black spots on their leaves later in the summer help to make up that aesthetic shortcoming by producing thousands of the largest and most attractive maple flowers. Each flower is about 1/4 inch in diameter with red and green petals and they cover Norway Maple trees before the leaves come out.

Directly or indirectly, food from the maple trees adds to the richness, variety and even the enjoyment of life wherever maples grow.

Those are a handful of the connections centered only on maple trees. Multiply that by the hundreds of kinds of trees in Michigan and the tens of thousands of organisms that depend on them and you may realize how ecology encourages a fascinating and continually surprising look at the world around us.

Great view

Editor:

What a view! With the removal of the Wharfside Building, it is such a breathtaking sight.

My son, Jamie Gaskin, was here for the weekend. He thought the library should be where the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce building sits.

Just visualize doing the same thing the city accomplished at the Beaver Island Boat Company. The land open above and below having the library and Chamber of Commerce. The part of Mason Street could be abandoned extending the land and helping with this idea.

Maybe the band shell could be maintained and improved in this plan or, should I say, idea?

People are getting politically independent

Editor:

Your opinion column entitled, "Do we really need political parties anymore?" will hopefully wake up the remaining minority of voters who are so strongly aligned with a political party that they exclude the selection of individuals for public office simply because of party association. As I travel through northern Michigan and campaign for the State Senate, I have personally found that the vast majority of voters truly are independent and that they really do vote issues above political parties.

Democrat Bart Stupak's congressional victory served as evidence that voters do think independently and vote the issues when he easily defeated Chuck Yob, a well financed name, recognized Republican in a district that for years voted Republican. Representative Andy Neumann rewrote history, when two years ago he became the first Democrat State House member to carry Charlevoix County in over 100 years. As voters look past party association, qualifications and abilities are becoming the key criteria upon which candidates are evaluated. This in turn produces better voter representation in both Lansing and Washington D.C.

Today, I am running as a Democrat for the State Senate while just over two years ago I served as the Chairman of the Grand Traverse County Republican Party. Why the change? Issues! The Engler Republicans, the new Republican Party in Michigan, have clearly become the party of special interests that serve their campaign contributors over the interests of Michigan's citizens. Engler Republicans have moved so far away from any values that I for one found it impossible to continue my association. Conversely, the Democrats (especially those in northern Michigan) have embraced an openness within their ranks that allows for an independence of thought on all of the issues.

Unfortunately, there are those amongst us that are so blinded by party labels that no force on earth will ever change their opinions. I share here a quote regarding my switching of political parties, from Bill Nelson, current chairman of the Grand Traverse GOP, as publicized in their newsletter. Mr. Nelson writes, "I can only conclude that there isn't enough power or money in the world to cause me to make such a change. I will always be a Republican."

Thanks to a willingness to learn and listen, a majority of northern Michigan citizens are no longer voting on party association alone, rather, they are thinking and voting independently. It's regrettable that for at least one Grand Traverse resident, there is obviously no hope.

Need a sports center

Editor:

My name is Laura Larsen and I am a student at Charlevoix Middle School. I feel we have the need to have a sports center in Charlevoix. This would be a safe place for our community to participate in recreational activities.

Some of the facts supporting the necessity of this center are as follows: Some of the teenagers, and even younger children, are making the choice to include drugs in their lives. It is a proven fact that if people have something to do, they are less likely to get involved with drugs. Also, if a person were to get intensely involved with a sport, they would better understand the consequences of their involvement with drugs.

If an indoor sports center were to be built, the people of our community would be given more athletic opportunities. When I was 7, I took gymnastics and absolutely loved it. I was forced to quit because there wasn't a gym in Charlevoix. Another result of the center would be that the spring travel soccer team could practice during the winter as the Sault Ste. Marie teams can. This would result in a better Charlevoix soccer team.

My final reason for this sports center is that some people aren't as fit because they haven't had the sports opportunity for them. This fitness, as everyone knows, is a necessity for a healthy lifestyle. I would be very pleased if the people of Charlevoix would come together to use their talents and knowledge to turn these thoughts into actions.

Start school later

Editor:

I am a sixth grade student who is attending Charlevoix Middle School. I think that school should be started later than 7:45 a.m. One reason is students are not getting enough sleep. Some students have to wake up at 5:15 a.m. so they can catch the bus.

Medical evidence says that teen's bodies are in sleep mode until 8 a.m. School age children need about 10 hours of sleep and teens need over 9 hours. There is an impact on learning due to lack of sleep. One way is students that are tired are more likely to fall asleep in class. So they are less able to concentrate or solve problems. Lack of sleep makes a student very grumpy and irritable. Kids have a higher number of academic, extracurricular, and social pressures than they did 10 years ago.

Another reason is impaired performance due to kids being way too tired. Students are often late to school, a few days or a month because of oversleeping and being too tired. The government says, "Of the estimated 100,000 car crashes are linked to drowsy driving almost half involve drivers ages fifteen to twenty-four."

Teenagers are getting about 2 hours less sleep a night which increases their risk for car accidents, falling asleep in class and moodiness. That is why I think that school should be started later than 7:45 a.m.

Hospital challenges area residents to walk 100 miles

Charlevoix County residents are being challenged to walk 100 miles or participate in an equivalent form of exercise during 100 days this summer.

The "100 Miles in 100 Days Challenge" is organized by Charlevoix Area Hospital, in cooperation with the cities of Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City. Designed to encourage residents of all ages to walk for the fun of it, reach for their "personal best," and improve their health and fitness, the event will award a $100 grand prize to one lucky participant. Each city will also give out individual prizes.

Participants will be asked to keep track of miles walked and exercise activities in a daily log. Marge McGoff, co-chair of the Charlevoix Area Hospital Development Council, which is helping to sponsor the event, said walkers are invited to mail their logs to the hospital at the conclusion of the 100 days to be eligible for prize drawings.

Area residents and summer visitors can sign up for the challenge at a number of area locations including Boyne City, Charlevoix and East Jordan city halls, Charlevoix Area Hospital, the hospital's rehab centers in Boyne City and East Jordan, community pools and fitness centers. The fee to participate is just $1 or a canned good that will be donated to each city's designate food pantry.

The city of Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City officially kicked off the 100-mile challenge with a one mile walk May 23.

Walkers who weren't there for the kick off are still welcome to join the challenge.

"Walking is a great way for people to get fit and this challenge should be a fun way to build the home-team spirit and get motivated," McGoff said.

For more information about the 100-mile challenge call Charlevoix Area Hospital Development Office at (231) 547-8502.

DDA, chamber fund convention study

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The possibility of locating a convention center in the city of Charlevoix is one step closer to becoming a reality.

The city convention center committee recently selected Hospitality Advisors Consulting Group, of Ann Arbor, to conduct a 10 week study focused on the eventuality of a convention center thriving in town.

Committee members include: Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority (DDA) chairman, Hugh Mason, Charlevoix City Mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell, Charlevoix City Manager Michael Wiesner, Charlevoix City Planner Gerry Harsch, Steve Bennett and Tracy Sell of the Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau and Jacqueline Merta and Roger Nesburg of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce.

"The idea is to bring business to town in the off season. Ideally, in my estimation, it could bring motels, businesses and restaurants more occupants — people in town, spending money," Wiesner said.

The total cost of the study is $27,500. Charlevoix's DDA authorized $15,000 in funds to be allocated to the study at its meeting May 28 and the remaining $14,500 will be funded by the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce and the Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Mason, a convention study supporter, said the DDA voted to fund the project as it closely fits the group's mission "to improve Charlevoix's downtown area."

"It's really a feasibility study to find out if it's (locating a convention center in the city) plausible. We don't want to spend $1

Chamber, city have unique relationship

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The city of Charlevoix and the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce share a unique relationship.

In both Boyne City and East Jordan, the city coffers pay chamber dues and allocate nominal funds annually for services the chamber provides the city. But in Charlevoix, the city goes beyond payment of membership dues, in its quest to establish a vital business community.

"I feel when the chamber and the city work together, often times with the same vision for what we want to see happen with the community, and our goals are integrated, we can move forward in accomplishing those goals to benefit the community," Jacqueline Merta, Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce Director, said.

In 2002, the city of Charlevoix earmarked $20,000 for the local chamber, $14,000 more than Boyne City's donation to its chamber and $15,000 more than was given in East Jordan.

A portion of the city of Charlevoix's allotted chamber money, $7,000, comes from its community promotions fund and pays for chamber dues and services rendered. The remaining $13,000 has been given to the chamber since 1998 and pays for the downtown marketing and events manager position. The remainder of the events manager's annual salary is paid for through the chamber.

Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner, said, "The downtown coordinator benefits the businesses and property owners in downtown and is therefore a benefit to the city. Our job is to function on behalf of those residents and businesses."

He explained the main focus of the events manager's position, which was added in 1998, is to bring visitor groups to town in the hopes of increasing commerce.

Since 1998, three people have filled the position, with the fourth, Tom Welch, having just accepted the job. Welch is considered to be an employee of the chamber of commerce, but is also supervised by a city downtown coordinator steering committee.

According to city treasurer, Rick Brandi, this year, the full $13,000 may not be awarded as the job was just recently filled.

Even with Welch on board, the city and chamber are looking further into how to encourage meeting groups to come to Charlevoix. One such group will arrive in June of 2003, when the Michigan Amateur Golf Tournament will take place at the Belvedere Golf Club.

But in the past few months, the mission to increase group visits to town became more expensive.

Wiesner said the city concluded that, with the exception of bass tournaments, efforts to bring groups to town have been unsuccessful and the two have now embarked on a convention center study.

For more information on this study see the related story on this page.

The convention center study comes at a cost of $27,500. The study cost will be split, with $15,000 paid for by the city and $14,500 paid for by the chamber and the Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau.

However, in both Boyne City

HEALTH

Healthy teeth could mean a longer life

John A. Merrill, DDS

'Your health'

Nearly everyone would like to live longer. Have you heard one of the most common advantages to longevity according to a study done on people who live over 100 years of age? The answer is flossing.

This is one of many recent studies finding common relationships between gum disease and chronic diseases. There is now an accepted link between chronic — long-lasting and usually non-painful — mouth infections and disorders such as heart disease, stroke, diabetes and osteoporosis.

To understand the cause is to first realize that infection as a very basic level is a chemical battle of enzymes. As these aggressive enzymes fend off each other some of them get swept away in our blood stream and end up "fighting" elsewhere with healthy tissue. It is this "friendly fire" caused by those enzymes that can contribute to the breakdown of other organs.

Bad breath is also a sign of higher bacterial levels in the mouth. Treatments for mouth odors are becoming much more standardized and effective. Most over-the-counter mouthwashes contain alcohol. These do a good job of killing bacteria, but leave much of the odor causing compounds behind.

There are many new products to eliminate bad breath for everyone. There is even fast and inexpensive laboratory testing completed in the dental office to further determine the source and treatment for bad breath.

So what can we do about it? Many dentists are becoming aware of this and how they practice dentistry.

In our office, as well as others, we have significantly changed how we diagnose, treat and reassess oral infections. Technology is changing too. We do less traditional gum surgery and more laser, antibiotic, antibacterial and anti-enzyme therapy.

Another effective method of reducing oral infections is to update older dental work. Misfitting, broken-down or worn out restorations can become difficult, if not impossible, to clean and make a great home for bacteria to hide out. Out-dated mercury silver fillings known as amalgams can also leak and harbor large amounts of germs.

We all know that to live longer and healthier we need to take good care of ourselves. Losing a few pounds may help, but also check and see if you might be able to lose a few billion germs. It may make a bigger difference than you think.

John A. Merrill, DDS, can be contacted by calling 547-9141. His office is locate at 06483 M-66 in Charlevoix.

Study to focus on building convention center in town

CONVENTION

million on a convention center and find out no one wants to come here," Mason explained.

A study proposal submitted in late April to the committee by Charles Skelton, president of Hospitality Advisors Consulting Group, includes the study's focus on two potential convention sites, the Bridge Street Inn, located at 113 Michigan Avenue, owned by John McKown, and the Charlevoix Middle School.

The middle school, which is located at 204 Grant Street, two blocks from Charlevoix's central business district, will be vacated this fall.

Wiesner told the DDA at its meeting that the point of looking at more remote locations, like the middle school, is to evaluate the utility of locating the center in a place where users have to walk or drive to surrounding accommodations.

Merta, chamber director, said that locating the center further away from lodging facilities and restaurants has proven to be undesirable to convention planners.

She explained in meeting with prospective clients, the site they've expressed interest in is the Charlevoix Country Club. However, lodging and transportation are two factors dissuading potential users from coming to town.

"They love the hotel district, but wish there was a meeting space there. We've offered trolley service but often, that (lack of hotel/convention convenience) is what nixes the deal," she added.

She said in 2002, two groups declined to make Charlevoix their convention destination, because of the proximity problem.

Wiesner said the study will also look at constructing a covered walkway to and from the center and lodging.

The first of eight study phases is scheduled to start June 4.

During phase one the group will conduct a community analysis which will include interviews with area businesses, community leaders and government officials and a site analysis.

"It is important that we understand the parameters and expectations of the community," Skelton states in the proposal.

In phase two the group will analyze the competitive environment by surveying potential regional meeting room users. From this, they plan to generate options for the facility style that may work at the locations.

Phase three will work with the demand established in phase two to estimate the potential facility use.

Then, once Skelton and his associates have calculated supply and demand, they'll jump into phase four and look at the operating costs of such a facility. Once operating costs have been established the group will calculate construction costs to be incurred from start with land purchases to finish, construction.

Once the city knows the type of building they are looking at and how operational funding will work they'll start to explore how to finance the endeavor.

and East Jordan where chambers are feeling the work load crunch in their quest to increase tourism, city administrators haven't stepped in and offered financial support.

Barb Brooks, a Boyne City Chamber of Commerce representative, said the Boyne chamber was strapped for time and is currently in the process of establishing a volunteer task force.

"We just don't have the fends to do any hiring; this is all done on a volunteer basis with people who want to see things happen," Brooks said.

Charlevoix's support of the local chamber doesn't stop at funding coordinators and a convention study. In an effort to increase Charlevoix's attractive qualities the city and the chamber have teamed up to fight a seasonal foe: traffic.

Wiesner said traffic study costs have not been established and will likely be discussed this summer at a special meeting of the Downtown Development Authority. A date for this meeting has not been scheduled.

Representatives of the city and chamber have met with a traffic engineer and a traffic expert from Michigan State University who will tackle Charlevoix's traffic quandary this summer. The engineer is the city's choice and the point control expert was the chamber's choice.

Point control looks at stationing traffic controllers at intersections in the sample area, from Pine River Lane to Belvedere Avenue.

Both have been hired to conduct the study and Wiesner said he doesn't anticipate the chamber recommended expert increasing the city's cost far beyond the engineer it has selected.

The university researchers will also try other methods, including traffic light scrambling, to see if the congestion is alleviated.

Gilbert writes book on the perfect party

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff Writer

Partying is easy for Charlevoix resident and Charlevoix Courier columnist Edith Gilbert.

Gilbert, a well known etiquette writer, has written several books dealing with issues pertinent to throwing a party or preparing for a wedding. And now she has written another.

Her newest book, "Easy Entertaining" is the seventh book she's written. Gilbert said this book is a combination of five books.

"There's nothing like it on the market," she said.

Her book instructs its readers about what wines to use, different party themes, how to fold napkins and recipes to use when entertaining. These four topics are usually the subject of a single book.

"It's the first book that covers all these things a person needs when planning a party," Gilbert said.

"Easy Entertaining" provides its readers with easy to use recipes with substitution options available.

It also gives definitions of what is meant by the various terms used to describe the dress code required for a certain party.

"People always want to know what to wear and they're too embarrassed to ask," she said.

In her book, Gilbert gives specific examples of the clothing to be worn for a casual dinner or a black tie or white tie affair. It also mentions many options for people who live in various parts of the world.

According to Gilbert, casual dress includes sweaters and jeans and black tie includes tuxedos for men and cocktail dresses for women. Gilbert adds that white tie affairs are truly formal and include ball gowns and gloves.

Gilbert mentions that black tie affairs are considered formal in the United States, but informal in England.

The recipes contained within "Easy Entertaining" are ones Gilbert has collected over the years. However, the recipe for Cornish Game Hens is a Gilbert original.

Odds and Ends is a family affair

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The care of your home and its yard is the business of the Sundelius family of Charlevoix.

The family lawn care and home maintenance business called Odds and Ends is run by Scott Sundelius, the father of the family. To help him with this task, many of Scott's 11 children join him at work.

"The kids have worked in this with me for many years," Scott said. "We are a family business. My children are old enough to work, so why not create a job I can do with them?"

He added, while it helps bring in money for the family, it also gives him a chance to spend time with his children and keep an eye on them at the same time.

"It helps keep them out of trouble," he said.

Odds and Ends opened for business this spring. It is a six day a week lawn care and home maintenance operation that specializes in handyman work.

Scott said he has experience in plumbing, electrical work, minor carpentry, rough and finish, hanging pictures, painting, fixing screens and roofing.

"No job is too big. We do it all," he said.

Scott and his wife, Tina, came to Charlevoix 8 years ago from the Upper Peninsula, where he grew up. While living in the Upper Peninsula, Scott was a plumber for 10 years and worked in construction throughout his life.

"I have remodeled several homes and understand all aspects of the procedures," he said.

Scott has passed on these skills to his children, who also did yard work around their Northpointe Woods neighborhood.

So far, six of his 11 children are working with him. They are: Nathan, 15; Haden, 9; Lavona, 11; Hali, 14; Tammy, 16 and Lyle, 16. His other children are: Don, 20; Allcaha, 1, Lani, 2, Sydney, 5, Elisabeth, 11.

To contact Odds and Ends, call (231) 547-1912.

Lock your vehicles when not in use

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff Writer

According to Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson, three unlocked vehicles were entered without permission last week and items stolen from inside.

"The police see a seasonal increase in this type of criminal activity. People are urged to lock their cars even in the driveway and not to leave valuables inside," Halverson said.

According to Halverson, sometime in the overnight hours on May 28, a purse was stolen from an unlocked car near Charlevoix High School near the intersection of May and Garfield streets. The vehicle was parked outside a home.

On May 29, two cars were targeted.

Halverson said the cars were parked outside homes near the intersection of Dixon and Burns streets. He said a purse and some compact discs were stolen.

Additionally, Halverson said a purse from one of the vehicles was found north of the channel on Lake Michigan beach. It was missing credit cards and cash.

The model, year and color of cars doesn't appear to be a deciding factor in which cars are targeted, Halverson said.

"What drives the crime is the opportunity. It doesn't matter what type of car it is," he said.

Halverson added if too much effort is required to steal from a car, the individuals usually won't bother.

"They tend to target those cars that are unlocked," he said.

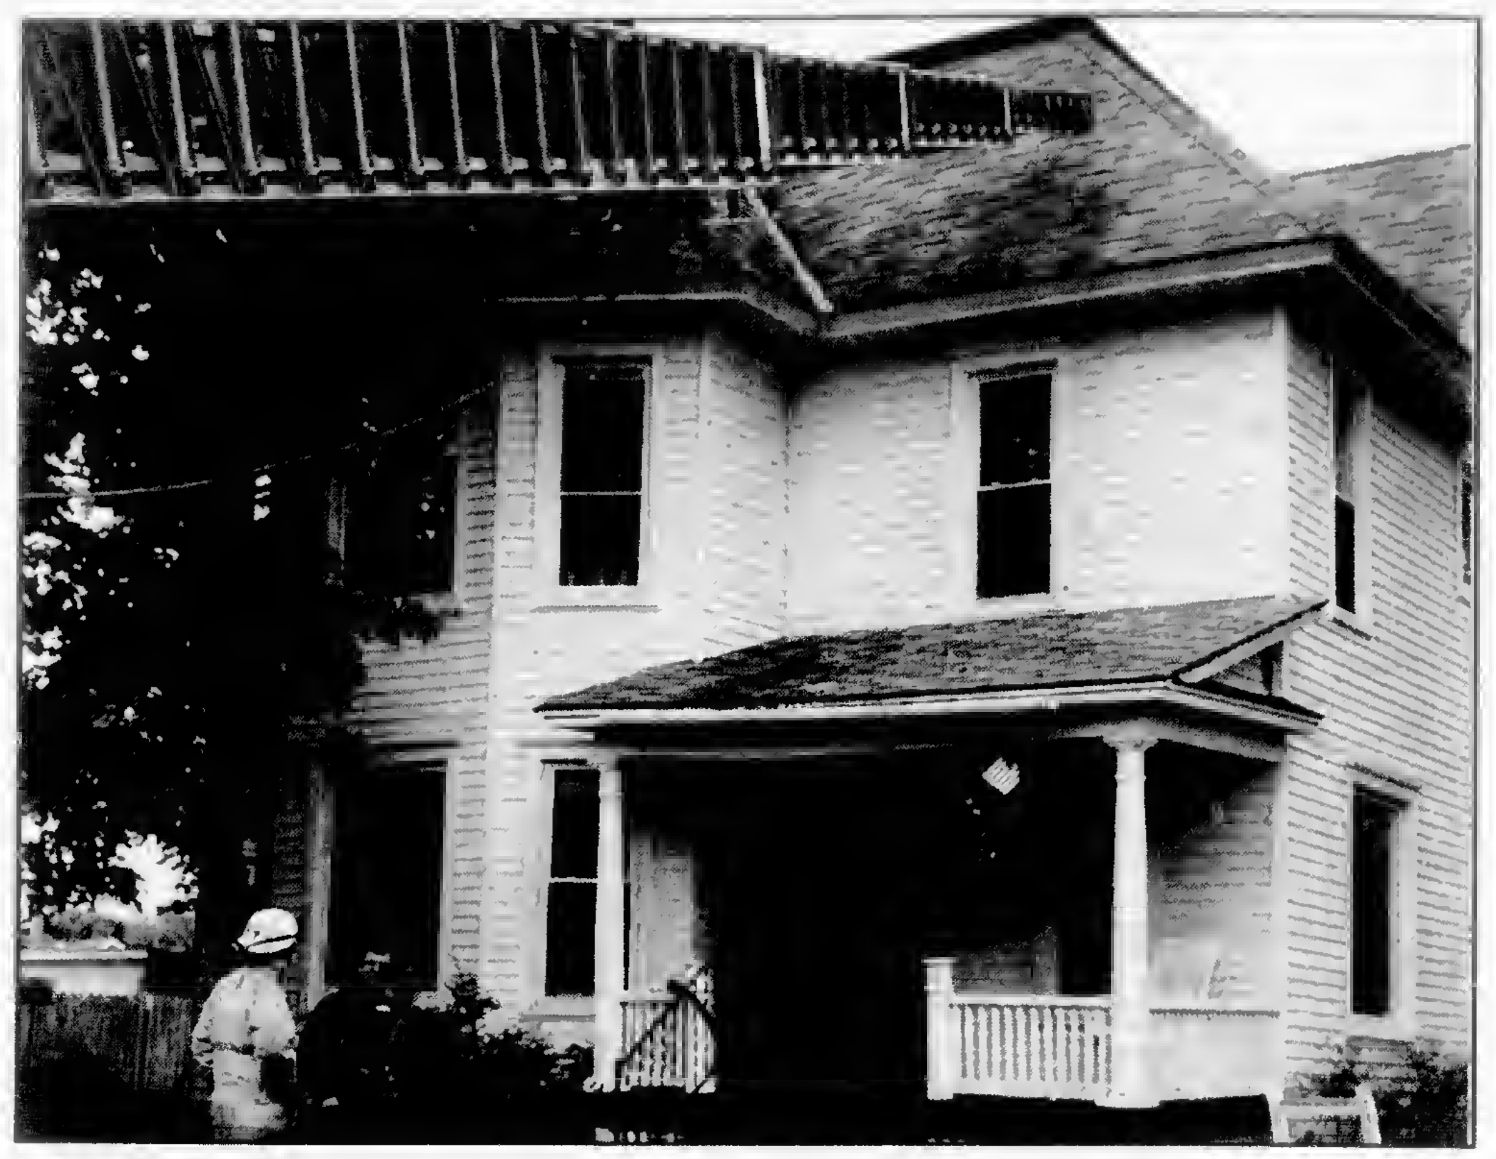
No one has been connected to the crimes yet, but Halverson said the individuals may be young people who are local and know the area well.

"We believe these individuals were on foot and tried a number of cars before they found vehicles with things to steal inside," Halverson said.

He added it's too early to detect a criminal pattern, but the crimes may continue until suspects are found.

"We would like to apprehend these people as soon as possible before they continue," Halverson said.

Anyone with information regarding these thefts are asked to contact the Charlevoix City Police at 547-3258.



Attic fire

The Charlevoix City Fire Department responded to an attic fire around 8:30 p.m., June 2 at a duplex on 201 Alice Street. One of the residents of the duplex noticed smoke coming from the attic and called 911. Twenty firefighters extinguished the flames with one hose line. Damage to the house was limited to burnt flooring and floor joists in the attic and water damage to the floors below. The cause of the fire is believed to be children playing with a toaster in the attic. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

JUN 2002

Junior Gold registration to be on June 13

Official registration for this summer's Junior Golf instructional program is June 13 at the Charlevoix Municipal Course.

Area youngsters must be at least 8 years of age and no older than 17. Registration requires a parent or guardian be present to provide a signature on the waiver of liability form and to learn of the family commitment necessary for youngsters to successfully benefit from the program.

Youngsters 8-11 are signing up at 1:15 p.m. and those 12 years and older are to register at 2 p.m.

There is a per-lesson fee of $5 or a $45 season plan option that pays for all scheduled lessons.

This is the seventh year that the Charlevoix County Junior Golf Association's program has offered the program to area youth. Last year 204 area youngsters registered for the seven week program. The program drew acclaim from the National Junior Golf Association when they selected the local program as one of the top fifteen such programs in the country.

There will be two sessions each week with a couple of tournaments spaced in during the summer program. Lessons rotate and will be at each of the Belvedere, Charlevoix Country Club, Municipal, Antrim Dells and Dunmaglas courses.

In addition, there will be a Sunday evening "fun" league for selected advanced players, with a variety of events, scheduled for the Belvedere Course.

Additional adult volunteers are needed to work in the Monitoring Program, so that whenever youngsters play a few holes to conclude each lesson, they have an adult monitoring them.

Those interested should call 547-6433 or the Charlevoix City Recreation Department at 547-3253.

Columnist shares tips on party etiquette

GILBERT

The meal is made with teriyaki sauce, ginger root, orange juice, curry powder, banana, mandarin oranges, parsley bacon and coconut chips.

All the recipes included in the book are detailed, listing ingredients as well as side dishes that go with the dish being prepared.

Gilbert said she loves all the recipes she included in the book.

"I just picked my favorite recipes," she said.

Aside from the recipes and tips to use, Gilbert includes etiquette instructions about where to seat people and how to seat them at various tables.

Etiquette is necessary to Gilbert because it helps things run smoother.

"It makes life easier," she said.

But, Gilbert believes the younger generations are lacking proper etiquette, thanks to their parents.

"I blame the hippie parent-Baby Boomer generation for not teaching the children. The hippie generation did not practice courtesy. They're paying for it now, because the children suffer," Gilbert said.

According to Gilbert, the whole idea of sitting down to eat with one's family has been lost to TV dinners and fast food.

"The family dinner table has been abandoned," she said.

In addition to learning proper etiquette, Gilbert said she hopes people will take away the joy of throwing a party with her new book.

"I really do enjoy making it special in some way," Gilbert said.

Gilbert will be autographing "Easy Entertaining" from 1 to 5 p.m. on July 6 at Bridge Street Bookstore in Charlevoix.

Boys' track team ends season at state finals

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

While the 11 members of the Charlevoix High School boys' track team placed thirteenth overall at the state finals Saturday, many of them had an impressive day.

Coach Ken Plude said, "For the team, it was a great year. Maybe the state meet didn't go as well as planned, but some of the kids are young and it was their first time at state."

One of those kids was Kyle Kramer, who not only beat the school record in the pole vault with a height of 14 feet, 3 inches, but he also came in third place at the state meet. This puts him on the All State Team.

The previous pole vault record was 14 feet, held by Travis Wood. Wood coached Kramer at the state meet.

Another great individual effort was made by Gordic Selph. Selph came in fourth place in the 800 meter run with a time of 1 minute, 58.75 seconds.

The relay teams also had a good day at the state meet, specifically the 3200 meter relay.

This team took fourth place with a time of 8 minutes, 6.35 seconds. The winning team was Williamston, with a time of only 8 minutes, 5.33 seconds.

The Charlevoix relay team was composed of non-seniors Selph, Tim Daining, Peter Gorkiewicz and Todd Carey.

Plude also said the young relay team of Jeff Urban, Rusty Walters, Kramer and Spencer Bryan did very well in the 800 meter, with a time of 45.1 seconds. This put the team in twelfth place.

"This is an excellent time. It is something to look forward to next year," Plude said.

Because the team was so young and had so many young athletes competing at the state meet, Plude said he expects a very strong team next year.

Soccer has great year

The varsity Rayder girls' soccer team dropped their final game to a tough, motivated Harbor Springs team May 28.

In the opening district match, which included the two best teams in the district draw, the Rams showed why they are ranked number two in the state.

The Rayders were competitive early, managing a few shots on the Harbor keeper but in a problem which has nagged the Rayders this year, Charlevoix failed to rotate defensively and left Harbor an unmarked shot in front of the net for the 1-0 lead. Harbor scored twice more in the first half and then added four in the second.

Five Charlevoix seniors played their final match: Kate Madison, Danielle Vogelheim, Libby Withrow, Elissa Wood and Jayme Murray. Each gave their best efforts against the physically superior Rams.

All-state candidate Murray continued to be hampered by an ankle sprain and wasn't able to man her normal sweeper spot but she played through the pain in her last game as a Rayder. She received a scholarship to play in the fall at Aquinas College.

Vogelheim ends her career as Charlevoix's all-time scoring leader.

Madison continued to give herself up for the team, playing where needed throughout the season to cover for injured players. Madison hopes to play at Hope in the fall.

Withrow and Wood complete their careers having added leadership and good nature to the Charlevoix program.

Head Coach Carol Madison said, "This was a good learning experience for our younger players, including the five freshmen and four sophomores who played against the senior dominated Harbor squad. We look forward to continuing our rivalry with the Rams in years to come and wish them success in their march to the state title."

Charlevoix ended the season 9-9-1 overall, achieving a .500 record for the first time since 1997.

Memorial shoot raises $1,400

The Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club's Annual Jiggs Whitley Memorial Shoot on June 1, raised about $1,400 for its scholarship fund.

Jeff Arnold of Charlevoix won the early registration drawing of $50. There was also a special drawing for the ladies that were present at the time of the drawings of door prizes. That went to Patricia Clevenger of Ellsworth, who received a $100 gift certificate to Peggy's Gardening of Petoskey.

Awards for the shotgun event were:

- The Parent/Child Award went to Steve and Jason Martin from Charlevoix.
- The High Over All award went to Jim Wilde of Petoskey.
- The Junior award went to Jason Martin from Charlevoix.

Awards for the rifle event were:

- Sporter Class HOA went to Vane Smith of Charlevoix.
- Match Class HOA went to Joshua Kilmer of Charlevoix.
- High Junior went to Josh Eisenmann of Charlevoix.
- High Lady went to Patricia Clevenger of Ellsworth.

The Rod and Gun Club will be having a registered sporting clays tournament on June 1. Registration will be from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

For more information, call 547-0554 or 547-2785.

Bridge Street was once again lined with planting people from Charlevoix for the annual "Operation Petunia" May 30. On this day, residents gathered together to line the streets with petunias and enjoy a picnic in East Park. Official Notice

CITY OF CHARLEVOIX
Ordinance No. 673 of 2002

AN ORDINANCE TO REPEAL CHAPTER 22A OF THE CHARLEVOIX CITY CODE AND TO REPLACE IT WITH A NEW CHAPTER 22A; BEING AN ORDINANCE UNDER SECTION 21310A(3) OF PART 213, ACT 451 OF THE PUBLIC ACTS OF 1994, WHICH AMENDS THE CHARLEVOIX CITY CODE TO PROHIBIT PRIVATE WATER WELLS FOR ANY PURPOSE WITHIN A DEFINED IMPACT AREA WITHIN THE CITY; THIS ORDINANCE REQUIRES ALL WATER USERS WITHIN THIS IMPACT AREA TO USE THE CITY WATER SERVICE AS THEIR SOLE SOURCE OF WATER, REQUIRES THE CITY TO NOTIFY THE MICHIGAN DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY 30 DAYS BEFORE AMENDING OR REPEALING THIS ORDINANCE, REQUIRES THE CITY TO FILE THIS ORDINANCE WITH THE COUNTY REGISTER OF DEED'S OFFICE, AND PROVIDES ENFORCEMENT MECHANISMS FOR VIOLATIONS OF THIS ORDINANCE.

The purpose of this ordinance is to provide for the protection of public health, safety and welfare in connection with the use of groundwater within certain areas of the City of Charlevoix. It has been determined that the groundwater within the "Impact Area" of the City as defined herein contains hazardous substances at concentrated levels which the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) has determined would be unsafe for use.

THE CITY OF CHARLEVOIX ORDAINS:

SECTION 1. Legislative Findings.

The Charlevoix City Council hereby makes the following legislative findings:

A. A regulated substance, as defined in Section 21303(d) of Part 213, Act 451 of the Public Acts of 1994, is currently located at the City's Department of Public Works and neighboring properties. A hazardous substance, as defined in Section 20101(q) of Part 201, Act 451 of the Public Acts of 1994, is currently located at and hydro-geologically down-gradient of the property located at 107 Airport Drive in the City of Charlevoix.

These lands are called the impact area.

B. The water used at properties located in the "impact area" is supplied by City water service. As a result, there is no need to install private water wells on those properties.

C. The consulting firm of McNamee, Porter & Seeley, Inc. retained by the City has determined that human exposure to the regulated substance in ground water may be reliably restricted by a means other than restrictive covenants and negotiations between the City and private land owners have shown that land use restrictions through restrictive covenants is impractical when dealing with land not owned by the City.

SECTION 2. Repeal and Replacement of Chapter 22A.

Chapter 22A of the Charlevoix City Code is hereby repealed in its entirety and replaced by a new Chapter 22A which shall read in its entirety as follows:

CHAPTER 22A

(2) A water well may be used for groundwater monitoring and/or remediation as part of response activity approved by the MDEQ.

(3) A water well may be used in the event of a public emergency.

2.73 Connection to City water service required. 2.75 Notification to Department of Environmental Quality. If the City ever intends to amend or repeal this Chapter, it shall notify the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality, or its successors, of its intentions no less than thirty (30) days before such amendment or repeal is enacted.

2.76 Nuisance Per Se. A violation of this Chapter is hereby declared to be a public nuisance or nuisance per se and is declared to be offensive to the public health, safety and welfare.

2.77 Court Action for Abatement of Nuisance. The City may take civil action requesting injunctive relief against any person, firm, association, corporation or other entity found to be in violation of this Chapter. Preservation group files suit against city

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Construction has started on the city of Charlevoix's sewer line which will run out Marion Center Road, to the site of the new Charlevoix High School, but efforts to stop the project haven't ended.

As a result of the lawsuit filed May 23 by the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association, the city of Charlevoix will join the Charlevoix School District in Charlevoix County's Circuit Court June 7.

The school district's June court date has been scheduled since early May and is a remand from the Michigan Court of Appeals in Lansing.

Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas, who will hear motions in the school suit at 10 a.m. June 7, just before the city has its turn, dismissed the same case against the district Sept. 14, 2001.

But, the plaintiffs, five private Charlevoix residents, entered an appeal Sept. 27, 2001. Then, over six months later, Pajtas received an order from Judge Richard Allen Griffin of the appellate court, stipulating that he review the case again and submit an opinion no later than June 11, 2002.

The plaintiffs in the appeal, Kenneth Richard Tunison, Kenneth Staley, Robert G. Mossman, Paul Richards and Joseph Seidel, claim the school district's use of funds, garnered from a $18.8 million bond passed by voters in 1999, to extend the city of Charlevoix's sewer to the site of the new Charlevoix High School in Marion Township, is unconstitutional.

But the sewer extension opponents decided not to stop with the school district, they have gone after the city, too.

Since the suit was filed, the environmental group's request for a temporary restraining order was denied by Emmet County Circuit Court Judge Charles Johnson, who sat in for Pajtas, who was on vacation.

The group's request for a preliminary injunction to halt construction will be heard by Pajtas, just after the case against the school district is decided.

"We (the environmental group) are asking the judge to grant a temporary stay, to preserve the status quo and prevent irreparable injury," Jim Olson, attorney for the environmental group and for the private residents, said.

The environmental group claims the city is unlawfully constructing the sewer line. The plaintiffs' brief bases its allegation of unlawful construction on the contested case hearing they brought against the permit, part 41 of the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Act, which was issued by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ).

But city attorney, Jim Young, said the permit is valid.

"If the permit wasn't valid, the DEQ, not the citizens group, would be telling us to stop," he said.

The plaintiffs claim the part 41 permit is invalid until the MDEQ administrative law judge makes a ruling in the contested case, which will be heard Aug. 6-8 .

They are asking Pajtas to halt construction, which started May 28, until the contested permit hearing and until the appellate court has ruled.

"If the court of appeals decides that can't happen (bond dollars for sewer extension) city taxpayers get stuck with the bill and they didn't approve this. This needs to move forward in an orderly fashion," Olson said.

City to continue search for industrial land and $12,000 an acre. To just get sewer and water to the site would cost the city $1.2 million, as it requires both a water tower and pumping system.

LAND

He explained in terms of affordable housing, Marion Township zoning limited the 225 acre parcel, owned by Joe Martinchek, to one unit per two acres. And in comparing affordable housing and the development costs, the city would need five or six units per acre.

Wiesner said the city would also need cash flow to buy the property which would require grants and affordable housing grants "didn't seem to be there."

Second ward Council Member Gabe Campbell was surprised at the outcome. He said he thought council would agree to the Martinchek property purchase. But when he walked out of council chambers at city hall Monday night, after only minutes of closed session discussion, he was grinning ear to ear.

He said, "It's time to pop the cork; we unanimously agreed it was a bad idea. This is one of the happiest days of my life."

The closed session discussion was on council's agenda for its regular meeting June 5. According to a memo written to council by Wiesner, the discussion addition was made after the city received a call May 30 from Martinchek, who said they had until the end of the weekend to make a land acquisition decision.

Martinchek then agreed to extend the timeline until after Monday's meeting

Marion Township landowners who waited anxiously outside the closed doors literally jumped for joy as council filed out of the room. They said this just wasn't the right land for an industrial development.

City sued over sewer line

SEWER

He explained that the city's attempts to construct the line before the contested hearing and the appellate court ruling is an attempt to "render those proceedings moot."

The plaintiff group also claims the city violated the Michigan Environmental Protection Act (MEPA) by not applying it to the project.

The group claims the city violated the act in two ways. First, the group claims construction will cause environmental harm and secondly it claims secondary effects will result.

Young responded to those claims, saying the sewer is in the road right of way with the exception of a small area which will run through the Belvedere Golf Club, where construction crews will use directional drilling. And he added that the township and township zoning, not the city or the sewer, decide secondary growth.

The preliminary injunction request the group is making is similar to a temporary restraining order, but the restraining order is requested on an emergency basis.

Young explained that in making a decision about the preliminary injunction, Pajtas will consider whether there is likely to be permanent harm if the request is not granted and if there is a likelihood the plaintiffs will prevail.

Third Ward Charlevoix City Council member Shirley Gibson, who has repeatedly voted against the sewer extension, said she feels the city could have avoided the law suit.

"They should have waited at least until after the circuit court hearing June 7," she said.

Fifty percent of any costs to the city, associated with this case that are not paid for by the insurance company, will be paid for by the Charlevoix Public School District, as was outlined in the contract the district signed with the city on May 7.

LADDIE

establishment of the scholarship fund at Charlevoix High School, has further helped secure a bright future for Charlevoix, by investing in its students.

"The kids are our future. Ellen and I love the children and want to help as much as we can," he said.

The scholarship, like the Schuilings, is anything but typical. It isn't limited to students at the top of the class or star athletes, it's available to those with an overall C+ average.

"The best part is, it's for the kids. It's tough for kids to bust their hiney for Bs or a C+ average and then, something like this comes around and recognizes their hard work," Prescott said.

Bill said their aim is to encourage all students to continue moving forward after high school.

Recipients aren't required to attend a four year college program; Laddie funds are also awarded to those enrolled in two-year programs and trade schools.

Bill stressed the scholarship's focus is on citizenship and said Laddie candidates aren't only academically successful, they are "people who care about people."

The fund is a memorial to one of the Schuiling family's closest friends, their collie, Laddie who passed away one year ago of old age.

The Schuilings took Laddie into their home seven years ago after finding him in northern Virginia, aimlessly roaming the streets. And like many others in need who have crossed paths with the Schuilings, Laddie quickly found a place to rest in their hearts.

Scholarship recipients are chosen by Charlevoix School District administrators.

Students in the graduating class of 2002 who received the Laddie Scholarship are: Ashley Ager, Dennis Avery, Zachary Bajos, Karlee Barnard, Lee Barrett, Heather Belding, Andrew Bergmann, Robert Boss, Allen Brooks, Tim Daining, Keith Daly, Brandon Danbert, Stephanie Dickinson, James Dilworth, Kyle Dobrowolski, Selah Drenth, Taryn Drost, Kara Field, William Foster, Kornelius Friske, Andrew Gels, Nathan Holmes, Rachel Kanine, Amy Kennedy, Amy Kurtz, Adrianna Lackaff, Christopher Loper, Melissa Lopez, Katherine Madison, William Marcotte, Jennifer McClellan, Bonnie Mesa, Amber Miller, Jennifer Mosoryak, Jayme Murray, Chelsea Newcomb, Lindsey Pace, Scott Parrish, Lesley Pollard, Jill Potter, Laura Potter, Ryan Rafacz, Bradley Ramsey, Kelly Reid, Megan Richards, Kathryn Ricks, Ashley Rieck, Marie Serrels, Roscoe Serrels, Ben Shepherd, Zachary Simmons, Anastasia Soullier, Benjamin Speigl, Michael Sullivan, Kati Swenor, Krista Swenor, Elizabeth Tebeau, Andrea Tuck, Kelly Way, Alexandra Wilson, Adrienne Winchester, Elizabeth Withrow, Elissa Wood and Grant Woods.

Judge rules against school in sewer issue

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A ruling last week by Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas left the city of Charlevoix and the Charlevoix School District scrambling.

Pajtas reversed his September 2001 decision in a case five Charlevoix residents brought against the Charlevoix School District and now, the city of Charlevoix may need to find a new funding source for its sewer extension along Marion Center Road.

Pajtas ruled June 7 it is unlawful for proceeds from the $18.8 million bond passed by Charlevoix School District voters on Oct. 11, 2000, to fund construction of a new high school in Marion Township; to pay for the city sewer extension to the site.

"Finally, we've had vindication," Karen Ferguson, of Traverse City's Olson and Bzdok, the firm representing the plaintiffs, said after Pajtas made his ruling.

The case was remanded to Pajtas on April 16 by the Michigan Court of Appeals. The plaintiffs, Kenneth Richard Tunison, Kenneth Staley, Robert G. Mossman, Paul Richards and Joseph Seidel, all of Charlevoix, filed the appeal after Pajtas dismissed claims against the school Sept. 14, 2001.

They claim the district's use of bond money to extend the city sewer to the new Charlevoix High School in Marion Township is unconstitutional and Pajtas ultimately agreed.

However, on this same day, he did not grant the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association's request for a preliminary injunction against the city of Charlevoix to stop construction. This group's membership includes the plaintiffs from the school lawsuit.

Pajtas said, in granting a preliminary injunction against the city, the environmental group must prove irreparable harm would result if the request is not granted. And he told the environmental group's attorney, also Ferguson, proof of irreparable harm wasn't established because if the permit is found invalid and the city has installed the pipe, it can be removed.

Candidate charged for carrying knife

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix city mayoral candidate Steven Richard Smith was recently charged with carrying a concealed weapon in connection with a traffic stop on May 11.

According to a court affidavit, Smith's vehicle was stopped by Charlevoix Police Officer Scott Hankins on June 11 in the city for a lane use violation and dangerous pass.

Hankins stated while speaking with Smith, he noticed a large "hunting knife," that was almost 5 inches long, in the storage compartment of the driver's side door. When asked about it, Smith said he always carries a knife.

Hankins also stated he observed a box of 22 ammunition in the same compartment as the knife and he asked if Smith had any more weapons in the car. Smith responded that he had a 22 caliber rifle behind his seat that he was going to use for target practice on his property.

The rifle was encased and unloaded, Hankins reported. A loaded magazine was also found in the driver's side door compartment.

Motel owners cited for not cleaning up

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

After five months of playing the waiting game, the city of Charlevoix has taken action to have the site of the Silver Birch Motel, at 1530 Bridge Street, where a structure fire occurred in mid-January, cleaned up.

"I think the city has been more than patient, but we've reached a point where we're tired of waiting," Charlevoix City Police Chief, Dennis Halverson, said.

To move the clean-up process along, the city issued Silver Birch owners, Patti and Phil Christ, a citation for violating the city's nuisance ordinance.

"The city police department plans to enforce the city's nuisance ordinance to eliminate the nuisance/blight situation as quickly as we can through whatever means we have to, to resolve this. The city has waited long enough for something to happen there," Halverson said.

During the morning of June 5, Halverson prepared the legal paperwork to get the citation issued. But serving the couple with the citation was a challenge. He said the Christs failed to supply the city with their current Rogers City address.

However, he was able to contact the Christs and issue the citation by fax June 5. The citation acts as a summons, ordering the Christs to appear in court.

A court date has not yet been scheduled in Charlevoix County's 90th District Court in this matter. Patti told Halverson her attorney would set up a date for the matter to be heard.

Halverson estimated the case will be heard within the next couple weeks.

If the Christs don't respond, a judge could enter a default, which, according to city attorney Jim Young means, the city wins without a hearing or trial.

"Obviously, our first goal would be to have the current owners voluntarily complete the demolition. However, it appears at this point, the city has to take enforcement action against the Christs to get that accomplished," Halverson said.

At the June 3 city council meeting, Young told council the city can't go in and do the clean up until the situation is brought to court, at which time the judge may order them to clean up the site. Or, with approval from the judge, the city could clean the site and put a lean on the property to recoup expenses incurred.

The city may also sue the Christs to get the clean up ball rolling.

Late last week, Larry Levengood, Northwest Community Health Agency supervisor, was called to the motel on a trash complaint. He said a resident near the site was concerned refuse being stored in one of the motel rooms on the ground floor would attract rodents.

Levengood said he plans to team with the city to get the area cleaned up and added that the whole building could become an attraction for rodents.

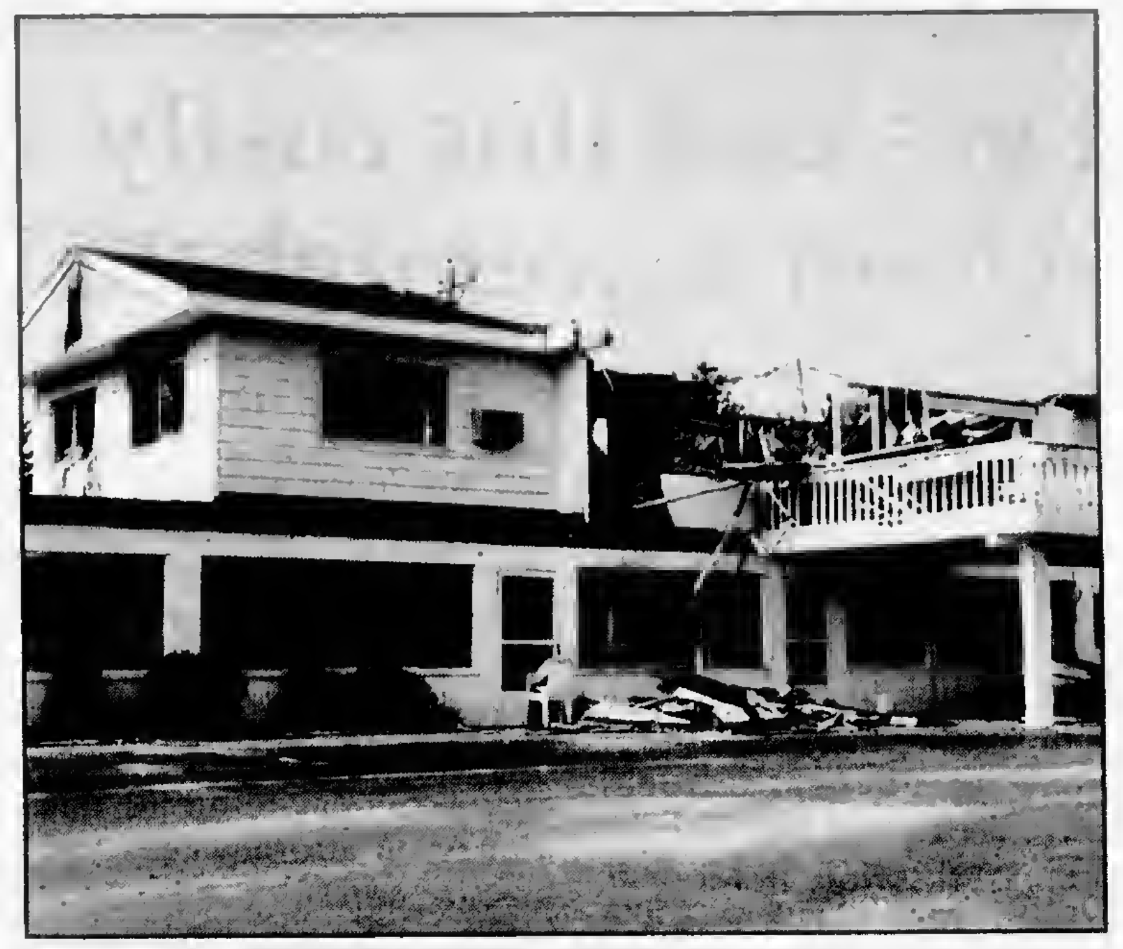
"Something should be done to secure it and clean it up," he said.

The fire, which consumed the second floor living area and caused water damage to the first floor of the motel, broke out in the early morning hours on Jan. 19, 2002. Firefighters responded at 6 a.m.

In a previous interview, Charlevoix City Fire Chief Doug Carver said the fire started in the second floor kitchen area where Patti was living.

There were three motel guests staying at the Silver Birch at the time of the fire, all of who were evacuated by Patti, before firefighters arrived. The motel had a total of eight units available for rent.

Neither of the Christs returned phone calls made regarding this matter.



The Silver Birch Motel still sits on US-31 with extensive damage following a Jan. 19 fire. The city has cited the owners of the motel for violating the nuisance ordinance. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Let's end this costly school sewer debate

EDITORIAL

For many, the ruling came as a shock.

Charlevoix Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas reversed his September ruling and said the Charlevoix school district's use of bond money for a sewer line to the new high school on Marion Center Road is unconstitutional (page one).

The school district was pretty confident it would win this case, however, when it comes to court, one can never be assured of the outcome.

With this ruling, the school district is left with no way to pay for the sewer line that was already under construction.

The city of Charlevoix, which is constructing the line, promptly voted to stop construction until the funding issues could be resolved.

It seems pretty simple; using bond money to pay the city for a sewer line is against the state constitution. So, where do we get the money?

One option that has been suggested is the school district take it out of the general fund. But, the residents who sued the school over this issue say this is just as wrong and vow to sue again.

Perhaps it is time the school district consider other sewage options, such as a septic system. Yes, a sewer line would have been great out to the new high school, but is it really worth spending all this money on attorney fees and time in court?

The voters and school district wanted a school. They got one. A fantastic one by the looks of it. This sewer issue just seems to be an annoying side issue for the community now — a remnant of those divisive days after voters approved the bond.

It is time for both sides to end this and get on with their lives. The district has its school, let's give the group of residents against the sewer line their wish and build a septic system.

Then everyone is happy and the lawsuits will hopefully end.

As for the portion of the sewer line already constructed by the city using taxpayer money, this is city council's problem. Let them explain it to the voters.

Historical society has many activities throughout summer

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

It's well worth your time to go and see the new changes that have taken place at the Charlevoix Historical Society this summer — and do bring your children and visiting house-guests with you!

Four years ago, Karen Lewis took charge of the Exhibit Committee. No longer are canvas paintings pierced with screws and hung on walls as in those early days. Karen, an experienced curator of mini-exhibits at the Smithsonian and elsewhere, now lovingly supervises the display of precious artifacts.

You may enjoy looking at a 1903 Cadillac carbide center headlight or the early 8 foot hand painted fish sign from Ward's Marina or the original Ernest Hemingway-Hadley Richardson marriage license.

This summer's exquisite fashion display is composed of a stunning all black and white exhibit.

Karen tells me she was inspired by a black and white oil painting of a golfer and his female companion, which originally hung at the old Inn Hotel and is now owned by the Historical Society.

Adjacent to the painting, Karen casually displays a beach collection of a black wool bathing suit, white rubber beach shoes and lace cap; a black and white tennis dress, a man's cutaway dinner jacket and a beaded afternoon dress from the Swinton collection.

More interesting items spill out from a black steamer trunk and footlocker.

There is a mystery donation that was found in a closet in a summer cottage at the Belvedere Club consisting of a turn-of-the century hand sewn, bridal trousseau that was never worn. Made of fine linen, hundreds of hours had been spent on the pignoir, half slip, bloomers and camisole, which are all trimmed with crochet lace insets, rows of tiny pleats and real shell buttons. (What a far cry from the thong underwear being worn today!)

One can't help but wonder what tragedy befell the bride or groom, causing the wedding plans to be canceled? Was there a fatal illness? A drowning? A family dispute? We will never know!

More recently, the historical society has been fortunate to take over additional space in the former Harsha House, thanks to the generosity of two major contributors, Andrew Lonyo and Virginia Roundtree.

The extra space now houses a research library for visitors, an office for the directors, David Miles and Betsy Reynolds, and a conservation area for Karen Lewis and Cynthia Garland. Here the two women steam and stitch, fold and roll the delicate garments in acid free boxes and tissue paper when they are not on display.

Another one of the Societies' recent new projects is to preserve paintings done by former local artists, Irene Young, Rosa Nettleton, Lyle Miles and Marie Fessenden, and others, in what is called the "Adopt a Painting Program."

Twenty-four paintings have already been restored and preserved by skilled preservationist and professional, Nina Martin.

The Charlevoix Historical Society is located at 103 State St. next to the Congregational Church and is open this summer from 1 to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday. Please go!

Open meetings charges a smokescreen

Editor:

I attended the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners meeting on April 24, 2002. I need to take this opportunity to express my thoughts concerning this meeting, Mary Beth Kur, and the Open Meetings Act situation.

I was outraged with the lack of respect the board was treated with. The majority of the audience was disruptive, rude and disrespectful when 20-30 people stood up, started talking, milled around and finally filed out after the vote for Mr. Peter Patterson's services. Even more, a small group including Kur, continued to talk when the board members were trying to continue the business at hand. I expected more from an elected official.

It is my opinion that Kur is on a very dangerous power trip. Attention is attention whether it's good or bad. I feel the alleged open meeting violation is nothing but a smoke screen to remove herself from answering for the shady circumstances concerning Mr. John Jarema's dismissal.

Why should $12,744 be taken from the commissioners budget? Kur spent quite a bit of taxpayers' money and her salaried time consulting Patterson and should therefore be responsible for it.

This entire situation was set into motion by Kur, for Kur. The board members directly involved have been sucked into a personal vengeance issue from Kur toward Jarema and I for one am completely disgusted by it. I agree with Murry Kilbgour's

(page 5, May 22 edition) statement of how "the money could've been better spent," but let us place responsibility where it lies... with Kur!

The April 24 meeting has touched home for me. I was the victim of an assault and battery case in Charlevoix County in January of 2001. The case was rescheduled in June 2001 and I notified the Prosecuting Attorney's office that day of my recent address change. I was the key witness in the case and it ended by being dismissed because I was never notified of the court's re-scheduled date and time!

The Prosecuting Attorney's Office told me, two days later, that they had my new address on file but for some reason it was never put in the computer or placed on the report. That was the end of it. I feel my not being notified was more unjust than this open meetings situation. I wish Kur would've done half the job taking care of the law concerning my case as she's done prosecuting members of the commission. Perhaps my case was one placed in Jarema's agenda that "mysteriously vanished" from his office.

Finally, if the commissioners are required to give Kur an apology, by God so should she! For her arrogance, the money she's costing the taxpayers and her rude and inappropriate behavior at the April 24 meeting. I realize people want this to just go away, but let's remember where, why and from whom this all began.

No need for convention center

Editor:

Convention center? Why in the world would we need — or want — a convention center in our little town? The fact that it might mean more hotels, among others, is in my opinion, not a plus. Do the majority of the people really want to live in a larger city? That seems to be the way we are heading. We don't need more expansion — we need better use of what we already have. Most of us live here because of the quaintness, comfort and safety of a small town, and we are definitely on our way to ruining those very things that brought us here in the first place. I understand that there are many who would like to increase the job market here, however, you can't have it all. My husband and I live here on a very reduced income and we chose that in order to live in Charlevoix. I personally have not spoken to one single person that thinks this growth and expansion is a good idea — obviously there are some that do — but maybe we need to step back and take a really hard, long look at the possible results of our actions?

Thank you Schuilings

Editor:

It has been so refreshing and encouraging this past week to hear about the Schuiling's generous gift to the youth of Charlevoix. ('Laddie' on page 1 of last week's edition of the Charlevoix Courier)

It is in such contrast to those who are wasting such huge amounts of money to stymie the efforts of the school district.

How wonderful it would have been if all those thousands of dollars could have gone to educate our young people instead of lawyer's fees and newspaper ads.

How sad and divisive it has been, when this should have been an exciting time in the history of Charlevoix — the building of a long-needed high school.

Hats off to the Schuilings, who are true benefactors who care enough to invest in the future of our youth.

Thank you blood donors

Editor:

I want to thank all of the blood donors and volunteers in the Charlevoix area who supported the American Red Cross blood drive on May 30 in Charlevoix.

The citizens of Charlevoix proved once again how much they could accomplish in one day by not only providing everything needed for a successful blood drive, but also planting petunias to beautify the city for the summer. I find it truly inspiring, to say the least!

I'd like to thank the Community Reformed Church for accommodating the Red Cross personnel, my great staff or volunteers and the 148 donors who came in to give blood.

Great results were achieved by lots of teamwork and dedication.

There will be an American Red Cross blood drive during the Venetian Festival from 1 to 6:45 p.m., July 25 at the Reformed Church. Then, the same location on Sept. 26.

The Great Lakes Region of the American Red Cross needs 3,800 people to donate blood each week to maintain a week's supply of blood for patients in about 75 Michigan hospitals.

Do you realize that a person injured in a car crash can sometimes need four to 40 pints of blood?

Please consider donating blood at an upcoming bloodmobile.

Each week, the Charlevoix Courier will publish a picture of some item on a local landmark or building. We invite our readers to send in their guesses on where this picture was taken. Big Rock employees named to committees

Two employees at Consumers Energy's Big Rock Point Restoration Project have been recognized for their expertise and will serve on state and national committees.

Employee services manager Ellen Zienert was appointed by Gov. John Engler to the Michigan Workforce Investment Board.

Zienert and her 49 fellow board members will serve in an advisory capacity to the governor and Dr. Barbara Bolin, director of the Michigan Department of Career Development. Members of the board work to develop and continuously improve a statewide workforce investment system.

The appointment was effective May 26. Zienert will represent business interests during her one-year term.

"We have assembled a talented group of state and private sector professionals to serve on the Michigan Workforce Investment Board," Engler said in his appointment letter. "With their expertise and guidance, Michigan will be able to better identify, develop a strategy for, and meet the personal and professional needs of businesses and people. When we invest in the education and development of a skilled workforce, we are investing in the stability of Michigan's economic future."

"I am delighted to be representing the interests of northwest Michigan," Zienert said. "The work this board will do will help ensure the success of our communities."

Zienert was appointed by the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners in January 2000 to serve on the Northwest Michigan Workforce Development Board. Her work with that organization led to her appointment to the statewide board.

Tracy Goble, environmental services and emergency planning superintendent, was elected by her peers to the American Nuclear Society's Decontamination, Decommissioning and Reutilization Executive Committee.

The committee is responsible for promoting the development and use of skills and technologies that help industry professionals optimally manage decontamination, decommissioning and reutilization projects.

Goble's expertise includes environmental monitoring, site characterization, waste management, industrial safety, water chemistry, emergency planning and license termination. Her three-year term began in June.

"I'm excited to have the opportunity to share the success we've had at Big Rock Point with the rest of the industry," Goble said. "At the same time I am looking forward to learning about new technologies and processes that we will be able to implement at Big Rock Point."

Businesses report slow start to season

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff Writer

A combination of fluctuating weather and a slow economy has caused many businesses to notice a decrease in business for this time of year.

"The amount it (business) was down was directly related to the weather," Tom Pfeifle, general manager of the Weathervane Terrace Inn and Suites in Charlevoix said.

According to Pfeifle, the hotel was down 15 percent over the Memorial Day weekend.

"A dozen hotels in Petoskey and Charlevoix have been down," he said.

Candy Bishaw, the manager of Points North Inn Condominiums in Charlevoix, said business was down compared to the usual influx the hotel takes in.

Even other businesses reported slow starts to summer.

Pat Henige, owner of Village Inn Pizza, said business has been "on the low side of average."

Even though business wasn't great, it wasn't unusual for the Memorial Day weekend.

"It's not a hugely busy weekend like later in the summer," she said.

Some businesses may have been affected by the economy as well as the weather.

Tim Parker of Harbor Industries Inc. in Charlevoix, said the year started off slow.

"Our industry tends to have some fluctuation, but it's not a traditionally slow time of year for us," he said.

Parker said the exact cause of the delayed start is difficult to pinpoint.

"It's hard to say how much was the economy versus the time of year," he said.

According to Parker, some employees took a voluntary layoff for a month.

Jacqueline Mabee, president and owner of The Clothing Company, said the economy and the aftermath of Sept. 11 caused many shipments to arrive late.

"A lot were import goods and a lot slowed down because they're checking better," she said.

According to Mabee, business isn't as good as it could be during April, May and June.

"It's typical of what we've seen last year. I don't think it's different than any other year," she said.

She added that business hasn't been wonderful for the last couple of years.

Despite a slow period, the business summer brings in seems promising.

"Summers tend to be busy because that's when the customers tend to want the product," Parker said

72nd Annual Charlevoix Venetian Festival 2002

JUN 2002

Youths arrested for breaking and entering

A joint investigation by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office and the Charlevoix City Police has apprehed two Charlevoix youths for two breaking and enterings that police believe will solve a recent string of crimes in the area.

The two youths, Michael Ivan Martin and James Desy Marsh, both 17, were arrested recently and charged in connection of a breaking and entering of a concession stand at the Charlevoix Country Club and the breaking and entering and theft of a floor safe from the Charlevoix County Church of the Nazarene on Waller Road, June 3.

Both of the teenagers are lodged in the Charlevoix County Jail awaiting arraignment.

The arrests came about after sheriff's deputies found a 1996 Dodge Caravan in a Charlevoix private resort club, where it was abandoned after being extensively damaged.

It was determined by law enforcement officers that the van had been stolen June 5 in Central Lake by another Charlevoix teenager.

Interviews with this teenager revealed that he had been involved in numerous breaking and enterings in the Charlevoix area over the last several weeks with Martin and Marsch, Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater said. The teenager then implicated the two other teenagers in the building breaking and enterings.

The teens were confronted with this information and confessed to their roles, the sheriff said.

Deputies recovered the safe, which had been heavily damaged in an attempt to open it, from a garage on East Lincoln Street. A large quantity of stolen items from numerous automobile breaking and enterings was also recovered, as well as alcohol and snacks from the Charlevoix Country Club.

Charlevoix city police officers had earlier in the week recovered a wheel chair from the Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene, which had been used to cart the safe away. The wheel chair was found smashed on an embankment off the end off West Dixon Street along the Lake Michigan beach.

According to officials, Martin and Marsh have admitted to being involved in up to 100 car breaking and enterings in the Charlevoix and East Jordan area over the last several weeks.

Most vehicles were unlocked and most thefts took place at night.

Investigators are requesting anyone who has had their vehicle entered in this area over the last several weeks to contact either the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office at (231) 547-4461 or the Charlevoix Police Department at (231) 547-3258.

A small quantity of table linens have also been recovered.

Officials also say the investigation is continuing and additional arrests are anticipated.

Halverson, Wieland re-elected to board

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Only 2.4 percent of Charlevoix School District voters came out to cast their vote in the June 10 Charlevoix School Board election.

School board members, Dennis Halverson and Ardeth Wieland, who ran unopposed, were re-elected.

Halverson received 150 of the 176 total ballots cast for his seat and Weiland received 153 of the 176 for her seat.

There were six write-in votes but none of the candidates written on the ballot were eligible as they had not filed a declaration of intent by 4 p.m., June 7 at the school superintendent's office, 208 Clinton Street in Charlevoix.

Halverson, Charlevoix City Police Chief, has been a board member for four years and is currently one of three board trustees.

Wieland has held a seat on the board for 27 years and is currently the board vice-president.

Two men injured in accident on Old US-31

Two people were injured in a two vehicle accident around 4:30 p.m. June 9 on Burgess Road at Old US-31 North in Hayes Township.

According to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office, Kyle Louiselle, 19, of Charlevoix, was traveling west on Old US-31 in a 1990 Ford pickup when William Eaton, 54, of Charlevoix riving a 2001 Chevrolet S-10 pickup pulled out in front of Louiselle from Burgess Road.

The Louiselle vehicle attempted to avoid the crash but was unable to and broadsided the Eaton vehicle at the driver's side door.

Charlevoix City Jaws of Life was used to free Eaton from his vehicle.

Both Eaton and Louiselle were transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by the Charlevoix Emergency Medical Service. Louiselle was treated and released and Eaton is still hospitalized with serious injuries.

Charlevoix Township Fire Department assisted the EMS and Jaws at the scene.

The crash is still under investigation.

Substation construction

Construction of the industrial substation off Martin Road in Charlevoix Township started in mid-May. According to Charlevoix City Electric Superintendent Ed Whitley, it is expected to be complete in seven weeks. Whitley said the new substation was needed to meet demand, as the city's services have grown. Power is transferred to the substation, to small transformers on electrical poles. The city electrical system services the city of Charlevoix and Hayes, Marion, Charlevoix and Eveline townships. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Smith says he carries knife for various work reasons

SMITH

According to Smith, he carries knives for his work. He said he is a merchant marine and never knows when he is going to need a knife to cut a line.

He added he also works for the Villager Pub, in downtown Charlevoix, as a meat cutter. Due to this, he usually has four to five different kinds of knives for different kinds of cutting jobs.

"Knives are very much involved in my work," he said. "I was pretty amazed to find out a knife in a sheath and in open sight is a concealed weapon."

Smith was cited for careless driving by Hankins on May 11. Police submitted paperwork on the concealed weapon to the Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney's Office. The Prosecuting Attorney later decided to charge Smith with a concealed weapon's violation.

He will be arraigned for the concealed weapon's charge at 11 a.m., June 18 in Charlevoix District Court.

Smith added he is a hard worker who works from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m., five to six days a week. In addition to being a merchant marine and cutting meat at the Villager Pub, Smith said he works at the Pine Lake Club, Charlevoix Country Club and C&O Club.

City stopping work on sewer to school

SEWER

Even so, while there is no order from Pajtas to stop construction, Charlevoix City Council met at noon, June 8, in council chambers for a special meeting and voted to put the project on hold until funding issues are worked out.

They concluded to finish constructing the Belvedere Golf Club portion of the project and to stop there until the school comes up with alternative payment plans or waste disposal plans. Third ward council member Shirley Gibson was the only vote against this plan.

As of June 10 a new source of funding or options for the project had not been decided.

"We're going to regroup and see what options we have. We do have money in our general fund to pay for it," Sturock said.

According to district treasurer Judy Boss, the general fund is expected to end the year at $3.8 million.

Pajtas said he ruled the school could not use funds from the general obligation bond to fund its contract with the city, but that he didn't rule it couldn't use other funds, because that wasn't the issue before him.

However, co-council for the five plaintiffs in this case, Frederick M. Baker, Jr., of Lansing's Honigman, Miller, Schwartz and Cohn, LLP., argues the school can not use general funds.

Baker explained that under the school code, school aid funds are to be used for teacher salaries and operating expenses and if the board attempted to use funds in its general fund for this project, it would be a "misuse of public funds."

Baker said the only way he sees it possible for the project to continue is if the city funds it.

Pajtas said a number of factors influenced his decision in the case brought against the school district, including some new information.

"At the earlier hearing it looked as though there were no viable alternatives available, that somewhat changed today," he said.

The plaintiffs entered into evidence five alternative on-site septic systems. But, whether any on-site alternatives will be used at the school, which is scheduled to open Sept. 3, has not been decided.

"It's too early to tell what the plans will be," Sturock said.

School Board President Allen Telgenhof assured the 15 people who attended Monday's school board meeting, the new high school will open on time and the district would have a clearer picture by the end of this week as to how it will move forward.

Beyond looking at alternatives, Pajtas applied the law and found the school's payment plan violates both the Michigan Constitution and the State of Michigan's Revised School Code.

Pajtas explained the school could use a revenue bond, which is paid for by revenues from the project it is funding, to fund the sewer expansion, but cannot use a general obligation bond, which is paid for by taxpayers, and is the type of bond the district has.

He said use of the general obligation bond to fund the extension violates the state school code.

"The revised school code explicitly states you can only use general obligation bond revenue for capital expenditures or acquiring a capital asset," Pajtas said.

According to the contract the district signed with the city in May, the city maintains ownership of the sewer line after it is run, so the school isn't acquiring a capital asset. The school is then reimbursed through tap-in fees over a 20 year period.

"The school is granting its state credit in aid of pubic and private corporations without agreement of repayment," Baker said.

The reimbursement schedule agreed to in the school's contract with the city also weighed on Pajtas' decision.

"It was evident from statements that no one expected tap-in fees to come close to paying the $550,000 plus cost to put the infrastructure in. It would be impractical to conclude the tap-in fees would provide sufficient revenue to pay for it," he said.

Crews are finishing up the Belvedere Golf Club portion of the Marion Center Road sewer, before repairing the course and stopping work until funding issues can be worked out. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Pajtas' ruling also supported the plaintiffs' claim that the board's conduct of issuing an interest free loan to the city violates the 1963 state constitution which maintains that credit of the state, a general obligation bond, can't be used for any person, association or corporation, public or private.

The school district attempted to claim an exception to his rule, which is granted to cities and villages, claiming it is a governmental entity. But, Pajtas said this exception wasn't applicable because the school is not a village or city and the wording in the constitution doesn't include "governmental entities."

According to district attorney Bill Ewald, of Saginaw's Braun Kendrick and Finkbeiner, part of the school's regrouping effort will include contemplation of appealing Pajtas' ruling.

Michigan, Belvedere may be finished by weekend

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Life on Belvedere and Michigan avenues may return to normal this weekend.

CCMS and Associates Inc., of Sault Saint Marie, the general contractor for street projects on Michigan and Belvedere avenues, claim they'll have work on both streets done by Saturday, but city administrators aren't confident in that assurance.

"I think it's optimistic," city manager, Mike Wiesner said.

But, CCMS project foreman Warren Gordon is sticking to that date.

"We're moving a lot better now and should be done by June 14 as long as the weather holds," he said.

On June 11, CCMS crews were installing long awaited pavement on Belvedere Avenue and were working to finish sidewalk on the north side of the street by Friday.

The projects were scheduled to be complete by Memorial Day, but city administrators claim CCMS failed to pay its subcontractors and material providers so it didn't have workers or products to work with. This delayed both projects and angered residents and business owners.

Bruce MacArthur, a Michigan Avenue resident said he has not been inconvenienced by extended construction time on Michigan Avenue, but is happy he isn't living over on Belvedere Avenue, where the delay has had a greater impact.

Belvedere residents told Charlevoix City Council at its June 3 meeting the street was like a war zone and chastised the city for going into the tourist season, "an important time for Charlevoix," with both regularly traveled roads, torn up.

In spite of the setbacks, the city of Charlevoix has stood by its choice and after a meeting two weeks ago between city administrators, representatives from the project's Iowa based bonding company and from CCMS and Associates Inc. opted to finish with the projects as planned.

"We feel this is the best way. Are we totally satisfied though....no," Wiesner said.

However, since then, work has been moving along. As of the June 6 CCMS status report, curbing along Belvedere was complete and gravel was being spread on the road's surface.

This week, contractors are expected to finish paving on both streets, and over on Belvedere, the less complete of the two projects, driveways where pavement has been disrupted are scheduled for completion. This week will also include spreading of topsoil, seeding and mulch.

As of June 11, the city was not charging CCMS the $500 daily fine it is entitled to charge by contract.

Workers on Wheels program offered in Charlevoix, Emmet

The Workers on Wheels (WOW) Program is underway in Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

Transportation is often a major barrier for people seeking employment in rural northern Michigan. Workers on Wheels breaks down this barrier by providing vehicles to people in need.

The local WOW program is coordinated by representatives from area human service agencies and sponsored Goodwill Industries of northern Michigan.

Potential candidates for receiving a vehicle are referred to the local committee by representatives from the Human Service Coordinating Body.

Community support is the foundation of the WOW program. Vehicles are donated by individuals/businesses to the Charlevoix/Emmet WOW program. Goodwill Ind. then works in conjunction with the local representatives to match up candidates and vehicles.

All paperwork is handled by Goodwill and donors are provided with a receipt for tax purposes. Your donation directly supports families in your community. A vehicle donated from Emmet/Charlevoix counties stays in Emmet/Charlevoix counties.

For more information about the WOW program or to donate a vehicle, contact Charlie at Goodwill Industries in Emmet County at 348-1600 extension 205 or Charlevoix at 547-4471, extension 2.

Baseball team closes season with district loss

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports Writer

The Charlevoix Rayders baseball squad closed out its 2002 campaign with a loss in the district finals to Boyne City, 7-1.

The Rayders reached the finals by beating Elk Rapids, 9-3.

Prior to district play, Charlevoix finished the regular season with doubleheader splits with Elk Rapids and Bellaire.

"It was sad to see the season come to a close for us," coach Brian Certa said. "They (the players) were a fun group to coach and be around."

Boyne jumped out early in the district finals and rode the pitching of Michael Vasquez to the district crown. For the Rayders, Rob Boss provided the only firepower with a solo homer. Neil Friske provided the only other hit.

Dennis Avery stymied the Elk Rapids batters in early district play, going the distance and striking out 11 in the victory. Boss and Friske had two hits apiece for Charlevoix. Patrick Gowell, Nate Teuscher, Chris Loper and Matt Kochanny added singles.

"We came out early hitting the ball aggressively," Certa commented.

Against Bellaire, the Rayders dropped game one, 4-3, as Bellaire rallied to score two runs in the 5th and two in the 6th to overcome a 3-0 deficit. Jake Teuscher started and pitched four scoreless innings.

Boss again keyed the hitting attack with two hits, including a two-run homer in the first inning. Ben Speigl collected two singles and Matt Kilkenny doubled. Nate Teuscher, Friske and Matt Burtt all singled.

"Jake had another sound performance on the hill," Certa said. "He was consistent, had no walks and kept the ball down."

Charlevoix put it all together in the nightcap, trouncing Bellaire, 11-0. Avery and Kreg Wager combined on the two-hit shutout.

Gowell led the hitters with a single and a triple. Avery and Speigl each had one hit and two RBI while Kilkenny had a hit and scored two runs.

The formula was reversed in the twinbill against Elk Rapids. The Rayders rolled to a 7-1 win in the opener and dropped a 7-5 decision in the nightcap.

Jake Teuscher went the distance for the win in game one, yielding only five hits and one walk while striking out nine.

Boss paced the hitters with a single and double. Gowell and Nate Teuscher also had two hits each. Avery drove in three runs.

A Rayder rally came up short in game two as the Elks were staked to a 7-0 lead but Charlevoix closed to within two. Errors led to four unearned runs off Chris Loper who struck out five in four innings of work in relief.

Nate Teuscher and Kilkenny each had two hits. Friske, Boss, Wager and Nick Schwein added hits for the Rayder cause.

Charlevoix finished the season with a 14-15 record overall and 7-5 in the Lake Michigan Conference.

Charlevoix girl to tour with international choir

Vicki Stevens, a Charlevoix resident and a junior at Concord Academy Boyne, has been selected to tour with Blue Lake International Choir this summer.

While attending Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp last July, Stevens auditioned among hundreds of other students for entrance into the International Choir tour and also the International Jazz Band tour.

She was notified in November that she was not selected to go to Europe with the Jazz Band, but was selected to be one of 95 participants in the International Choir.

Students are selected for the International Program based on their audition, their written application and faculty/staff evaluations. Artistic ability, maturity, manners and character play an important role in selection as participants of the International Program not only perform at a high level of proficiency, but also serve as ambassadors of the United States.

After one week of intensive rehearsal, the choir will travel to France, the Netherlands and Germany, from June 15 through July 7. The group will spend most of their time in Germany, visiting several areas. While on tour, the group will present a performance in each community, staying in private homes, with host families. The choir will be performing in several European cathedrals. The musical selections include a repertoire of both sacred and secular music.

The highlight of the trip will be performing at St. Michael's Cathedral in Hamburg, Germany. When the group returns to the states, they will travel for a three-day mini Midwest tour in Michigan, culminating the experience with a performance July 17 in the bandshell at the Alpena Waterfront. The choir is directed by Dr. "Doc" Earl Louder.

Stevens, the daughter of Greg and Ginger Stevens, has spent most of her life in music, beginning when she was 6 years old, playing the violin. She spent many hours "fiddling" on her violin with her grandfather, Bill Stevens.

From the violin she learned to play several other instruments, including viola, flute, saxophone, clarinet and piano. Two years ago, she became interested in singing; she began taking voice lessons, studying under Jim Owen, and most recently under Jeff Londgren of Londgren Music Studio. Stevens will be singing first alto while on tour.

Regarding her upcoming trip, Stevens thinks it is the chance of a lifetime to travel abroad, learning first hand about other cultures while using her gifts and talents.

She said, "When I first heard I was selected for the choir, I was so excited! I thought, oh my gosh, I made it!"

Vicki Stevens will tour with the Blue Lake International Choir this summer. (Courtesy photo)

Youth Advisory Committee fills grants

When the Charlevoix County Community Foundation's Youth Advisory Committee (YAC) surveyed area high school students last year, they found that kids share several concerns.

Along with frequently mentioned issues like substance abuse and depression, YAC members learned that more recreational programs and opportunities for young people rank near the top of the Charlevoix County teens' wish list.

With that in mind, the YAC voted to award grants totaling over $26,000 to support a number of sports, cultural, mentoring, and counseling programs targeted at area youth.

Projects chosen to receive YAC funding and the amount of their grants are:

- Beaver Island Community School — $1,080 to purchase softball and soccer equipment for the Beaver Island Youth Consortium.
- Boyne City Little League — $2,000 to purchase a batting cage.
- Camp Daggett — $750 to match an Adventure Education Scholarship Fund for students who would not otherwise be able to participate in the Adventure Education programs.
- Challenge Mountain — $2,500 to help create a barrier-free nature trail to expand summer programming for special needs children.
- Charlevoix Area Community Pool — $1,275 to purchase a programmable pace clock.
- Child and Family Services of Northwest Michigan — $1,500 to provide respite services for foster parents in Charlevoix County.
- CHIP Prevention Services — $2,000 to provide a middle school peer mentoring program to help prevent substance abuse.
- Crooked Tree Arts Center — $2,000 to provide a Spring Arts Festival for youth and adults with special needs.
- Jordan River Arts Council — $3,000 to provide a performance arts series for area elementary schools.
- MSU Extension, Charlevoix County — $1,000 to establish a scholarship fund to enable youth to participate in 4-H programs; and $1,100 to purchase a set of goals for Boyne Area Youth Soccer.
- Northwest Michigan Human Services Agency — $275 to provide local match support for the Head Start Reading is Fundamental program.
- Planned Parenthood Northern Michigan — $2,000 to support the "How to Say No" peer education program which encourages healthy choices by young people.
- Raven Hill Discovery Center — $3,000 to provide matching support for More Connections, a state-funded program linking science, history and art.
- Third Level Crisis Intervention Center — $2,225 to provide in-school counseling and prevention services for youth.

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation's Youth Advisory Committee has now distributed more than $359,000 to programs benefiting young people since the group started making grants in 1994. Money for grant-making comes from a special endowment called the Charlevoix County Youth Fund that is held by the Community Foundation.

That fund, which was spearheaded by financial support from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, now has assets of almost $1.1 million.

Members of the Community Foundation Youth Advisory Committee are: Kellie Gillespie, Kristen Russell and Danielle Cary from Beaver Island; Riley O'Brien, Erin Moriarity and Reed Ameel from Boyne City; Adam Utley, Megan Pernicano and Ashley Mauchmar from Boyne Falls; Patrick Gowell, Travis Smith and AnnaKate Trubilowicz from Charlevoix; and Jeremy Booze, Patrick Teske and Tabitha Grover from East Jordan.

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation and its Youth Advisory Committee will again accept grant requests this fall. For more information about the Community Foundation or grant-making guidelines, contact the office at (231) 536-2440.

Library, historical society to present works of Nettleton

Two local, volunteer organizations, the Friends of the Library and the Charlevoix Historical Society, are joining together to present a retrospective of the life and work of Rosa Nettleton.

The exhibit will open to the public from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., July 12-14 at the Charlevoix Depot Museum located at the end of East Dixon Avenue.

Nettleton, born in England, lived in Charlevoix most of her adult life. She was an artist, historian and costume designer.

In the 1920s and 1930s, she gathered a group of local women to meet as the Tuesday Study Club to discuss current topics and to prepare programs. Their presentation of the history of costumes, dressed in period pieces, was legendary.

In the 1950s, residents who passed by her home on Burns Street remember the life sized mannequin sitting on her porch dressed in costumes from Nettleton's collection.

Fortunately, a large collection of her work has been saved by the historical society and the library. The summer exhibit will include paintings, sketches, woodcarvings, poetry and self-portraits, as well as photographs of Nettleton and her contemporaries.

Admission is by donation.

For more information, call the Charlevoix Historical Society at (231) 547-0373 or the Charlevoix Public Library at (231) 547-2551.

More humorous stories about Charlevoix people

'Days gone by'

I received some feedback on my last column and thought I would tell a few more stories that happened through the years. Our grandchildren provide some of the tales, and their parents end up writing some of them in their Christmas letters.

Several years ago, my son restored the Chuck and Mary Adams' home at 429 Michigan Avenue. They put in a new fireplace glass door set and decided to put the old one in the ski hill fireplace, which was without a door. The day they put it in, three fellows (who shall remain unnamed) were working on it. It was a perfect fit, and they were coming along fine. One of their boys, 5 years old, was in the background, watching their every move. After much turning and laboring, they were exasperated over the whole thing. It just wouldn't fit into the hole, although it was the right size. As they were about to give up the ship, the little boy said, "Dad you've got it in upside down." Too close to the subject, I guess.

My daughter-in-law, Linda, was in Don's IGA, shopping. She and her boys hurried past the snacks and gathered the ingredients for their meal. As they entered the checkout lanes (lined with candy), her son, Ryder, said, "Mama I've been good in the store and all I want is lima beans." (His grandma Jane always fed him carrots, apples and such for snacks when he was little.) There were people in line behind him, so Linda said, "Wouldn't you like a sucker instead?" His reply was, "No! Lima beans!" She thought Bev, the cashier, was going to fall over. Someone behind them said, "Oh go ahead, we'll hold your spot; get him his lima beans!"

One of my grandsons was 9 years old and loved to joke around whenever the opportunity would arise. He was in second grade and his teacher said to the class, "Today is the birthday of someone who is really old and has big ears. Does anyone know who I am talking about?" My grandson, who was often oblivious to things going on around him, heard the question, raised his hand and excitedly said, "Ross Perot?" The teacher wasn't impressed and this time he really wasn't trying to be funny.

My daughter had put one of her boys in "time out," because he was arguing with his brother. He was really stewing about having to sit in the thinking chair. After several minutes, she heard him angrily mutter, "When I grow up, I'm going to become a heavy smoker!" He then looked over to see what she had to say about that. In his mind, he had told her the worst thing he could think of, to get back at her for putting him in time out. It didn't provoke the shocked reaction that he was looking for. She very calmly told him she was going to miss him when he died of lung cancer from his heavy smoking. He then decided that maybe he wouldn't smoke after all.

When her boys were little, my daughter had a jug filled with distilled water, which sat in the corner of the kitchen on the floor. She used it just for ironing. She filled the iron from the jug and began to iron her clothes, when she noticed a terrible odor coming from them. Upon investigation, it appeared someone had used the jug as a convenient bathroom. The boys both denied it and it wasn't until years later that the culprit confessed. The family was telling stories by the fire and the boys wanted their parents to tell any naughty thing they had done when they were little. In the course of the story telling, the youngest boy confessed that he was the one who had done the deed, so the mystery was finally solved.

Two of my grandsons were anticipating the experience of talking to Santa. As they were getting close to the end of the line the oldest boy turned to his mom and whispered quietly in her ear so his little brother didn't hear. "That is not the REAL Santa!" She asked him how he knew that and he said, "I've seen that guy downtown in the summer!" Her husband didn't help any by saying, "Hey Connor, say 'Hi Bill' to Santa when you get up there." So much for Santa spirit.

One day, at the end of summer, my daughter and her two young boys were inside their home and they smelled smoke. She looked out the dining room window and was horrified to see flames and smoke shooting up behind the huge pine trees in their backyard. She frantically called 9-1-1 and told them where the fire was. The lady who answered said, "Are you sure it's a fire." She responded, "The flames and smoke are way above the trees and it sounds like firecrackers are going off. Of course it's a fire!"

Her mind was going 100 miles per hour and she called me and her daughter, Pam, answered the phone. She asked if she should start taking her valuables out of the house and we both told her to put everything in the trunk of her car. She hung up the phone and started yelling at her boys to get their shoes on. She was in a panic, thinking of what she needed to get out of the house.

The older son had his shoes on in nothing flat, but the younger boy wasn't in sight. She yelled at him again to get his shoes on. He said, "I can't find them." Then she uttered these wise words, "Well, get them on anyway!" They scurried around and put thinks in the car trunk for safety. By that time, the fire trucks and crew were coming through the back alley. I had in the meantime, called my sons to come and help her, as she had recently undergone back surgery and couldn't lift anything. They saw the circumstances and told us they couldn't understand how she thought the fire could possibly reach her house. Two girls from the Belvedere Club were riding a golf cart that caught fire and threw flames very high into the air. From her house, it really looked serious, and it did destroy the cart, but she has never heard the end of it.

The worst part, she says, was that she put the valuables in the trunk of her car and her son didn't shut the cover, leaving everything in plain sight if anyone decided to help themselves. It made for quite a bit of razzing, which my sons are very good at.

We have had lots of fun through the years, having a big family around, and there really are very few dull moments.

Sewer solution proposed

Smaller sewer line, only for school use

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

> "This helps show, growth is not what this is about. We want to get a sewer to our new high school."
> Allen Telgenhof,
> Charlevoix School Board president

The city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Public Schools think they may have found a compromise in the controversial Marion Center Road city sewer extension.

But in spite of their efforts, neither has escaped the threat of a lawsuit.

On June 12, Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Sturock, school board president Allen Telgenhof and district attorney Gordon VanWieren Jr. met with City Manager Mike Wiesner, Mayor Alvin Russell and city attorney Jim Young.

The group discussed ways to move forward with the sewer construction project in accordance with the June 7 ruling by Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas. The ruling prohibits the district from using proceeds from an $18.8 million bond agreed to by district voters in October of 2000.

The major problem Pajtas highlighted in making his ruling was the constitutional violation of the school using its general obligation bond to fund infrastructure it wouldn't own.

The June 12 meeting brought the city and school to a decision both feel responds to the funding issue — the school will maintain ownership of the line.

"The concept is that the city would own the sewer line already in, up to Stover Road and would pay for that and the school would own an 8 inch line from Stover Road to the school," Telgenhof said.

Under the new plan, the school won't pay for work the city already did, like the Harbor Industries lift station.

In a memo drafted by Wiesner for Russell and city council members, he described the sewer "solution" and informed them that the city would be responsible for funding $128,000 already expended on the project. This money will pay for the Harbor Industries lift station and the sanitary sewer under the Marion Center Road/US-31 intersection.

"These projects were slated to be paid for by the school, but in reality

Good crops reported despite bad weather

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix berry pickers and fresh produce lovers need not fear, two Charlevoix farmers have issued positive crop reports in spite of the lousy spring weather that plagued many area growers.

Farms across the state were devastated this year by inconsistent spring weather, a force of nature that on June 6 prompted Governor John Engler to declare 26 counties in northwest Michigan "agricultural disaster zones" and to request federal disaster assistance for those zones.

Most of the 26 counties recommended for federal disaster relief are located in the western part of the state along Lake Michigan and a few, including Antrim, Leelanau and Grand Traverse counties, which are in close proximity to Charlevoix County.

But Marion Township farmer Tom Wieland and Eveline Township farmer Sue Kitcley said all is well on their Charlevoix County farms.

"I've seen worse seasons and I've defi-

Wind monitoring tower approved, then appealed

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

After six months and six Eveline Township Board meetings, Steve Smiley, president of Bay Windpower in Suttons Bay, recently saw a glimmer of hope in his wind monitoring project, only to be shot down by an appeal.

Smiley's proposed wind tower would monitor wind speeds in and around the property of Dawson Way, near Ferry and Brock roads, to determine its viability for wind turbine generators there and at a nearby horse farm owned by Eveline Township resident Ralph Richardson.

On June 11, the Eveline Township Board granted Smiley his request for a special use permit to construct the monitoring tower, but an appeal by residents to the zoning board of appeals means the tower, consisting of a 6 inch pipe extending 164 feet into the air with a 3 foot lighting rod reaching up from the top of the pipe, won't be standing any time soon.

The appeal claims the proposed special use permit does not satisfy standards set forth in the township zoning ordinance.

Zoning administrator Barry Wood said the appeal, "stops everything." Which means Smiley can't construct until after the hearing.

But, even though he's facing yet another setback, Smiley plans to continue working toward having the tower constructed on the Way property.

"I don't think they have any grounds (for appeal). Landowners who are part of this project are taxpayers too and have just as many rights as the neighbors who don't want the windmills. Everyone keeps forgetting we have rights too. We will continue, patiently going through the process. But, all the delays are unfortunate," Smiley said.

Three of the four township board members in attendance June 11, with the exception of treasurer Deb Jason, voted in favor of approving Smiley's request with conditions. The conditions include stipulations that data be collected for a minimum of six months; that nearby resident Mike Kiteley be on site, every four to six weeks, when data is collected and that when data is collected, it is forwarded to township consultant Chuck Fricke for analysis.

Fricke is the township's Traverse City engineer, who has worked with wind turbine projects in the past.

These conditions join those the township planning commission applied, when it unanimously recommended permit approval to the township board in early May.

Conditions accepted by the board, that were suggested by the commission, require Bay Windpower to provide a letter of credit or some other form of security showing the company will tear down the tower at its own expense. It also stipulated that the company provide information gathered by the tower to the township and it show proof of general liability insurance.

The appeal was announced by Jack Turner, attorney for Eveline Township residents John and Nan-

The school's sewer plan is a good one

EDITORIAL

Just when we thought the only solution was a septic system for the new high school on Marion Center Road, the school district comes up with a new idea that is better.

Last week it seemed that a septic system was the only way around Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas' ruling that the school district could not use bond money to repay the city for construction of a sewer line to the Marion Center Road school site.

But, a septic system is not ideal. Its faults would soon be experienced during the first half-time of a basketball game at the school, when several toilets are flushed at the same time.

And think about it: What happens after years of chemistry classes, when chemicals are put in a septic system?

But, a septic system seemed to be the only solution that would end the school building debate that is almost three years old.

However, the school district has come up with a plan that we think is a good one. The school district will take ownership of a smaller sewer line from Stover Road to the high school site on Marion Center Road. This sewer line will only be for use by the high school and tap-ins are not allowed.

We understand the Marion Township residents' concerns that a large sewer line will bring growth to the area. And we agree that the original plan to build an 18 inch sewer line was too much.

But, with this new plan, we believe everyone wins. The school gets a sewer line that will be better than a septic system and the residents' growth fears are alleviated.

The only downside is the attorney for the residents that sued the district in the first place has stated they may sue again over this new plan (see the story on page one).

Enough is enough. What would they possibly hope to gain with a new lawsuit? The growth issue is addressed and this new plan seems to be beneficial to both the school and Marion Township residents.

It is time to let the community move on.

The numbers may make winning baseball teams

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

I'm not much of a baseball fan, but I love numbers and baseball abounds with numbers.

Almost nowhere is there an equivalent numerical record of anything humans do. Extracting meaning from numbers is what I did for many years as a practicing scientist and the urge to extract meaning from baseball numbers is much stronger than my interest in who hit what and when.

A couple of weeks ago the newspapers published a listing of the total payroll for each of the 30 major league teams and the average per player salary. The New York Yankees have a total payroll of almost $126 million. Tampa Bay gets along with a total payroll of slightly more than a quarter of that. Tampa Bay players must manage with an average pay that is barely a million and a quarter compared to the average New York Yankee, who gets $4.3 million plus.

Since the Yankees are doing very well and Tampa Bay is at the bottom of the won-lost percentages, it occurred to me that there might be a correlation between what players are paid and what they achieve. Maybe if Detroit players were paid more they would do better.

There is a statistical process called regression analysis, which is too complicated to explain easily. However, computer programs of the right sort can do it in seconds. Regression analysis looks at the degree of correlation between two sets of numbers. What do we get if we compare the percentage of games won with the total payroll for each of the 30 major league teams? It turns out that payroll does correlate with winning percentages. The relationship is not perfect, but there is a relationship. Numerically, the correlation is .47, while a perfect correlation would be 1.0 and no relationship at all would rate a 0.

Regression analysis also makes it possible to compare a team's performance with what they might be expected to do on the basis of what they are paid. For what Detroit players are being paid, the Tigers should be winning half their games, not the 34 percent they are winning.

That doesn't mean that if players were paid more they would automatically win more games. More reasonably, it suggests that the players that Detroit has are being overpaid for what they are accomplishing.

Other teams with similar problems of overpayment for poor performance are Tampa Bay, Milwaukee and Texas. Texas stands out as the team with the highest payroll for the least achievement.

At the other end of the achievement spectrum stand Minnesota, Cincinnati and Anaheim, which are doing way better than their payroll would suggest. Even Boston and New York at the top of the American League, while both highly paid, are doing better than their total compensation would suggest they should. It is apparently possible for a $5 million player to be overperforming.

Maybe it's just that you get better players if you pay them more and better players win more games.

I believe it was Mark Twain who said, "There are lies, damned lies and statistics." The statistical analysis applied here seems to suggest that the Tigers will keep on losing most of their games and that we may well have another "official" World Series, in which the highly paid New York Yankees will appear.

Over time, you probably get what you pay for. We will do another regression analysis at the end of the season and see which team salaries should be adjusted.

Hopes residents are happy

Editor:

I certainly hope that the handful of residents that have finally stopped the sewer extension to the new Charlevoix High School are happy and proud of themselves now!

It is just another example in our society, showing if you have enough money, you can buy anything! Money talks!

Instead of putting their money to good use by helping the public school system, for the youth in the community, these few residents have elected to deter the new school from being built in any way they can. Again, it is the children of the community who will suffer the consequences of these few, selfish people.

I am not even a member of the community and live 90 miles away, but I do subscribe to the Charlevoix Courier. I finally feel compelled to write a letter to the editor because I am so sick of reading every week what this small group of people are doing to tear down the beautiful new school that the community has built and can be so proud of!

I would like to congratulate the Taxes not all bad

Editor:

While Michigan is quickly running out of money, the joke of a response from the governor's office is to further curtail state revenues by decreasing taxes. On May 16, the Revenue Consensus Estimating Conference reported that Michigan faces a $378 million budget shortfall by October. In contrast, Gov. John Engler projects a mere $298 million deficit. To be sure, the actual dollar deficit amount is not the most egregious offense the Republican legislature has in mind for the citizens of Michigan. At stake is an amendment resolution, which will erase our constitutional right to "one person/one vote."

Michigan Lt. Governor Dick Posthumus wants a minority of Michigan voters to control the state's future by demanding that any tax increase be subject to super majorities in the legislature. The Republicans have introduced joint legislation resolutions (HRJ H and SJR H), which require super majority votes (two-third in the house and three-fifths in the senate) in order to increase any future tax revenues.

Section 26, Article 9 of our state constitution requires "a majority of electors" to increase tax revenues, which are necessary to meet the state's monetary needs. By demanding a super majority voter, the Republican majority would effectively disenfranchise the majority of Michigan voters. A two-third super majority voter on tax revenues essentially gives total legislative veto power to the one-third who oppose legislation that may be necessary, but not palatable to their constituents.

It's about time that the Engler/Posthumus team (whose salaries and excessive benefits are paid by taxes) stopped their holy war on taxation. They want us to believe that all taxes are bad; however they offer no viable alternative to either maintain or advance our quality of life without taxation. It doesn't take guts to demonize taxes, it takes guts to be honest with the voters and to demand sacrifices when economic conditions mandate that sacrifices are required.

Quality leadership makes the difficult decisions and eliminates waste within its own programs, they don't remove the revenues that are essential in maintaining quality programs. The Democratic Caucus recently proposed saving millions in state expenses by merging viable similar programs and eliminating redundant ones. Unfortunately, Republican legislators opposed those measures, offering only massive state debt instead.

Engler and Posthumus hope that their bashing of taxes will offset their unwillingness to deal responsibly with government waste and to confuse voters with anti-tax rhetoric. No matter whose multimillion dollar deficit projections you wish to believe, we must face two simple facts: Engler Republicans have not only failed all of us in their fiscal responsibility duties, they have already decided to make matters worse by attempting to make tax collections more difficult.

Fortunately, our Constitution demands that amendments, even one to deter taxes, be placed on the ballot for all Michigan voters to decide.

Teach gun safety

Editor:

I'm a sixth grade student attending Charlevoix Middle School. I think gun safety should be taught in schools.

If people of all ages knew how to use guns properly the accident rate would be less. Also, in big cities it would be safer. With classes, guns will not fall into the wrong hands. Guns will not become the greatest cause of deaths.

If kids learned gun safety at an early age, there would be less violence. There would be a decreasing amount of school shootings and drive-bys.

If gun safety was taught to everyone, the world would be safer. Guns wouldn't be unfamiliar. They would be used properly.

I think if you use my plan, guns will be used properly.

Study says alcohol may cause poor women's health

As people begin to celebrate the summer holidays many may not realize the future consequences of their alcohol consumption, especially if they only over-indulge on occasion.

But in the United States, nearly one of out of every 12 adults will experience the debilitating affects of alcohol dependency and alcohol abuse.

And for these men and women, their drinking behaviors will have a profound influence on their quality of life and their ability to perform even the simplest daily tasks.

A recent study conducted by Washington University and the University of Michigan School of Public Health revealed that although a woman is less likely to become an alcoholic, someone who is greatly dependent on alcohol, the consequences of alcohol consumption are much more severe in women than men.

The study followed women and men after a 15-year period to look at the long-term affects of alcohol.

And what the study revealed about women and alcohol use was very important, says Kyle Grazier, DRPH, associate professor, Health Management and Policy, U-M School of Public Health.

"Women who had reported drinking heavily 20 years ago and even those who reported they stopped drinking heavily in the past five years were both greatly compromised by the long-term affects of alcohol," she said.

Later in life the women experienced difficulty climbing stairs, walking a few blocks around the neighborhood, carrying groceries and taking care of family members.

Many also developed other physical disorders that forced them to either decrease the amount of time they spent at work or at social activities with family and friends.

Overall, women were more physically incapacitated when compared to the men in the study.

According to the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, women are also more susceptible than men to alcohol-related organ damage.

A woman will develop alcohol-induced liver disease, particularly cirrhosis and hepatitis, over a shorter period of time and after consuming less alcohol than a man.

Alcohol can also be linked to increasing a woman's risk of developing certain types of brain damage, heart disease and breast cancer.

In addition, the institute reports that women who consume alcohol have a greater chance of being involved in fatal alcohol-related crash, even though they are less likely than men to get behind the wheel after drinking.

"We have direct evidence that alcohol plays a very significant role in the brain's ability to think quickly, make decisions and respond to sudden movements," Grazier said.

She added in many cases alcohol does the exact opposite-it increases anxiety levels and acts as a mood-depressant.

Although more than 10 million people in America are believed to be alcoholics, with many more having alcohol-related problems, recognizing who has a problem can be difficult because not all people experience the same physical and mental symptoms of alcohol.

But, if alcohol does begin to make a noticeable impact on someone's life, affecting his or her ability to work or just to function on a daily-basis, it's important to seek professional medical assistance or guidance from an alcohol treatment specialist, said Grazier.

"If someone can no longer function at the same levels they did prior to drinking, mentally or socially, it's a sign that alcohol is taking its toll," she said.

Shomin to leave ACACIA in late July

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff Writer

> "There's nothing in Charlevoix I don't like."
> Michael Shomin,
> Captain of the ACACIA

After three years of being afloat the Great Lakes, U.S. Coast Guard Commander Michael Shomin is coming ashore.

Trusting his sea-legs to hold up on land, Shomin is preparing to set sail on his own voyage to Cape May, N.J. after being on tour in Charlevoix for three years. Lt. Commander Keith Bills will replace Shomin on July 25.

"It's a typical length of tour for this class of ship," he said.

In New Jersey, Shomin will be in the Chief Support Services Division, which he said has about 80 people in it. Shomin said his new position is complex because it entails many different responsibilities.

It will also be a change of scenery since the land will be his home, instead of the deep waters of the Great Lakes. However, being the commanding officer will be hard to top.

"There are very few jobs better than Commanding Officer of ACACIA," Shomin said.

Thursday, June 6, proved a good day to be the commanding officer, as Shomin starts to wind down his tour on the Great Lakes. On this day, Shomin and his crew guided the ACACIA to its city mooring, after being docked at the Coast Guard Station near Depot Beach for a new coat of paint.

As the sun shone high in the sky and the morning chill transformed into afternoon warmth, Shomin, 42, stood at command of the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter ACACIA, a 180 foot buoy tender.

He announced that ACACIA would be mooring into Round Lake and docking at the downtown pier.

In preparation for the mooring, Shomin went to the bridge and also kept a watchful eye for everything happening aboard the ship. As ACACIA's commanding officer, Shomin oversees everything that occurs on board.

Before the ship made its decent into Round Lake, Shomin met with other officers to prepare for the mooring.

A tall officer brought Shomin a clip board with papers to sign. Shomin said he must sign these before the ship can leave her post at the station.

Shomin said the papers are a tally of everyone on board, which must be noted in case of an emergency. Even though ACACIA wasn't going out to sea, the list must be signed by Shomin.

ACACIA announced her departure with a loud, ear piercing wail.

Shomin kept watch from the bridge as Quarter Master 1st class Kevin Stupca, 33, took charge of navigating the ship.

As the ACACIA glided to its home in downtown Charlevoix, Shomin kept a watchful eye.

"The shallowness of the water is the worst concern," he said.

Shomin added docking just right is critical or else the ship could ram into the dock or miss and float out in the lake.

But, Shomin and his crew's training made the short journey a success as ACACIA came to rest gently and the crew threw ropes to other Coast Guard members on the shore. Once the ropes were tied and the ship secure, Shomin left the bridge.

Shomin climbed down the steps and entered the belly of the ship. He walked toward a large meeting room where he and the other officers gather together during "officer's call."

Shomin said during this meeting the officers discuss things to be done that day.

A young officer listed off the topics while the other men gave feedback, asked questions or just listened. Shomin listened and commented from time to time.

According to Shomin, after "officer's call" the entire crew lines up during "quarters" and the officers disperse information and awards.

On this day, awards were given out. Shomin stood in the center with an officer in front of him and rows of men on each side, ready to hear what was to be said.

Brian Painter, a crew member who was being transferred to Kodiak, Alaska was awarded with a certificate and a plaque.

Shomin said the certificate stated that Painter was aboard the ACACIA while the plaque stated Painter's name and the length of time he served aboard the ship.

Prosecutor responds to lawsuit

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur responded to a lawsuit filed against her by former chief assistant prosecutor John Jarema and requested the court dismiss all complaints against her last week.

Jarema filed suit in late May charging Kur and the county violated the Whistleblowers Act, caused defamation and invasion of privacy. Jarema was terminated from his position in the prosecutor's office in late February.

In the first count against Kur, Jarema alleged she violated the Whistleblowers Act by firing him because he was voicing concerns about "mismanagement of county funds" by the prosecutor's office. He said he kept a record of this on a calendar that was taken by Kur.

In response, Kur and her lawyers, Bodman, Longley & Dahling LLP of Cheboygan, say this is untrue.

Kur's lawyers state any items taken from Jarema's desk in regard to files and records were county property and "did not contain 'proof of mismanagement and waste of county funds.'" In fact, the response states Kur is not even sure what Jarema means when he charges "mismanagement of funds."

Furthermore, Kur's response to the lawsuit states, "Mismanagement of funds and mismanagement of personnel are not violations of law, regulation or rule and, therefore, cannot form the basis of a Whistleblowers' Protection Act."

It further states Jarema was terminated "for good business reason and cause, such as his disruptive conduct, disloyalty, breach of confidences provided by Kur to him, unprofessional conduct, poor work ethic, low level of productivity, insufficient leadership as chief assistant prosecutor and other matters of poor performance and conduct including insubordination."

In the second count, Jarema charges he was defamed by Kur when she made "disparaging remarks" about him at a March 13 Charlevoix County Commissioners' meeting. During this meeting, Kur criticized him for being part of a Charlevoix County Personnel Committee meeting on March 7 that may have been a violation of the Open Meetings Act.

Kur responded to this stating it is untrue that she "attacked...plaintiff's (Jarema) good character and expertise."

Her response further stated Jarema "was a public figure, limited public figure or a public officer for the purpose of a defamation claim and the acts alleged do not form the basis for a claim of defamation of such an individual."

Kur stated anything she said at that meeting about Jarema's legal expertise "were statements of opinion and were not made with malice or knowledge of falsity."

In the third count, Jarema claims Kur violated his privacy by taking some personal effects from his desk and work computer, namely the calendar he alleges contained mismanagement information.

In response, Kur and her lawyers stated, "Plaintiff (Jarema) had no reasonable expectation of privacy in the assigned office, furniture or equipment, the office had no lock, the furniture was not locked and the office and furniture regularly were accessed by other personnel of the office. Further, the computer, which was county-owned equipment assigned to plaintiff (Jarema), had no secure password and in 2001 plaintiff (Jarema) signed an acknowledgment that county-owned equipment, supplies and computers were to be used for business use, not personal use."

A scheduling conference in this matter has been set for 11:30 a.m., July 8 in the chambers of Charlevoix Circuit Court Judge Richard M. Pajtas.

A day in the life of ACACIA's captain, crew

SHOMIN

The men then dispersed into three groups to meet with the officer that oversees either the engineer, deck force or operations departments.

Shomin said the three departments have specific duties, but all work together as a team.

One team member, Chief Machinery Technician Scott Detring, 44, was in charge of the main engine room before being transferred to the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter WYCONDA stationed in Duque, Iowa on Friday, June 7.

Auxiliary Division Chief Dave Heimbuch, 38, replaced Detring.

Detring said there are 13 engineers aboard the ACACIA and he and five others are in charge of maintaining the engines. The ACACIA is powered by Diesel Electric Propulsion, which Detring said creates the electricity needed to turn the main motor that actually moves the ship.

Fireman Apprentice Beau Kummer, 22, joined the Coast Guard a month ago and is responsible for checking to make sure everything is running properly, which includes the air conditioning and sewage systems.

While moving the ship from one location to another on Round Lake may not seem exciting, Shomin said the amount of activity carried out by the Coast Guard varies depending upon the time of year.

Right now, the crew of 50,which includes two women, is tending to buoys, doing maintenance work such as repainting the ACACIA and carrying out training sessions, according to Shomin.

"Typically in the fall we replace 75 buoys and in the spring we replace them again," he said. He added that the crew replaces a total of 130 buoys during the spring.

Shomin said his schedule aboard the ACACIA is always uncertain and time off is hard to obtain.

When he finds time off he uses it to be with his wife, Linda, and their 9-year-old son, Kyle.

Shomin doesn't come from a military family, but he said all four of his siblings have been involved in some branch of service.

He said he is the only one in his family to be a part of the Coast Guard, but he didn't start in this branch of the service.

In 1978, at 18 years of age, Shomin joined the U.S. Navy Nuclear Power Program. He said the program interested him because of the level of education involved.

"I went through and completed (the program), but immediately transferred to the Coast Guard," Shomin said.

According to Shomin, he transferred primarily because of sports.

At the U.S. Coast Guard Academy, Shomin was able to play a variety of sports. His enjoyment was shattered when he broke his back freshman year.

Shomin said he is excited about transferring because he gets to be involved in a new job.

He said being on shore will enable his schedule to be more constant than that of being on a ship.

Shomin gazed about and added that his feelings toward Charlevoix has nothing to do with his transfer.

"There's nothing in Charlevoix I don't like," he said.

Charlevoix Township revises ordinance

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Township Planning Commission is having a public hearing at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, tonight, to discuss the newly revised township zoning ordinance and zoning map — a subject that could end up being decided by voters.

After the public hearing, the commission will discuss any further changes and then vote to recommend ordinance approval to Charlevoix County Planner Larry Sullivan and ultimately to the township board, which has the final say.

Work on the township zoning ordinance has been ongoing for over two years and has cost the township close to $20,000. The high cost and lengthy creation period were increased last summer when the ordinance was revised and ready to be instated, then some residents, including Chuck Scherping, found out about the changes, reviewed the ordinance and concluded it was restrictive and violated their rights.

Scherping then gathered 109 signatures from township residents and generated a referendum.

Residents went to the polls on Sept. 18, 2001 and rejected the ordinance by a vote of 223 to 114.

So, it was back to the drawing board for the planning commission, the township board and its planner Fred Hoisington of the Traverse City consulting firm, Gosling and Czubak.

Now the revised zoning ordinance is again ready for public scrutiny and Nancy Rajewski, planning commission chair and township board trustee, said she feels the revisions address residents' concerns.

But, in spite of their efforts, it looks as though Scherping is bound and determined to bring the issue before the voters again.

"I think they are trying to do something over and above what needs to be done," he said.

But Nancy disagrees, she said the changes are needed and are intended to make it easier for residents to read and use the ordinance.

"We're not trying to shove this down anyone's throat, but we do need a new ordinance. It hasn't been updated since 1987," she said.

Some of the needs she highlighted and said are addressed in the revised ordinance include, new wording and a more explicit definitions section.

"Basically we didn't change anyone's zoning, we just tried to make it more user friendly. It's a good ordinance," she said.

One of Scherping's major concerns last summer was with the ordinance requirement that made it mandatory for residents looking to construct fencing on their property to get a permit.

According to zoning administrator Bob Rajewski, Nancy's husband, this has since been stricken from the ordinance.

Scherping also took issue with restrictions to home hased businesses, a section Boh said underwent minor changes during the revision process.

The right of the zoning administrator and the township supervisor to search township property at any time was another problem Scherping had before that Bob said was misunderstood. He explained no one can search property without a search warrant.

This time around, Scherping takes issue with the ciivil infractions part of the ordinance which he says unfairly allows the township to issue tickets. Other areas of the ordinance he disagrees with include: the junk ordinance and commercial zone grouping.

He claims in combining three commercial zones, as is the case in the newly revised ordinance, commercial properties are more apt to becoming non-conforming uses or properties that can't be built on.

"So everybody will have to go to the zoning board of appeals for a variance," Scherping speculated.

The ordinance also restricts the positioning of sexually oriented businesses, which are permitted in the commercial district with a plethora of restrictions.

"If they want to add that to the ordinance, I could care less," Scherping said of the sexually oriented business section.

Other major changes residents have accepted, without complaint, include: a decrease in multiple family dwelling density from 15 to 8.7, restrictions on telecommunications which holds tower height to 199 feet and outlines several regulations and the wind turhine generator section which allows wind energy generation in the commercial and planned unit development zones (PUD) with a special use permit.

Scherping's plans to bring about another referendum aren't based solely on complaints he has with the zoning ordinance, he feels township residents should be ahle to vote on any ordinance.

"The people in the township have the right to vote on this. Everyone should have the opportunity to say 'I would or would not like to live under these rules.' The township board and the planning commission, about nine people, shouldn't decide for the other 1,400 who live in the township," Scherping said.

He added that he has already received about 15 calls from people asking about future petitions to bring the ordinance to a referendum. In order to bring the ordinance to a vote he needs 67 signatures.

What will become of old McDonald's site?

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The future of this old McDonald's site on Bridge Street is unknown. However, another fast food restaurant cannot start business here. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

The former Charlevoix McDonald's site at 1400 Bridge Street in the city has been vacant for almost two years and some residents are ready to see it put to use.

McDonalds, a fast food restaurant that now sits near the corner of Bridge Street and M-66 at 1440 Bridge Street, opened Aug. 18, 2000, leaving its old site, just north of where it is now, vacant.

Following the move, Re/Max of Charlevoix listed the property. Then, two weeks ago a new commercial broker, G. W. DeHaan, of Grand Rapids, took over the listing.

"Hopefully we'll garner a good commercial client for McDonald's and Charlevoix," Don Oppenhuizen the Realtor with the McDonald's listing said.

He explained DeHaan does a lot of McDonald's business across the state and he has "no clue" why the site hasn't had better luck in selling.

Oppenhuizen said the price has been lowered an estimated $30,000 since the DeHaan firm took the listing, but as of last week, interest hadn't increased.

At a recent city council meeting, council member Shirley Gibson raised the possibility of the city purchasing the property and turning the site into a park.

Gibson's comments on the McDonald's subject spurred the interest of Charlevoix resident Elijah Pace, who asked why another fast food provider, like Wendy's, hadn't moved in.

According to Oppenhuizen, "the Wendy's query" is no mystery at all, but potential commercial purchasers are somewhat restricted.

He said the building and parcel, which span an acre of property, are owned by McDonald's Corporation and to avoid a loss of business from a new competitor it can't be bought by another fast food provider.

"A grocery store, a bakery or an auto parts store are all a go. We're looking for something that fits the community and are open to ideas or suggestions," he said.

The corporation is asking $399,500 for the site. To provide Oppenhuizen with use input call (616) 698-0700.

Historical Society announces new exhibits for this summer

The Charlevoix Historical Society has three new summer exhibits open to the public at its Harsha House Museum at 103 State Street in Charlevoix.

They are:

• Resort Fashions and Photographs — On display in the textile area. Among the resort wear from the 1800s are a trousseau, woolen bathing suit, tennis dress and tuxedo. An oil painting, Golfing at the Inn, by I.A. Turner, 1905, and alongside photos of old hotels of Charlevoix.

• Howe Sewing Machine — This machine from the 1860s was owned by Sarah Thompson Smith, niece of Charlevoix pioneer Medad Thompson. It is shown with a collection of antique threads on wooden spools.

• The James William (Bill) Ochs Camera Collection — This collection can be viewed in the newly renovated exhibit area. Several of Ochs' photographs will be included in the new Bob Miles' Charlevoix II, scheduled for publication this summer.

These three new exhibits accompany the permanent displays of furniture and paintings which are in the two parlors and the dining room of the restored home, known as Harsha House. Exhibits of the fishing industry from the 1860s, Grey Reef Lens, Ernest Hemingway's marriage license and a photo history of Charlevoix's six bridges will continue to be displayed through the summer.

Summer hours at the museum are from 1-4 p.m., Monday through Saturday. Call 547-0373 for more information.

'Your health'

Life is too short to hate what you do in order to pay your light bill and to stock your kitchen with tuna fish and Brussel sprouts.

Paradoxically, life is also too long to dislike your work. But most importantly, life is just too precious to waste it doing a job in which you watch the clock.

Now, this isn't my never-never land Peter Pan philosophy talking here either — he'll talk in a later article. And no, I'm not going to go into the existential musings or probabilities of existence here, to back up my point on the preciousness of the time we have as living beings. But suffice it to say, if you contemplate all of the factors that had to happen, at just the right instance, just to create you so you could be alive to read this sentence, at this moment, it is a remarkable thing. So now back to work.

Yes, we have to work. Yes, it is the adult thing to do. No, freeloading your life expenses off of a good codependent parent or significant other or sucking dry your trust fund is not a good plan. So with all that established, why do so many people get the shakes on Sunday afternoon when they suddenly remember that they have to go back to work Monday morning? It is because they have somehow created a disconnect between themselves and their work.

The disconnect gets made because somewhere along the line many of us pick up this myth that to be an adult in the work world means that you have to commit to a certain level of misery.

In short, part of us believes that we are destined to hate our work, so we just shut up and tough it out. But, at the same time part of us, maybe just a tiny voice in the back of our cerebellum keeps nagging and asking, "Why do I have to keep doing this job I hate just in order to eat tuna fish?"

And that's how the paradox gets created: The opposing desire between the ideas that "work equals misery" versus "I can do something that fits me better" creates the true work misery. The only resolution is to erase the paradox.

The easiest short-term way out is to vanquish the voice that keeps asking, "There's got to be more to life than this?" Once that voice is gone, the tension is erased and paradoxically again, your work will become more rewarding simply because you have eliminated your ambivalence.

The more difficult, but also long lasting, resolution is to take an honest inventory of your work — well actually of yourself. The three keys to such an inventory are to assess the fit between your current work and your unique skills, true interests and personal values. The higher your score in these three work dynamics, the more satisfied you will be with what you do in order to pay the bills.

The first level of the inventory is to assess how much of your true skills and talents you really use in your current work. Think small. Think about the day-in and day-out tasks of your job and how well they fit with what you know you really do well.

Your skills and talents may be something like being a good listener or being good with your hands.

Writer offers tips for making work enjoyable

HEALTH

Take a moment and honestly rate your unique skill usage in your current work with a percentage between 0-100 percent.

Now, rate how interested you are in your work. No, not how interested you are in getting paid for your work, but in actually doing your work. Interests are aspects of life that really grab your attention.

Clues to your interests are found by assessing your life. What are the majority of the books about on your shelf or beside your bed? What topics do you really like talking about and discussing with other folks? What do you love to do or would love to learn more about? Interests are how we choose to spend our time whether or not others think it has value enough to praise us or pay us for doing it. Give your expression of your true interests in your current work a percentage between 0-100 percent.

Finally, assess how well your personal values are expressed in your current work. Values are the rules you live by, such as the Golden Rule, but they also are your beliefs about life. For instance, do you believe in compassion, generosity, charity or only the strong survive? Your values are also how you define the level of money or the lifestyle you want for yourself and your loved ones.

Be honest here, it is easy to just right down the values you think you are supposed to have rather than what you truly value. Give your personal value expression in your current work a percentage between 0-100 percent.

OK, now total your three percentages.

You now have your Personal Work Inventory Baseline Score. And, no, I don't have a handy dandy median score for all workers in the known universe for you to compare your score with. Satisfying work is not about comparing yourself with others, it is about expressing more of your unique talents, interests and values in what you do.

You already know where you rate in your personal satisfaction scale with your current job, now you also have a clearer way to improve your satisfaction score and to measure that improvement.

Looking at your score, ask yourself how you could increase it by just 5 percent and then create a simple doable plan to make it happen. Even if you really love what you do, you can always tweak it a bit to make it even more satisfying.

If you are pretty happy with your work, maybe you only want to improve your expression in one of the three areas, such as bringing more of your true values to the workplace. Maybe you just need to create a better professional development plan that allows you to grow your skills more fully in your current job.

If radical change is needed, because you really want to raise your score, you need a whole new way to pay for the tuna fish.

Brainstorm a list of jobs that would better fit with your Personal Work Inventory and make a doable plan to get one of those jobs. All the while, remember that life is too short and precious not to do work that works for us.

Recent graduate show his skills on 'blades

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff Writer

Sliding down handrails and jumping off roofs is fun for recent Charlevoix High School graduate Chris Couture.

Couture, 18, graduated on June 2 and has been rollerblading for about five years now. He said rollerblading is an activity that combines athleticism and art.

Chris Couture

"It's yourself and your own body and mind coming up with tricks," Couture said.

He added that he likes the feeling of being able to express his creativity through his skating, which results in being able to execute tricks that are almost impossible.

"Every day is something new. It never gets boring," he said.

For Couture, his passion for rollerblading spilled over into other areas of his life like academics.

Psychology, sociology and philosophy became interesting to Couture as he progressed with his skating and skills.

"Progression is the most important thing I suppose," he said

Couture said skating has helped him learn about himself and has sparked interest in how society works.

As Couture has progressed, he has also competed in several competitions over the past few years.

In June 2000 at age 16, Couture attended the amateur competition in Brighton where he won first place in the advanced division.

Later that year in August, Couture took place in a regional Aggressive Skater's Association competition in Wisconsin. He got eighth place in the top 10.

In 2001 at age 17, Couture attended the 1 Match Your Trick Association competition in Detroit.

Here Couture competed with rollerblading professionals and placed in the top 17 out of the 44 people who competed.

Couture said he has skated with almost every professional including: Randy Spizer, Brian Shima and Robert Guerrero.

In the fall, Couture competed again at the Aggressive Skater's Association, but didn't make the top 10.

Couture said during this time he also competed at a Modern Skate and Surf Competition, which took place in Traverse City. He received third place out of 20 people.

The exposure in competition enabled Couture to be featured in a rollerblading video and magazine.

In 2001 at age 17, Couture was featured in the Detroit competition's number two video titled "Detroit Rock City," which was produced by Video Groove.

Couture said there is a clip of him performing a handrail trick. He does a "Soul into a Soayle" into a "Kindgrind." He starts out grinding with his leading foot, then does the same thing, but backward and then does a 180 degree turn in the air and slides down the handrail backward.

He added that he is featured in the video six other times, but only as a member of the crowd.

His 9-year-old brother, Shaun, is featured as well.

Couture is also in the Nov. 2001 issue of "Daily Bread," a top world-wide magazine for rollerblading.

"It's a summary of what happened that day at the competition," he said.

Couture said the magazine identifies him as "Mystery Skater Number One."

"I'm the only one doing a trick with no name," he said.

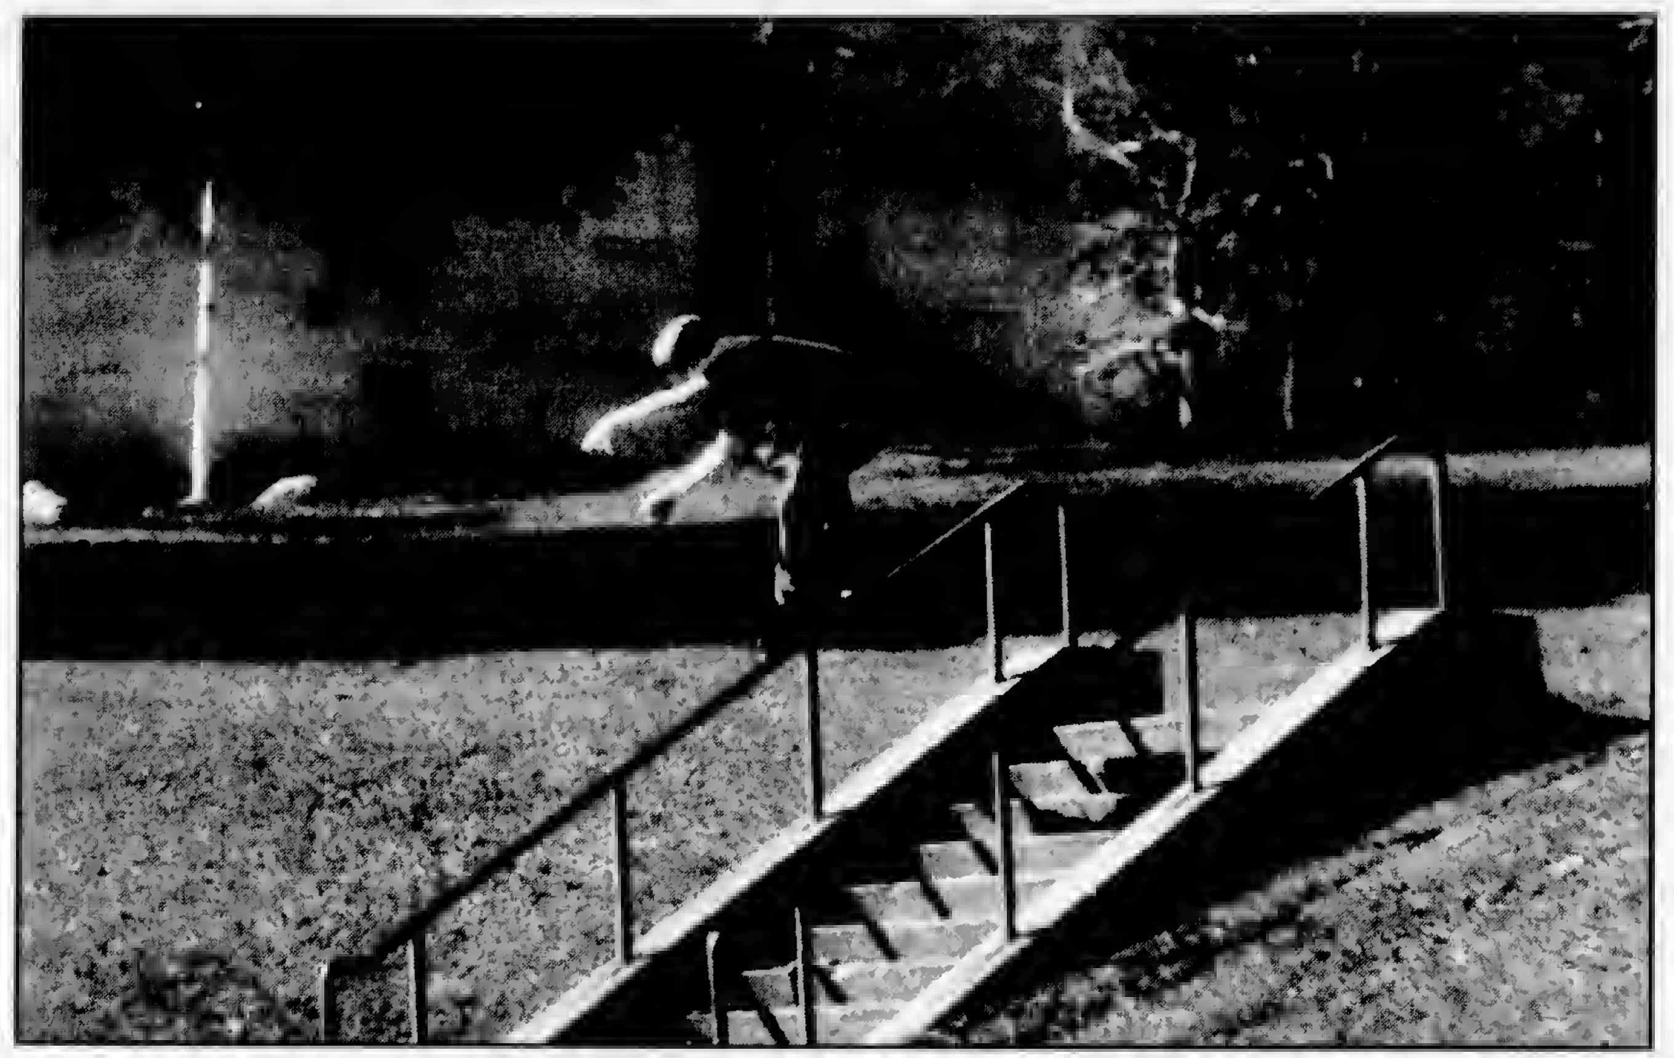
Couture said the trick he is executing in the picture in the magazine is a combination of jumping 15 feet of grass then skating to the top of a 15 foot wooden wall, where the skater drops down.

Couture hit the ground with such force that the axle of his right skate broke off.

According to Couture, the image people have of rollerbladers is far from the truth.

He said people have certain stereotypes about the attitude and personality of the rollerblader and of the sport itself.

"Pretty much people think we're a bunch of punks trying to ruin their property," he said.



Chris Couture demonstrates a trick he learned rollerblading down the railing of a stairway. (Courtesy photo)

He added that people tend to think rollerbladers are troublemakers who don't care about anything.

"In fact we keep to ourselves and try to be as courteous as possible," he said.

About the sport, Couture said people tend to think rollerbladers are individuals who put on skates, helmets and pads and then proceed to try and do tricks.

"I try to find unique individualistic tricks that only I can do and try to make them bigger and bigger," he said.

In the fall, Couture said he plans on attending North Central Michigan College for about a year and then transferring to either Western Michigan University or Kalamazoo Community College.

Couture said he plans on studying business and possibly philosophy and psychology.

As far as rollerblading is concerned, Couture plans on doing it until his body gives out.

"After my body quits, I'll get into the business end of it and the industry and further the progression of skating through new products and ideas," he said.

His parents are Pete and Natalie Couture of Charlevoix.

Local farmers fair well compared to others

FARMERS

nitely seen better seasons. You take the bad with the good and hopefully come out with your head above water," Wieland said.

Wieland has farmed for 52 years and cultivates over 600 acres of land. He and his wife, Ardeth, grow corn, barley, soy beans and hay. And while he said their corn crop isn't as large as usual, he is confident it will produce.

This year, the Wielands faced their greatest challenge when it came time to find dry ground to plant the corn.

"We gave up on some; (5 acres) it's just too wet," he said.

The Wielands also lost one cut of hay as the crop growth is almost two weeks behind schedule.

But none of it came as a shock, as they aren't strangers to an unpredictable growing season. Wieland said in the early 1990s they experienced good growth and last year lost 33 percent of their crop to severe drought.

He sounded optimistic for this year though and said output depends on the weather for the rest of the season. He's looking for decent rain and warm sunny days, which mean good sweet corn.

But, he added he feels fortunate not to have grown fruit this year, a crop several area growers specialize in, as too many frost filled nights came late in the season.

Many remember taunting temperatures in the 80s during the week of April 14, that were followed by freezing temperatures and frost. The state website, www.michigan.gov, blames this change in temperature for extreme bud damage.

Then in May, cold, wet weather and occasional hail kept the bee population — a familiar friend of the fruit crop — at bay, leading to limited fruit crop pollination. Additional frost and freezing temperatures further damaged crops from May 17 to 22.

According to the state website, fruit crops most affected include: apples, blackberries, brambles, tart and sweet cherries, grapes, nectarines, peaches, pears, plums, raspberries and strawberries. Asparagus fields were also negatively impacted.

This could mean a big economic problem for Michigan where, according to the Michigan Department of Agriculture, fruit production contributes about $235 million, while asparagus contributes $18 million, to the state's economy, annually.

Kiteley said last week the family berries, which include both strawberries and raspberries, made it through. But with the inconsistencies seen thus far, she isn't entirely confident just yet that the crop will be a total success.

"Something could happen between now and when they ripen," she said.

She explained her farm didn't experience the same devastating freezes that plagued fellow growers and thanks her overhead irrigates for some of the savings.

But, she said her colleagues growing cherries don't have that option and can't control what nature hands them.

The only change she said her faithful customers will see this year will be a later "U-Pick" season. She's expecting her strawberry patch to be ready by the end of June.

According to the state website, if crop loss of 30 percent or more is confirmed, eligible producers will have access to low-interest emergency loans from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farm Service Agency (USDA FSA) for up to 80 percent of their weather related losses. This same relief is available to those with severe crop loss in counties contiguous to those named as disaster zones.

But, Wieland said the loan doesn't really help the average farmer in the long run.

"If you don't have a crop you can't pay it back. We don't need loans, we need grants," he said.

Wieland and Kiteley both said whether or not their optimistic outlooks on the upcoming season and prayers for good weather will be enough is unknown because, as Wieland said, "price is a factor too."

He said corn prices are high now, but harvest time could be a different story.

"At harvest time, it always takes a dive. Farming is kind of like going to the casino, it's always a gamble," he said.

> "We don't need loans, we need grants."

cy Cisne, moments after the board voted.

The appeals board which will hear the challenge includes: appeals board chairman and planning commission member Chris Carson and Eveline Township residents Lynn Herrimann and Harold Johnson.

On June 17, Carson said no date had been set for the appeal, but estimated it would take place, at the earliest, in late June.

Once a date has been decided, property owners within 300 feet of Way's property will be notified by mail.

Carson described the process the appeals board will employ as similar to the six month process the township board just went through in reaching its decision. The hearing will include a review of findings of fact and exhibits and will interpret the township zoning ordinance in relation to Smiley's proposal.

Carson said he doesn't remember a time when an appeal of this nature was brought before the board.

In the meantime, the township is also facing litigation from the resident group opposed to wind turbine generators being located on the Way and Richardson properties.

In early May, the Cisnes filed a lawsuit against the township alleging their constitutional rights have been violated and the township planning commission and board acted on an invalid zoning ordinance. Since then, several others have joined the suit.

The group is asking Charlevoix County Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas to declare the township zoning ordinance invalid and to grant them injunctive relief, which would prevent the township from conducting hearings and other proceedings under the ordinance.

The ordinance amendment they are refuting was adopted on Oct. 9, 2001 by the township board. It allows wind turbine electricity generators to be constructed in certain zoning districts of the township, with a special use permit.

Mark Bickel, the township's Traverse City attorney from the firm Hovie and Smith, filed a response to the lawsuit. But no schedule has been set in the matter.

The township planning commission is currently in the process of revising the zoning ordinance.

Information presented at the interview will be carefully evaluated for relevance to the accreditation process. Requests for a public information interview must be made in writing and should be sent to the Joint Commission no later than June 21, 2002. SCRAPBOOK

The last of the great hotels — The Beach

By DAVID L. MILES
Charlevoix Historical Society

About nine months after the Inn Hotel opened at the east end of Dixon Avenue the Charlevoix Sentinel of March 21, 1899, announced construction of a hotel at the end of West Dixon.

"From its broad west porches will be furnished the grandest views, the most beautiful sunsets, and the enjoyment of the most exhilarating breezes in the whole realm of resortdom. The house will be called 'The Pavillion,'" the newspaper stated.

The last of the great three to be built (the Inn and the Belvedere were the others), at inception there was no hint of its future magnificence. Small, like its original name, in comparison to the 525 foot Inn, one wing 32 by 60 feet, the other 32 by 50, it grew in very short time to be a formidable rival and soon had the name The Beach.

Oddly it was the only hotel built in Charlevoix to take advantage of the Lake Michigan panorama. All the others had focused inward. Yet the grandeur of the site was hardly reflected in the building itself. A mere 15 rooms served by one bath, it didn't even have an office. Its business was conducted out of a desk in a dining room corner.

But Mrs. Martha Baker, wife of the builder, knew her business cold. She was the daughter of Robert Elston who had built the Hotel Elston in 1895, later to become Hallett's Inn, then the Lakeview Hotel, where Oleson's plaza is now, and had cut her teeth helping run that establishment.

A terrific hostess and gimlet-eyed manager, she ran a tight ship. Baker had the instincts of a born hotelier. Five years after opening enough funds were available to double the capacity. Eleven years after that she hired a Chicago architect to expand it to seven stories from beach level holding 216 rooms — more after several suites were remodeled — and 86 baths.

It was the tallest building ever constructed here. It had its own laundry. The first hotel elevator in Charlevoix, an ornate brass grilled device, accented the lobby. The dining room seated 350 to 400 comfortably.

A story came out of the hotel that right after World War I, before the Twenties started to roar, when women began to shed old modes of thinking and clothing, the first time a woman walked through the lobby in a bathing suit that showed more than had ever been shown before, another woman took one look and passed out cold.

In 1919 and 1920, a young Jules Styne got his show business start booking bands into the Beach. He later became the founder of the Music Corporation of America.

The astute Baker was the Donald Trump of her day. She gradually bought up residences along West Dixon and Michigan Avenue, 14 at the peak, to hold overflow and cater to families who wanted to rent an entire "cottage." A large annex to house guests and employees went up in the middle of the block between the western ends of Pine River Lane and West Dixon near the bluff edge.

At its peak this complex of buildings possessed the capacity, if pushed to its limits and every sleeping surface was utilized to the maximum, to house around 1,000 people per night. Baker's guests flocked to Charlevoix by the hundreds and carried her fame across the country.

Great plans lay in the future to make her prize even surpass the elegant Inn. Over 130 more rooms, each with bath, a pipe organ in the casino, dining capacity increased to 700 — Charlevoix was about to be knocked on its ear.

But, Martha Baker passed away in Miami in the winter of 1922. She left an estate of around half a million dollars. The hotel and properties — and remaining mortgage — went to her daughter, a party girl married to a gambler and lover of the high life. They did not pay attention to business and the decline set in almost at once. The ensuing years combined with the Depression and a fire in 1939 that made the ill-maintained kitchen wing sag without adequate repair, painted a bleak late Jazz Age picture of glitter on the outside, decay within.

One by one the "cottages" were sold off to prop up the sinking operation. Its reputation in tatters, the Beach went into receivership, through several well-meaning owners, plans for renewal and resuscitation. It did manage a comeback, of sorts, catering to the convention trade after World War II, but even that waned as the aging hotel simply could not keep up with reliance only on summertime traffic.

Martha Baker's spirit and golden touch had long vanished.

A husk of its former self, it faced a planned replacement by a circular hotel/condo tower with a revolving restaurant on top, but that never went beyond the drawing board.

Slowly the Beach began to fall apart. Kids clambered over its many roofs and balconies to knock and shoot out windows, climbed and broke in to play games and vandalize the interior. Rain, snow and wind swept into exposed rooms and hallways. Glass littered the sidewalk. A porch column fell over to block the walk for months. Neighbors rightly feared a conflagration that would endanger not only themselves, but the entire north side in a high wind.

It was a huge fire that did bring the Beach to a merciful end. During demolition, with the top floors already removed, a workman's spark took it up on the morning of Monday, Oct. 16, 1967. All day and night it blazed as flames and smoke towered into the sky. There was a lot to burn. No attempt was made to extinguish, only control.

By Tuesday afternoon all that remained were broken foundation walls and piles of wet, acrid ash. A century in Charlevoix's history, begun when Richard Cooper had opened the Fountain City House a block away in 1867, had come to a bittersweet close.

(For more information on the Beach Hotel, visit the Charlevoix Historical Society's Harsha House Museum at 103 State Street, open 1-4 p.m., Monday through Saturday. Also see Edith Gilbert's book "Summer Resort Life: Tangos, Teas, & All.")

School will own sewer line under plan

SEWER

they would have been constructed whether the school was in the picture or not, as it was just good engineering practices," he stated.

The total savings to the school district Telgenhof estimated to be $140,000. The complete project cost was over $550,000

Other factors considered in solving the sewer debacle included the design of the line itself. Opponents of the project have continually chastised the school district for "funding oversized infrastructure that lends to private development."

Under the new agreement this portion of the line has been reduced to 8 inches and will only service the school.

Telgenhof explained that 623 feet of the line, from Stover Road to the school, was designed to be 18 inches in diameter, "to facilitate tap-ins." However, he said the district had no say in the design.

"It was a take it or leave it situation," he said.

And Telgenhof added the district's environmental concerns prompted it to take it.

"This helps show, growth is not what this is about. We want to get a sewer to our new high school," he said.

He explained that the distriot has not explored on-site septic options because the land is not well-suited to its use. The Charlevoix County Health Department discouraged the district to go the route of on-site disposal.

"Environmentally, our experts have a lot of concerns," Telgenhof said.

Earlier thoughts on how to move forward included contemplation of an appeal, but Telgenhof said the school is no longer pursuing that option.

"We could appeal Judge Pajtas' ruling but rather than go through that we came up with a solution," he said.

However, the new proposed solution won't keep the school district or the city out of court.

Frederick Baker, co-council for plaintiffs in the aforementioned case in which Pajtas delivered his ruling, said he believes his clients have grounds to file another lawsuit in the sewer matter.

"They're just taking the same pipeline and calling it the school's. I think there are a number of problems with that, both legally and practically. Having the school pay the construction using general fund revenue we believe is earmarked for operating expenses," he said. "If they call it an operating expense, that's a problem, because it's owned by the school and is a capital acquisition."

During the first week in July the city will know whether it is still in the legal hot seat as a result of the Marion Center Road sewer.

If a contested permit case brought against it by the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association is not dismissed on July 8 by a Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) administrative law judge, the evidentiary hearing in this case against the city will take place at 9 a.m. July 9 in Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court.

The plaintiffs claim the city has unlawfully constructed the sewer line by violating the Michigan Environmental Protection Act (MEPA) and by operating under a contested permit which was issued by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality.

But in a recent interview, Young, said the permit is valid.

a"If the permit wasn't valid, the DEQ, not the citizens group, would be telling us to stop," he said.

The plaintiffs claim the part 41 permit is invalid until the administrative law judge makes a ruling in the contested case which will be heard Aug. 6-8 if it is not dismissed July 8.

In the meantime, city engineers are in the process of redrawing the sewer line design and both city council and the school board must approve the changes before they will go into effect. Meetings at which this issue will be discussed were not scheduled as of June 17.

Telgenhof said the district expects its new high school that this line will service will be open Sept. 3 for the first day of classes.

Close, but no violation

Commissioners cleared on meeting

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The state attorney general's office has ruled the Charlevoix County Commissioners involved in a March 6 Personnel Committee meeting came "dangerously" close to violating the Open Meetings Act.

In a letter from Robert Ianni, assistant in charge of the attorney general's criminal division, he states, "The committee members came dangerously close to violating the Open Meetings Act and possibly subjecting the county to expensive litigation or personal liability. Had the members of this body made a recommendation on (John) Jarema's employment as civil counsel or even decided not to make a recommendation they may well have violated the act and subjected themselves to the misdemeanor penalties...."

Commissioners Jim Behling, Carl Price and Don Smith met with former Chief Assistant Prosecutor John Jarema at the March 6 meeting to discuss his recent firing. However, this meeting had not been posted within the required 18 hour time frame and a deputy clerk assigned to take minutes at the meeting was asked to leave.

Commissioners said they were just going to "listen" to Jarema. But, during the meeting, Smith made a suggestion that Jarema be hired as the county's civil attorney.

However, no motion was made and the other commissioners did not act on this suggestion, according to information submitted to the attorney general's office.

What the attorney general's office is saying is, if they had made any decision on the matter, either for or against the suggestion, they could have violated the act. But, be-

A group of Charlevoix, female, fashion-savvy 50 somethings have banded together to throw caution to the wind.

The group which embodies the notion that "you're never too old to play dress up," is the first Charlevoix Chapter of a national social club with a membership of over 12,000, called the Red Hat Society.

The first step in club formation took place June 17 when a group of 12 "red hatters" met at Rose Cottage Antiques and Eats for a full service tea.

Local chapter coordinator Nan VandenBerg said the tea was a "smashing success" and proved to

Sewer dispute over for school

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

After two years of court battles the Charlevoix School District and opponents of the new high school construction project currently underway in Marion Township, have agreed to a settlement.

"I think this achieves what the board wanted all along — to have sewer service to the school and have the school open on time," Allen Telgenhof, Charlevoix School Board President, said.

Now, the school will have its sewer and officials from the city and school, along with school and sewer project opponents will not spend countless hours in and out of court.

A new contract and settlement agreement reveal the school's new plan that transfers ownership of the sewer line from the city of Charlevoix to the school district. The school board unanimously approved the plan at its special meeting which took place at 7:30 a.m.

Clarification/ correction

In last week's Charlevoix Courier, there was some confusion over a name in our On The Record section on page 2. We discovered there are two Jeffery S. Scotts living in Charlevoix and both 35 years old.

The Jeffery S. Scott charged in District Court with Larceny-building: embezzle agent/trust, under $200 and whose case was bound over to circuit court was the one that lives at 906-and-a-half Bridge Street.

We apologize for any confusion this may have caused.

Also, in the June 12 edition of the Courier a correction needs to be made to the page one story about the mayoral candidate charged for carrying a concealed knife. He was stopped by Charlevoix Police on May 11, but charged with the weapons violation in June.

The 72nd Annual Venetian Festival will entertain and enlighten those who attend with new activities for all ages, most notably an elephant for Kids' Day and traditional Native American dancers.

Venetian Board President Dan Barron said this year's festival will feature an African elephant named Laura. The elephant is 19 years old and lives at Ivory Haven Farms in Fremont.

"We just thought it sounded like fun," he said. Barron added that so far the response has been a positive one.

According to Barron, Laura will be available for children to ride from noon to 4 p.m. on July 25 in East Park.

The Little Traverse Bay Bands of Odawa Indians will be featured from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on July 26 in East Park as a part of the festival's Native American Heritage Day.

Some random thoughts at summer's beginning

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

I have a few random thoughts to share this week with the readers.

Perhaps it is the recent heat that gets me thinking — I don't think my blood is ready for warm weather yet — but there are times like this when my brain just keeps jumping from topic to topic. Therefore, the best way to appease these musings, is to share.

Open Meetings Act findings

Well, it looks like the Charlevoix County Commission narrowly dodged a bullet this week.

The state Attorney General's Office decided not to take any action on allegations that the commission's March 6 Personnel Committee meeting was a violation of the Open Meetings Act, even though it was not posted and a deputy clerk was told to leave by Commissioner Don Smith.

The Attorney General said there was not enough evidence to prove the commissioners did nothing but "listen."

It would be a shame if some commissioners decided this gives them an open invitation to have all sorts of meetings like this. You know, unposted, secret meetings, where they just "listen." Of course, the commissioners putting themselves in this situation in the first place was a shame for Charlevoix County. And then they further shamed themselves and the voters by trying to blame everyone but themselves for doing it.

I for one do not think these commissioners were vindicated. I think they got lucky that there was not enough evidence.

Government bodies who call themselves democratic should not, even if it is not a violation of the law, meet at any time in nonpublic meetings, even if it is just to "listen." And no government official, during a public meeting, should order individuals from the room, even if they feel they can be more "frank and open."

There was nothing in this entire situation for them to feel good about. There was simply no reason to have a special meeting, as they did, and there was no reason to ask a deputy clerk to leave, as was done.

While they may not be guilty of violating the open meetings act — for now — these men did a disservice to the community and a disservice to county government.

Hopefully they will err on the side of caution in the future and they will inform the public of every single meeting they attend.

Water use

Call me crazy, but I just don't understand this fascination we have with lawns. We cherish the growing of a useless green plant over the growth of more beneficial plants like dandelions — which you can actually eat, unlike grass.

We love our lawns so much that we dump chemicals on it to make it greener, pollute the air with noise and emissions from lawnmowers and waste valuable water trying to feed it, while at the same time there are people in this country who don't even have enough water to drink.

Specifically, in Charlevoix, residents get discounts on their water bills for using water on their lawns. The thinking behind this is the resident is making their yard more beautiful, thus making the city more beautiful.

I just don't understand this. To me, people make a city more beautiful, not lawns. So, wouldn't it make more sense to offer discounts on water bills to people who only use their city water for themselves?

But, every year, I hear the same stories about folks stressing over the quality of their lawns. I never hear about a desire to have a front yard filled with herbs, vegetables and fruits — all things we can actually use.

Summer

Finally, it's here. The long-awaited summer.

It seemed to take forever for the area to warm up this year. Perhaps it was because Mother Nature teased us with some 80 degree days in April.

It seems that summer takes longer to get to Charlevoix every year. Sooner or later we will find ourselves riding snowmobiles in July instead of sailboats. Maybe the Venetian Festival can add snow-carving to its list of activities when this happens?

But, it is here for now and people are having fun with it. The problem is, so far I have only been able to enjoy it from the office window of the Charlevoix Courier.

With an increase in people, comes an increase in news. An increase in news means an increase in work for me. Therefore, the staff of the Courier is a group of very busy people.

I think I will try to convince our publisher, Ken Winter, that for staff morale reasons we need to get laptop computers and set up shop on Michigan Beach for a day or so. Until then, enjoy the weather and hopefully I can join you all on the beach soon.

Letters to the editor

Think before you act

Editor:

I am writing to urge the Charlevoix City Council not to begin any more vast projects with half-vast planning. To proceed further with the Marion Center Sewer project until all outstanding issues have been resolved would, unnecessarily risk additional taxpayer money.

The council contracted for and authorized work on the sewer before securing a legal funding source, in the face of repeated warnings. It began construction of a sewer without final approval from Michigan Department of Environmental Quality. The council has obligated the taxpayers to repay funds already misspent from school funds, when such repayment for a sewer would violate city ordinance.

City residents will suffer irreparable loss of tax money as a result of its lack of detail in this matter. Unraveling this tangled web the council has woven, will require due diligence on its part. Any further plans should be well thought out, involve public input, adhere to Planned Unit Development hearings and requirements and respect for the law.

Build BMX track

Editor:

I am a sixth grade student at Charlevoix Middle School and I feel that Charlevoix should improve the BMX track at Shanahan Field.

First, Charlevoix should fix the ruts from the rain. The boards lying in the middle of the track don't really help keep your speed up either. The starting gates are so old they need to be updated.

Next, Charlevoix could make the track look good as well. There should be a big tarp that goes over the entire track so the track has an indoor affect and it will keep it dry. There should also be out of bound markers with sponsor names on them. The announcer's stand is so old, it is about to fall down. It should be made out of metal.

I think there should be concession stands at Shanahan to satisfy the audience. With the money they get from the food, they could repair the track. They should have portable hot dog stands. It should be like a regular NBL (National Bicycle League) track. They should have cotton candy and popcorn and lots of other great food.

If Charlevoix did this, I would be thankful and I think it would make a lot of other kids happy too.

Boys should grow up

Editor:

The "boys" of the Charlevoix School Board and City Council need to grow up and start "wearing long pants."

The school board ignored the voters and located a school outside the city without a public hearing and in direct conflict with a survey that overwhelmingly wanted the school within the city on property the district already owned; and one must remember the need was for a middle school! So, let's build a high school!

Then, the school board got in bed with the city to pay for a huge sewer using bond money, which would benefit private development. Gosh, it doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out this is co-mingling of public bond money to benefit private investment. It's in conflict with the state constitution not to mention the Michigan School Code.

Of course the "boys" could have solved this early on with an on-site septic system costing $75,000 to $100,000 with a savings of $400,000, but when you have $8 million to play with, always choose the largest sandbox.

The city council "boys" saw a chance to get something for nothing and backed this scheme. After all, the city wants an industrial park out in Marion Township as well as a private housing development. All to the good if someone else — the public — is willing to pay. Maybe if the city would have hired separate lawyers (Marion Township and the city of Charlevoix have the same lawyer — no conflict there?) they might have gotten better advice. To make matters worse, when the boys got good advice from the lone female council member, suggesting they not proceed with the sewer until after the court hearing, it was ignored (boys do not take advice from women unless they are their mothers).

Let's not forget the Charlevoix County Commission (the "good old boys") who just spent $12,000 of taxpayer money for a lawyer and they are yet to be charged with anything. These part-time officials are not amateurs in handling money: Annually they give themselves $7,000 of medical insurance as well as per diem pay and pensions! I bet all part-time workers would like the same deal.

It's been said, "You get what you deserve in politics." I disagree. We've gotten more than what we deserve in Charlevoix County.

Create Rayders hockey team

Editor:

I think that Charlevoix needs a Rayders hockey team.

My first reason is so that when the kids get into high school they won't be doing drugs. The kids, instead of doing drugs or crimes they will be at hockey games.

Another reason is that kids will have to get good grades to get on the hockey team. The teachers won't be getting stressed from the kids getting really bad grades.

I think that the kids on the hockey team should get at least a B.

Also, having a hockey team would make the kids more fit and stronger. Next it would make the kids healthier.

Plus if the kids were stronger they could defend themselves better.

There are about 10 kids in my class out of 21 that would want to be on the team. So, I think this hockey team would be a success.

Charlevoix needs a non-smoking restaurant

Editor:

I'm a sixth grader at Charlevoix Middle School. I think we should have a non-smoking restaurant.

One reason is, that families go out to eat to celebrate or have a good time. You can't enjoy your food if there is smoke all around you and covering your food, because I, and a lot of other people might think it will taste bad.

Something else is asthma and allergies.

I have asthma and allergies and I know how bad it is to go to a restaurant when there is no more non-smoking tables left and then you have to sit there. Then when you get home you're coughing and sneezing.

Another thing is that smoking is bad for you. Everyone knows that, but they smoke anyway and they do not even care about what they're doing to their lungs. Having a non-smoking restaurant would help prevent some smoking.

These were all my reasons to have a non-smoking restaurant.

Summer exhibits at historical society

The Charlevoix Historical Society has three new summer exhibits open to the public at its Harsha House Museum at 103 State Street in Charlevoix.

They are:

- Resort Fashions and Photographs — On display in the textile area. Among the resort wear from the 1800s are a trousseau, woolen bathing suit, tennis dress and tuxedo. An oil painting, Golfing at the Inn, by I.A. Turner, 1905, is alongside photos of old hotels of Charlevoix.
- Howe Sewing Machine — This machine from the 1860s was owned by Sarah Thompson Smith, niece of Charlevoix pioneer Medad Thompson. It is shown with a collection of antique threads on wooden spools.
- The James William (Bill) Ochs Camera Collection — This collection can be viewed in the newly renovated exhibit area. Several of Ochs' photographs will be included in the new Bob Miles' Charlevoix II, scheduled for publication this summer.

These three new exhibits accompany the permanent displays of furniture and paintings which are in the two parlors and the dining room of the restored home, known as Harsha House. Exhibits of the fishing industry from the 1860s, Grey Reef Lens, Ernest Hemingway's marriage license and a photo history of Charlevoix's six bridges will continue to be displayed through the summer.

Summer hours at the museum are from 1-4 p.m., Monday through Saturday. Call 547-0373 for more information.

What is in these names?

Why is that ?

Q: Why is it called the Venetian Festival?

A: According to the Venetian Festival President Dan Barron, it is called Venetian Festival because when it was started it had a maritime theme.

Over 70 years ago, the Venetian Festival was born from a yacht race between the summer resorts Belvedere Club and Chicago Club, that was capped off with a boat parade in Round Lake. Each boat in this parade was lit up with Japanese candles, a tradition which survives to this day.

Barron said, back in the festival's early days, all of the events centered around the water. There were diving contests, swimming contests and canoe races.

In just the last 10 years, the festival has grown to include a firework's display and musical entertainment, he said.

Q: Why is it called Nine Mile Point?

A: We could not find a definitive answer for this question. Nine Mile Point is not 9 miles from either Charlevoix or Petoskey and we could not find any historical documents explaining the names.

However, we put this question to our readers.

One reader responded to this questions by suggesting we walk the shoreline from either Charlevoix or Petoskey. He did not know which city was 9 miles from the site by the shoreline.

If you would like to submit a question to this column, please contact the Charlevoix Courier at (231) 547-6558; or write P.O. Box 117, Charlevoix, MI 49720; fax (231) 547-4992; e-mail charlevoixcourier@charlevoixcourier.com; or just stop in our office at 112 Mason Street.

Club to have Summerfest for Venetian

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Prizes, golf, fishing, a clown, carriage rides and tennis are just a handful of the events that are part of Summerfest, a new benefit festival making its debut at 3 p.m., June 30 at the Charlevoix Country Club.

Those participating in Summerfest events, while enjoying Charlevoix's trademark fabulous scenery and summer weather, will be contributing to another Charlevoix favorite, the Venetian Festival.

Summerfest was designed by the Charlevoix Country Club's Social Committee to recognize the generosity of club members who donate to the annual Venetian Festival and to raise even more money ensuring 2002 Venetian fireworks live up to the spectacular display legacy of past festivals.

President of Charlevoix Venetian Festival Inc., Dan Barron, said, "From the standpoint of individuals and businesses owned, the country club contributes a significant amount. Summerfest is aimed at appreciation, recognition and support of Venetian and we are really grateful."

Proceeds from 10 sponsors supporting various events will go to the Venetian Fireworks Fund as will donations made at stations in and around Summerfest.

Summerfest co-chair Dean Davenport, who has been planning this afternoon event since November, said, "Now, with the fireworks expanded to two nights and the continually increasing costs, we want to make a statement to the community that the club and its members will continue to support the popular week-long Charlevoix homecoming celebration."

Davenport offered this tip to Summerfest goers: While moving from sporting events to entertaining presentations, remember to gather your participation tickets. The tickets will be combined and winners will be drawn for fabulous prizes.

Some of the many prizes include: Gift certificates to 10 of the area's top dining establishments, golf for four at 12 area courses, candles, floral arrangements and assorted youth prizes.

After gathering your prizes, catching your fill of fish in the pond and facing off against country club golf pro Steve Good, a full barbecue will be served on site equipped with America's outdoor favorites, hot dogs and hamburgers.

The entrance fee for the day is $25 for couples, $15 for single adults and $10 for children under 16.

Davenport said initial response for Summerfest has been terrific and those interested in attending should call the club at (231) 547-9796 for ticket reservations and additional ticket information.

Local resident creates his own lighthouse

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Ed and Cindy Whitley's custom lighthouse is a testament to the couple's love for Charlevoix.

From its steel legs, to its intricate details, the Whitleys' hand crafted, steel, functional lawn statue replicates the Charlevoix lighthouse that sits at the end of the north Lake Michigan pier.

Ed worked on his lighthouse over the course of one-and-a-half years and now, the miniature point of navigation proudly sits on the northeast corner in the Whitley's backyard.

His inspiration to construct the reproduction came in 1988 when the Lake Michigan piers were re-engineered. At that time, the lighthouse that currently stands at the end of the north pier, was scheduled to be removed and replaced with a post equipped with a light and horn.

Ed, a Charlevoix native and electric superintendent for the city of Charlevoix since 1979, asked the contractor what was going to happen with the lighthouse.

The contractor replied, "Do you want it?"

Ed said, "sure," and the contractor told him to show up the next day to load it up. So he made arrangements with a friend to have a truck at the site that next day and told his wife, Cindy, he may be "bringing home more than the bacon" that night.

The two, who will be married for 25 years this September, made plans to put the local landmark in a field close to their home on Lake Charlevoix's magnificent shoreline. Ed said he hoped passersby on M-66 could still enjoy it.

"I didn't want to see it get destroyed," he said.

But word travels fast in this small town — Charlevoix residents quickly found out plans for the renovated pier didn't include the lighthouse. Community members raised quite a ruckus with retired Department of Natural Resources officer Myrl Keller and demanded the lighthouse be put back at the end of the pier.

With Keller's help, the request was granted, the city finished refurbishing the pier and even added a coat of paint and some needed repairs to the lighthouse.

Ed said even though he lost his chance to be its owner, he was happy to see the lighthouse back where it belonged. Then, about two years ago, he decided if he couldn't have the lighthouse, he would make one just like it, only smaller.

He called the Charlevoix Coast Guard for lighthouse construction information, but the local crew didn't have what he was looking for. So he tried the Coast Guard in Sault Ste. Marie and found a one page lighthouse blueprint.

After reviewing the blueprint, Ed decided to make his Charlevoix lighthouse replica using the scale, 2 inches for every 1 foot.

And now that he's done, the size is the only difference. His lighthouse proudly stands six feet tall as compared to the 36 feet the pier lighthouse reaches.

The Whitley lighthouse is also currently lacking a fog horn, but it's on the way.

Neis honored for 50 years of church service

On the afternoon of June 16, over 300 people gathered together at St. Mary's Parish in Charlevoix to give thanks and praise for 50 years of priestly life for Fr. Thomas Neis.

Family and friends traveled from as far as California, Georgia and Arkansas to join in celebrating the dedication and service that Neis has had to God and to His people for the last 50 years.

Neis was ordained at St. Andrews Cathedral in Grand Rapids on June 7, 1952 by Bishop Francis J. Haas. His first assignment was as an associate pastor at St. Patricks in Portland.

He went on to serve as an associate pastor at St. John Vianney in Grand Rapids (1952), Sts. Peter and Paul in Grand Rapids (1954), St. Andrews Cathedral in Grand Rapids (1956) and St. Josephs Parish in Muskegon (1957).

In 1964, Neis was assigned as Pastor of Sacred Heart Parish in Victory Township.

From there, he served as Pastor of St. Marys in Manistee (1970), St. Marys in Grayling (1972), St. Francis of Assisi in Traverse City (1980), St. Matthews in Boyne City and St. Augustines in Boyne Falls (1989), and finally as pastor of St. Marys Parish in Charlevoix (1993).

Neis also served as principal of Muskegon Catholic Central High School and Manistee Catholic Central Junior and Senior High School and as Superintendent of Schools for the Diocese of Gaylord.

A Mass of Thanksgiving began the day of celebration at 4 p.m. Over 40 priests from the Diocese of Gaylord, Grand Rapids and the Archdiocese of Detroit joined Neis for this very special liturgy.

Bishop Patrick Cooney also attended the Liturgy.

Fr. Dale Magoon from St. Anthonys in Mancelona was the homilist for the Liturgy. The readings, the music and the homily all focused on the topic of servanthood and ministry, in that the call to the priesthood is a call to a life of serving one another and God.

Magoon pointed out in his homily, Neis has fulfilled this role of the priesthood in a most excellent manner.

The Mass was concluded by Neis offering thanks and praise for his vocation to the priesthood. He discussed how fortunate he was to be called by God to this vocation for his life, saying that it was the best life possible for him.

He especially thanked his family who had come from such a long distance to be with him this day and who have always included him as part of their family.

At the conclusion of the Liturgy, the guests proceeded to the family center for a time of hospitality and dinner.

The day concluded with a program, where members of Neis' family and friends shared some comments and reflections about him and their experiences with him.

Finally, Neis was presented a gift from the parish, which included a Papal Blessing from the Holy Father honoring his 50 years of service to the priesthood.

AAA predicts increase in tourism for summer

An estimated 1.8 million Michiganians will travel during the Independence Day holiday, according to a recent AAA survey of 400 state residents.

Based on the available data, the auto club predicts the state will remain on track for a projected 3 percent increase in tourism volumes and spending for the summer.

Lower gas prices may help fuel increased summer travel. As of June 17, motorists paid $1.47 for a gallon of self-serve, regular unleaded gas — about 22 cents less than last year.

Nearly nine in 10 of those surveyed in May said changing gas prices would not affect their summer travel plans. Of those not traveling this July 4, only 9 percent cited the economy as the major factor, while 6 percent cited safety concerns.

During the Memorial Day travel period, 14 percent cited the economy and 4 percent cited safety as the reason for not traveling.

Among those planning a trip this July 4, 89 percent will go more than 100 miles from home and 44 percent will travel outside of Michigan. The average July 4 vacation will be seven to eight days and the average size of the group traveling will be three to four people.

The majority, 79 percent, will travel by car, truck or van, while 10 percent will travel by air; 7 percent will travel by recreational vehicle or motor home and 3 percent by bus.

Based on requests received for AAA TourBook guides, TripTik routines and maps, the top five summer destinations in Michigan are:

1) Mackinac Island
2) Traverse City
3) Ludington
4) Sault Ste. Marie
5) Grand Rapids

Tourism in Michigan is a $10 billion a year industry and the state remains one of the best travel values.

This year, AAA said, a family of four, traveling in Michigan, will spend an average of $108 per day for meals and $113 for lodging ($221 total). That's $17 a day less than the national average.

This year, the official 102 hour Independence Day holiday period begins at 6 p.m., July 3 and ends at 11:59 p.m. July 7.

During last year's 30-hour July 4 holiday period, 10 people died in 10 fatal crashes on roads across the state. That's a decrease from the 102-hour holiday in 2000, when 22 people died in 15 fatal crashes. Four of last year's fatal crashes were alcohol related.

Of the five occupants killed, four did not wear their safety belts.

During the Independence Day weekend, AAA Michigan will partner with the Michigan State Police in supporting Operation CARE.

Operation CARE stands for "Combined Accident Reduction Effort." Bright yellow banners will be posted at 27 rest areas statewide, with most sites offering complimentary coffee and refreshments.

The Auto Club advises motorists to plan ahead and allow extra time to navigate construction areas on the state's highways.

For traffic and detour information, motorists can call 1-800-AAA-MICH. Or, before leaving, check AAA Michigan Web site, www.aaamich.com, for updated traffic information.

For travel information, call Travel Michigan, the state tourism office at 1-888-78-GREAT, or visit on the Web at www.michigan.org.

Starkel wins Hospice raffle

It was a lucky day for Troy and Walloon Lake resident Ginny Starkel on June 7, as that's the day the winning raffle ticket, drawn at the Hospice of Northwest Michigan — formerly the Charlevoix County Hospice, Inc. — Auction/Benefit, had her name on it.

She is planning to take the 1973 VW Beetle, donated by Mark and Susan Grimme, to Florida. The auction, and this year's raffle at Boyne Mountain Convention Center, was given to help support the terminally ill and their families on their final journey in life.

The second prize, a $100 savings bond, went to Robert and Joanne Crandall.

Hospice of Northwest Michigan is in partnership with the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, which is the certified agency providing the clinical component of the hospice program.

It includes nursing, social work, home health aides, chaplain and therapies.

Hospice of Northwest Michigan provides the volunteer, bereavement and fund-raising component.

Forever Plaid comes back for July shows

By popular demand, Forever Plaid returns to Bay View and Petoskey venues.

After a sold-out run during the summer of 2001, a cooperative effort between Crooked Tree Arts Center, PEP Productions and Bay View Association has brought back this upbeat show for sixteen performances.

Forever Plaid delivers 90 minutes of fast-paced musical comedy with 29 popular songs of the 50s and 60s, performed by four male harmony singers. Audiences of all ages cheer for such favorites as "Three Coins in the Fountain," "Love is a Many Splendored Thing," "Cry," and a reenactment of the entire "Ed Sullivan Show" in 3 minutes and 11 seconds.

Forever Plaid originally opened in New York on May 20, 1990, to rave reviews from critics. This hit 50s musical is the story of four unlikely heroes whose dreams of fame and glory finally come true.

The cast of this year's production includes East Grand Rapids native Ned Connors returning to the role of Jinx. Connors with a number of credits, both in opera and classical singing, is a voice major at Lawrence University with Bay View tenor Rico Serbo. He has sung with the Michigan Bach Collegium and has distinguished himself as a soloist with the Grand Rapids Choir of Men and Boys. Ned has appeared in the Opera Grand Rapids productions of Faust, Tales of Hoffman, Don Giovanni, La Traviata and as Jaffet in their production of Benjamin Brittens Noahs Flood.

Petoskey native, Brendan Marshall-Rashid brings another years experience to the character of Sparky. His Bay View credits include Jack in the comedy Charlies Aunt and Antonio the drunken gardener in the Mozart opera The Marriage of Figaro.

Brendan will be a junior at Lawrence University in the fall, where again he has already distinguished himself as the Pish-Tush in The Mikado, Postman in The Most Happy Fella and the Lover in Machinal.

Another Grand Rapids resident, Adam Mellema, is a recent graduate of Calvin College.

He attended The Goodman Theatre School at DePaul University in Chicago and brings to the character Francis a new twist. His roles have included Charlie Brown in You're a Good Man Charlie Brown, the Prince in Cinderella, the Streetmonger in Three Penny Opera and recently closed Full Circle, the Fiftieth Celebration of Community Circle Theatre.

Kansas native, and newcomer, Gabe Lewis-O'Connor plays the bumbling Smudge.

He also attends Lawrence University in Appleton, Wisconsin with fellow cast members, Sparky and Jinx, where he is also a voice major. Recent roles include The Mikado in Gilbert and Sullivan's The Mikado, Keniki in Grease, Rosencrantz in Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead and the Prince in The Unsinkable Molly Brown.

Tickets are on sale now. The first four performances will be held at Bay View Association in Evelyn Hall.

Evening dates are at 8 p.m., July 2, 4, 9.

A Sunday matinee is scheduled at 2 p.m. for July 7. The box office at Bay View can be reached at 348-9551.

The Ross Stoakes Theatre in the Crooked Tree Arts Center will offer 12 performances.

Evening performances are July 16, 18, 19, 20, 30, 31 and Aug. 1, 2 and 3, all with an 8 p.m. curtain. Matinees are offered at 2 p.m. on July 17, July 21 and Aug. 4 . Tickets may be purchased at the Arts Center or by calling the Arts Center at (231) 347-4337.

Tickets may also be purchased online at www.crookedtree.org.

JUN 2002

Junior Achievement raising funds

Junior Achievement has begun its annual fund-raising effort to provide business and economics programs for Charlevoix schools in the 2002-2003 school year.

Junior Achievement, which closely parallels the social studies curriculum in Charlevoix, educates and inspires young people to value free enterprise, business and economics to improve the quality of their lives.

Last year, Junior Achievement volunteer professional and business consultants taught eight fifth and sixth grade classes and this year the organization has been asked to expand classes to seventh grade.

Fifth-graders study "Our Nation" which examines how businesses operate in the United States and they explore various economic issues that impact those businesses.

Sixth-graders study "Our World" which focuses on imports and exports, the role of foreign exchange and how countries are interdependent.

Seventh-graders will look at "The International Marketplace" which explains how people and cultures throughout the world are connected through trade.

Since unpaid volunteers teach the classes, funds raised are used to cover the cost of classroom materials. Each fifth and sixth grade class costs $321 and seventh grade costs $535 per class for a total fund-raising objective this year of $5000.

The addition of seventh grade classes also results in the need for up to five additional volunteer Junior Achievement consultants.

"We have had wonderful support and very positive feedback from the teachers and principals at Charlevoix Elementary and Middle Schools," said Mike Ogden of the Northern Service Office for Junior Achievement Michigan Great Lakes, Inc. "We are a non-profit organization serving the schools, businesses and the community. Support from businesses, foundations and individuals in Charlevoix has been excellent because these people understand the tremendous need for a well-educated workforce and really appreciate the value in their investments."

Charlevoix Junior Achievement Advisory Board members will be contacting past and potential future donors over the next couple of weeks. If you wish to contribute as a donor or become a volunteer JA consultant, Mike Ogden can be reached at 582-4660.

Committee did not violate Open Meetings Act

COUNTY

cause the commissioners did just "listen" to Jarema — according to evidence — they did not violate the act.

The letter states, "Indeed, at a subsequent meeting of the entire Board of Commissioners, Commissioner Smith again raised the issue of (John) Jarema's employment, but did not indicate that any recommendation had been made by the Personnel/Internal Government Committee, nor does it appear that any action or decision was made on the question of whether to retain Jarema as civil counsel."

However, Ianni says the committee members did create the impression that the meeting was "secret."

He states in his letter, "Moreover, the perception of openness is often as important as actually conducting business in an open fashion. By suggesting to the deputy clerk that she leave the meeting, the committee members created the impression that secret business was being conducted. Such conduct could lead to the conclusion that the act was violated."

He added, if litigation were to result from this meeting, the presence of the deputy clerk could have helped the commissioners in their arguments that they acted properly.

As for the question whether the Personnel Committee even is a public body and must post its meetings, Ianni said it is.

"The fact that a committee may review an issue and determine to table or not recommend it to the full public body constitutes a decision that requires compliance with the Open Meetings Act," Ianni states in his letter.

The letter further commended Charlevoix Prosecuting Attorney Mary Beth Kur for her "vigilance in ensuring that the provisions of the Open Meetings Act are strictly adhered to."

County Commission Chair Phil Johnson said this whole situation has really taught a valuable lesson about what public bodies can and can't do.

He added he feels the commissioners were "vindicated" in that they always believed they did nothing wrong. But, he stressed, there will never be a meeting like this in the county again.

Johnson said every meeting will be posted and have a representative from the clerk's office present to take minutes.

Kur said she is happy this will be behind the county now, but said she would be disappointed if commissioners thought they were "vindicated."

Price said he was glad this is over.

"I'm glad the decision came in and we can put this behind us," he said.

The decision given in this letter is open, meaning the attorney general's office can relook into the matter if more evidence is presented.

Meeting investigation finds few positives

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

A copy of the investigation report of an alleged Open Meetings Act violation by some Charlevoix County Commissioners reveals a tale that is not very positive for Charlevoix's government officials.

In a nutshell, the report shows: the commissioners did not follow county personnel procedure, commissioners were not sure why a special meeting was even called, two commissioners believe a deputy clerk was "forced" from the meeting, a commissioner called a deputy clerk looking for a "scapegoat," there are allegations of harassment, commissioners believe they did not violate the law and this is not the first time the commission's Personnel Committee had an unposted meeting.

The investigation was conducted by Kevin Day of the Michigan State Police, upon the request of the Michigan State Attorney General's Office. It centers around a special Charlevoix County Commission Personnel Committee meeting March 6.

The meeting was not posted and a representative of the Charlevoix County Clerk's office that was sent to take minutes, was asked to leave. At this meeting Commissioners Jim Behling, Carl Price and Don Smith met with John Jarema, who had been recently fired from his position as chief assistant prosecuting attorney by county prosecutor Mary Beth Kur.

Kur discovered the meeting and reported it to the Attorney General's Office as a violation of the state Open Meetings Act.

A letter from the Attorney General's office indicated it was not a violation because there was no evidence that commissioners did anything but listen. However, the Attorney General's office said the commission came "dangerously close" to violating the act.

In addition to coming close to violating the act, the investigation in the meeting showed the commissioners at that meeting did not follow the county's personnel policy.

According to the policy, an employee must submit in writing to the Personnel Committee their complaint and then that is discussed with the department head and then, if necessary, a meeting is given to resolve the problem. This was not done in the Jarema case.

When Behling, who is chair of the committee, was asked about this, he said he did not use the policy and "as chairman of the board of personnel, that he probably should take responsibility for that."

Furthermore, the investigation reported showed commissioners were not even sure why they were having the meeting with Jarema — which was a special meeting called a day before their regularly scheduled meeting.

In previous interviews on the matter, Smith said they had to have a special meeting with Jarema because Jarema had a conflict during their regular meeting the next day.

However, the report did not show Jarema had a conflict as Smith said. In fact, when asked by the Michigan State Police investigator why the committee had a special meeting with him, the report stated, "He (Jarema) had no information for me regarding why this meeting had been called as a special meeting, rather than a posted personnel meeting on the first Thursday of the month."

The report even showed Price questioned why they were having a meeting with Jarema, when he was informed of it on March 5.

When Behling was asked about it, "he stated that typically these types of meetings and grievances take longer than is normally allotted in a regular Personnel Committee. He felt that the situation warranted a different meeting because of the time length it would take to discuss the matter."

The report also looked into allegations that Deputy Assistant Clerk Cecelia Borths was asked by Smith to leave the meeting. The report shows both Price and Behling think Borths had no choice but to leave, due to Smith.

According to the report, when Borths arrived at the meeting, Smith asked why she was there and said the committee could be more "open and frank" if she left. While Price and Behling said they did not have a problem with her staying, Smith repeated his desire for Borths to leave.

The report states, "She (Borths) stated that although he did not say, 'You have to leave,' that she felt by the tone of voice and the way it was put to her that she was being excused from the meeting."

Price added he felt Borths was being ordered to leave the meeting by Smith.

In response, Smith said, "Looking back on the suggestion to ask the Deputy County Clerk to leave, that that was a mistake on his (Smith's) part."

This was not the only time, though, when Smith spoke with Borths about the meeting.

According to the report, Smith called Borths at her home on March 8. Borths told the investigator Smith was questioning her about the meeting and said he was trying to "weasel out of this mess."

Smith denied saying he was trying to "weasel out," but did say he was "looking for a scapegoat."

Borths was also contacted by attorney Pete Patterson, who was representing the commissioners on this matter until they voted not to retain his services in April.

The report says, "She felt she had been harassed or intimidated by this attorney. She felt uncomfortable talking with him. Further, it was her understanding that the commissioners had requested that she have to speak with him regarding the events that occurred on March 6, 2002, or be declared a hostile witness."

Borths was not the only deputy clerk who the commissioners wanted to speak with Patterson.

Chief Assistant Deputy Clerk Cherie Browe told the investigator that she was told by Behling that "they need to speak with Pete (Patterson) because this was going to litigation."

"She stated that (Behling) told her that by talking to (Patterson) she could have a chance to think about her answers ahead of time," the report stated.

Browe told the investigator that she advised Behling "she did not have to think about her answers as she would say whatever she recalled and would not lie for anyone."

Also according to the investigation report, the March 6 meeting was not the first time this committee had met in an unposted setting. On March 17, 1997, members of the Personnel Committee met at Robert's Restaurant in Boyne City.

School comes to settlement with residents' group

SEWER

June 24 at Charlevoix Public Schools administrative office on Clinton Street in Charlevoix.

The contract will be complete pending approval by Charlevoix City Council. A meeting in this matter has not been scheduled.

School officials expect a special city council meeting to be called this week.

Action taken by the board does two things: settles pending litigation and alters sewer project contracts.

The settlement dismisses the school and the city of Charlevoix from three cases. One of the cases was pending in the Michigan Court of Appeals and was first brought against the district in October of 2000, by five private Charlevoix residents.

The second case, was the contested permit case brought against the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality by the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association. And the third case was also brought against the city by the environmental group and was an offshoot of the contested permit.

Because the sewer will be privately owned, the city will surrender the permit in question in the second case.

The change in the construction contract followed the June 7 ruling by Charlevoix County Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas prohibiting the district from using funds from a $18.8 million bond passed by voters in October 2000 to pay for infrastructure it would not own.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Sturock said, "We will use bond proceeds for this, but now it's different; we own the asset. We did exactly what Judge Pajtas said."

The new plan also addresses growth concerns voiced by those who brought the lawsuits against the district and most recently, against the city. They claim the sewer was grossly oversized to serve private development and that tax dollars shouldn't be used to fund private enterprise.

The new agreement reduces the line's size from 18 inches to 8 inches.

The plan also eliminates the last 1,000 feet of 8 inch line from the design. This area will only have a 4 inch force main. The additional 8 inch line was previously going to be run with a parallel 4 inch force main, which would be used if problems arose.

Not only does the overall line size reduction and elimination of the 8 inch line for 1,000 feet address growth concerns, but it also saves the district dollars.

In fact, Telgenhof said financially, the new sewer plan saves the district an estimated $140,000.

Under the old plan, whereby the school paid for the city owned extension, the project cost was $550,000. Now, the board estimated the school's cost to be $400,000 or less.

In a memo drafted by Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner to Mayor Alvin Russell and city council members, he described the sewer "solution" and informed them that the city would be responsible for funding $128,000 already expended on the project. This money will pay for the Harbor Industries lift station and the sanitary sewer under the Marion Center Road/US-31 intersection.

"These projects were slated to be paid for by the school, but in reality they would have been constructed whether the school was in the picture or not, as it was just good engineering practices," he stated.

The bulk of the school's extension expenses under the new agreement will include $297,000 to be paid to Grawn based Corvette Construction, plus accompanying engineering costs to be paid to John Adams and Associates of Ypsilanti and privilege fees to be paid to the city, both of which have not been determined.

Sturock said the estimated $140,000 left over will be returned to the bond and be used for the building project.

However, under the former contract, the district was reimbursed some of its sewer project expenses by collecting user tap-in fees over a 20 year period.

Now, with the exception of special circumstance, no one will be permitted to tap into the line until 2010.

Special circumstances include properties where pollution or other factors posing a threat to the public health, safety and welfare are determined.

After 2010 Marion Township administrators will have the ability to control tap-ins to the line by way of zoning and master plan decisions or if there is a threat posed.

"This enables Marion Township to control growth in their own township. We never intended to promote growth. All we wanted was a sewer line to run to the school," Sturock said.

While it seems the settlement addresses the opposition's concerns, some, including Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Member Paul Richards, aren't satisfied.

"Personally I wish the settlement included a longer (tap-in) time limit. The length of the bond issue, 30 years or even 15-18 years would be better," he said.

The new Charlevoix High School will include 171 different wastewater sources that will flow into the line, including sinks, toilets, drinking fountains and showers. There will be four, 8 inch lines that will exit the building and flow through the 8 inch system to the city's treatment plant.

School administrators claim this heavy use, coupled with environmental concerns, prompted their zealous pursuit of a sewer line as opposed to on-site disposal options. Both Telgenhof and Sturock further said they are not aware of any school board members looking to gain from the project.

The school will contract with the city to maintain the line.

The settlement agreement is being sent to Pajtas to be signed.

The settlement and contract do not stop the city from constructing its own line.

The lawsuit history of the Marion Center sewer line

The following are the dates when actions were taken against the city of Charlevoix and the Charlevoix School District by Charlevoix residents and the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association, related to the school's building project:

April 20, 2000 — The first lawsuit regarding the new high school was filed against the Charlevoix Public School District by the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association (CANRPA), an environmental organization headed by Marion Township resident Robert Mossman. The suit claimed the school did not comply with the township zoning ordinance in planning to put a school in the township's agricultural zone. The group claimed to be concerned about the rural character of the Charlevoix area.

June 29, 2000 — The first lawsuit was dismissed in Charlevoix County 33rd Circuit Court by Judge Richard Pajtas.

July 31, 2000 — A second lawsuit was filed by the environmental group against the school. This suit was filed after the school refused a settlement offered by the plaintiffs. The settlement had five conditions the school would have to comply with.

The lawsuit sought to reverse the approvals made by the township board and the township planning commission and claimed the township ordinance lacked proper standards. This suit also mentioned the threat of sprawl from sewer hookups.

Aug. 21, 2000 — Pajtas granted the plaintiffs a temporary restraining order.

Aug. 29, 2000 — Pajtas denied the preliminary injunction request made by the environmental group.

Sept. 7, 2000 — The state court of appeals denied the environmental group's injunction appeal and their request for a temporary restraining order.

Oct. 12, 2000 — Third suit filed against the school district. This suit was filed on behalf of Richard Tunison, Kenneth Staley, Robert G. Mossman, Paul Richards and Joseph Seidel. These Charlevoix residents filed their claim based on co-mingling of funds — using public tax dollars generated through the bond election to fund a sewer that will serve private interests. They also claim that the bond wording did not spell out that the funds would be used to construct a sewer.

Sept. 14, 2001 — Pajtas dismissed the third lawsuit filed against the school district.

Sept. 27, 2001 — An appeal was filed with the State of Michigan Court of Appeals in Lansing on behalf of the private citizens who are part of this third lawsuit against the Charlevoix School District.
